N.B.—In the Punjab Record and the Punjab Law Reporter, the cases are known by their numbers and not by the pages where they are printed; (e.g.) 4 P. R. 1910 would mean Case No. 4, in the Punjab Record of 1910. The same explanation applies to the Punjab Law Reporter also. It has also to be remarked that the Punjab Record and the Punjab Law Reporter have been divided into two sections, Civil and Criminal.

See VENDOR AND PURCHASER—PURCHASE OF MORTGAGED PROPERTY.

(1)—“Mortgage,” meaning of the term.—The term “mortgage” in Indian law, means simple as well as usufructuary mortgage, and the one is as much the transfer of an interest in specific immoveable property as the other. SHEORATAN KUAR v. MAHIPAL KUAR, 7 A. 258, F.B. = A.W.N. 1885, 8.

(2)—Limitation Act, 1877, arts. 134, 148—Mortgagee, meaning of.—The term “Mortgagee” in the article includes an assignee of a mortgage. BHAGWAN SAHAI v. BHAGWAN DIN, 9 A. 97. [Appr., 15 M. 331.]

(3)—Mortgage, a temporary transfer, though it may result in permanent transfer.—A mortgage is a temporary transfer and the fact that it may result in a permanent transfer cannot be deemed to make it a permanent transfer. So, where a wazib-ul-arz provided that the tenant should have power to sub-let or otherwise temporarily provide by mortgage or any other like manner for the occupation and management of his land a usufructuary mortgage by the tenant for 50 years certain and thereafter till the repayment of the principal money was a temporary provision within the meaning of the clause. TARACHAND MARWARI v. JAIKISAN MADNAJI, 3 C.P.L.R. 154. [R., 15 C.P.L.R. 175, 11 C.P.L.R. 22.]

(4)—“Mortgage” and “Charge”—Transfer of Property Act, 1882.—The distinction, clearly drawn for the first time between “Mortgage” and “charge” in the Transfer of Property Act is basent in the Limitation Act. GIRWAR SINGH v. THAKUR NARAIN SINGH, 14 C. 730, F.B.

(5)—Charge and simple mortgage, distinction between.—A charge differs from a mortgage not only in form, but also in substance. A plea of purchase for value without notice, for instance, although it may be perfectly good against a charge, will be wholly unavailing against a mortgage. KISHAN LAL v. GANGA RAM, 13 A. 28 = A.W.N. 1890, 216. [R., 33 C. 985 = 4 C.L.J. 219, 11 C.W.N. 1005, P.C. = 17 M.L.J. 444 = 4 A.L.J. 625 = 6 C.L.J. 379 = 2 M.L.T. 333 = 9 Bom. L.R. 1104 = 30 M. 426, 35 C. 837 = 7 C.L.J. 492 = 12 C.W.N. 849.]

(6)—Purchaser at judicial sale, right of mortgagee without possession as against private purchaser and purchaser at Court-sale, distinction between.—Possession or registration is necessary to validate a mortgage in the Deccan or elsewhere in the Presidency of Bombay, except Gujarat, against a private purchaser for valuable consideration without notice. In the case of a judicial sale, however, the purchaser at such a sale takes only that which the judgment-debtor could honestly dispose of, and so, a mortgage without possession which would be binding on the mortgagor himself would also be binding on the purchaser in execution of a decree obtained against the mortgagor. BAPUJI BALAL v. SATYABHAMABAI, 6 B. 490. [F., 6 B. 495, 62 P. R. 1908=7 P.W.R. 1908; R., 13 A. 28=A.W.N. 1890, 216, 27 B. 452.]

(7)—Document—Interpretation—‘Muakhiza,’ meaning of—Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), ss. 58, 100.—In order that there may be a simple mortgage, there must be: (a) a transfer of an interest in specific immoveable property; (b) a personal undertaking by the mortgagor to pay the mortgage money; and, (c) an agreement, express or implied, that, in the event of the mortgagor failing to pay according to his contract, the mortgagee shall have a right to cause the mortgaged property to be sold. Where, therefore, a deed opened with a recital that the executant had borrowed a sum of money followed by a promise to pay the amount with interest at 2 per cent. per month within a certain time, and then provided: “muakhaza asl o sud ta yomul-wasul upar (description of the share) haqiyat min muqir...qaim rahega...lihaza...batarik tamasuk muakhaz-ai-jaidad ka likhadya.” Held that they did not create a mortgage. The word muakhiza was not a word commonly employed to denote a simple mortgage, the root meaning of the word being ‘taking’ and the word being generally used in the sense of taking satisfaction or calling to account. DALIP SINGH v. BAHADUR RAM, 9 A.L.J. 550=34 A. 446=15 Ind. Cas. 435.

(8)—Essentials of.—In order to constitute a mortgage, the property, the subject of the mortgage, must belong to the mortgagor and he must transfer it to the mortgagee. The plaintiff passed an agreement to the defendant whereby he acknowledged to have received Rs. 500 stipulating that if he paid the assessment on the land for 25 years, the defendant should return to the plaintiff the land which he bought from the plaintiff some years ago: Held, that the agreement was not a mortgage, but was an agreement to sell or convey on certain conditions; and that the plaintiff could not bring a suit to redeem, but could only sue on the agreement for specific performance, if, upon the completion of the term and the fulfilment of the conditions, the defendant failed to return the land as he promised. NARAYAN v. MAHADU, 2 Bom. L. R. 21.

(8-a)—Essentials of a simple mortgage—S. 31, Limitation Act, 1908.—A covenant to pay is an essential element of a simple mortgage and it is not necessary that there should be a formal transfer of interest and an express power of sale. Where a charge is created by act of parties on specific immoveable property and it is for a debt, and there is a covenant to pay, the instrument is a mortgage within the meaning of s. 31 of the Limitation Act. RAMA BRAHMAM v. VENKATANARASU PUNTULU, 23 M.L.J. 131=M.W.N. 1912, 1124=16 Ind. Cas. 209. (30 M. 426, 9 M. 218, 10 M. 511, 21 M. 562, Cons.)

(8-b)—Bond—Mortgage—What constitutes it.—An instrument, in order to constitute a mortgage, must specify the property mortgaged. RAMNARAIN v. PURTAL, 20 P.R. 1866.

(8-c)—Mortgage—Contract to pay debt out of moveable or immoveable property—Property not specified.—A contract to pay a debt out of moveable and immoveable property without any specification of the property does not constitute a mortgage. MULLICK KURREEM BUKSH v. UMMEE, 17 P.R. 1866.

(8-d)—Mortgage with condition not to alienate—Subsequent mortgage invalid.—Plaintiff advanced money to A on a mortgage of his property with a condition not to alienate. A short time afterwards, A sold the property to the defendants. On plaintiff suing the defendants to obtain a cancellation of the deed of sale in their favour, the latter pleaded a mortgage of the same property prior in date to that of the plaintiff and with a condition against alienation. On appeal, the Commissioner reversed the decree, in favour of the defendants passed by the Assistant Commissioner, on the ground that the sale to the defendants after the mortgage to the plaintiff was one with reservation of the plaintiff's rights, in consequence of the restriction upon alienation in the plaintiff's deed of mortgage. The Chief Court, however, was of opinion that the plaintiff's deed of mortgage contained no stipulation reserving the rights of the defendant under his mortgage, and that, therefore, the position taken up by the Commissioner could not be maintained. Under the circumstances, the mortgage to the plaintiff would be invalid if the defendants' mortgage deed and covenant were established, and, the defendants being entitled to have the genuineness of the latter decided in the present suit, the Chief Court reversed the decision of the Commissioner and remanded the case for fresh decision after enquiry regarding the defendants' deed and covenant. SHUNKER DASS v. PRIBHU DYAL, 35 P. R. 1869.

(9)—Mortgage—Subject-matter, distinct definition of—Deeds relating to land, how to be described—Sub-mortgagee, suit by—Parties—Original mortgagors not necessary parties—Document—Interpolation—Interest at bond rate up to what period—Civ. Pro. Code (Act V of 1908), O. XLI, R. 20—Adding respondent—Interested in the result of appeal—Cross-objection—Limitation.—A mortgage must define its subject-matter with distinctness. Where the mortgaged property consists of deeds relating to land, they are sufficiently described by setting out the sums of money with which they are concerned, the dates of execution and the names of the persons bound by them. Although a sub-mortgagee can join the original mortgagors, when suing on his sub-mortgage, yet it is not necessary for him to do so, and his suit will not fail if he does not make the original mortgagors parties to it.

When a document with certain additions or interpolations is admitted by all the executants before the Registrar, the interpolations cannot be considered to be such as to avoid the document. A mortgagee is entitled to interest at the bond rate up to the date fixed in the decree for payment, and after that at the Court-rate. (34 C. 150, P.C., 4 A.L.J. 109, 11 C.W.N. 249, 5 C. L. J. 106, 17 M.L.J. 43, 9 Bom. L. R. 304, 2 M. L. T. 75, F.) A Court of appeal is competent to add a respondent at the hearing of an appeal under O. XLI, r. 20 of the Civ. Pro. Code, if the presence of such respondent is necessary for the purpose of properly deciding the appeal and cross-objection, provided such respondent is interested in the result of the appeal as brought and the cross-objection so far as the original appellants are concerned. (15 W. R. 26, 25 C. 565, 2 C.W.N. 42, 26 C. 109, 3 C.W. N. 76, 26 C. 114, 31 C. 64, 35 C. 538, 2 C. W. N. 720, R.) A respondent can be brought on the record even after the period of appealing against him has run out. (9 C. 355, 11 C.L.R. 430, F.; 12 C.W.N. 625, R.) Where the plaintiff wanted to make defendants Nos. 5 and 10 liable also on the bond sued upon, but the Court below made a decree against the other defendants and exonerated defendants Nos. 5 and 10, and those other defendants appealed but did not make defendants Nos. 5 and 10 parties to it, and the plaintiff filed cross-objections in due course, and at the hearing of the appeal made an application under O. XLI, r. 20, for making defendants Nos. 5 and 10 respondents on the ground that they were interested in the result of the plaintiff's cross-objection: Held, that the defendants Nos. 5 and 10 could not be added as respondents. BHONESWAR RAM v. RAM KHELAWAN SAHOO, 5 Ind. Cas. 654 = 12 C.L. J. 137.

(10)—Indistinct or vague document—Oral evidence—Indian Evidence Act, ss. 92, 95.—Where a mortgage bond does not indicate by name the property mortgaged, evidence may be adduced to prove what property was mortgaged. (Evidence Act ss. 92 and 95.) RAM LAL v. HARRISON, 2 A. 832.

(11)—Auction sale in execution of a decree of immoveable property subject to a mortgage—Remedy of the mortgagee—His inability to get the sale set aside—Sale of right, title and interest of the judgment-debtor—Security bond hypothecating property as security for integrity—Its construction—Civ. Pro. Code (Act XIV of 1882), ss. 278, 282, 283 and 311, etc.—Held, hypothecating or giving a lien on immoveable property to the extent of any amount as security for integrity is a mortgage of that property for that amount. Held, also, that where a property subject to a mortgage is sold by public auction in execution of a decree, the mortgagee, whether with or without possession and whether his incumbrance be notified in the proclamation of sale or not, can follow the mortgaged property in the hands of the auction purchaser, whether he came to know about the encumbrance or not at the time of the sale, but he (the mortgagee) has got no cause of action to get the sale set aside. Held, further, that an executing Court cannot sell what the judgment-debtor himself is unable to alienate privately. RUP CHAND v. SETH KASTUR CHAND, 7 P.W.R. 1908 = 62 P.R. 1908. (12 M.I.A. 366, 6 B. 193, 490, 22 B. 624, 29 B. 234, F.)

(12)—Contemporaneous deed—Sale and agreement to reconvey—Transaction whether mortgage—Intention—Date of repayment—Mortgage by conditional sale—Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), s. 58 (c).—On the construction of two contemporaneous documents, one of which purported to be a deed of sale, and the other provided that, on the vendor repaying the purchase-money mentioned in the deed of sale, with costs, within a fixed period, the vendee would return the land, and in case he did not do so, the vendor would deposit the money in Court, and take possession: Held—that the two documents together did not constitute a mortgage (12 A. 387, F.; 4 C.W.N. 153 = 22 A. 149, Diss.) A certain date of payment is an essential element of a mortgage by conditional sale. KINURAM MONDOL v. NITYE CHAND SIRDAR, 11 C.W.N. 400 = 6 C.L.J. 208. [F., 2 Ind. Cas. 930.]

(13)—Mortgage—Incomplete transaction.—When the part of the mortgage-money remaining unpaid by the mortgagee consisted of a sum which the mortgagor had agreed should be withheld by the mortgagee till mutation of names, and a small sum out of that promised for expenses of the deed, and the mutation of names did not take place at all.—Held, that the mortgage could not be held as incomplete for default in payment of the mortgage money. MANGLADHA v. LAL CHAND AND GHULAM, 60 P.L.R. 1908 = 26 P.W.R. 1908.

(14)—Mortgage—Bye-bil-wafa—English mortgage.—Mortgagor and mortgagee—Subsistence of relation—Payment of interest—Adverse possession—Permissive possession—Suit to recover possession—Cause of action.—The transaction of mortgage effected by a bye bil wafa was under the Regulations essentially the same in regard to the relations between the mortgagor and mortgagee as an English mortgage. [R., 12 C. 614.] Although the mortgagee has, on the occurrence of the default named in the bye-bil-wafa or the mortgage-deed, a cause of action to recover possession of the property provided it is then withheld from him adversely, he has no cause of suit of the possession of the property by the mortgagor is from that time held and continued with his permission, and so long as the relation between the mortgagor and the mortgagee created by the bye-bil-wafa can be said to be subsisting, it would probably be right to infer that the possession of the mortgaged property by the mortgagor, if it be so held, was bad with the permission of the mortgagee, unless some act was done by the mortgagor or some claim advanced by him which was inconsistent with the subsistence of that relation. It would be reasonable to infer from the payment of interest that the possession on behalf of the mortgagor was permissive. But the possession of the mortgagor ought not to be treated as adverse so long as the mortgagor asserts a title to redeem and advances no other title inconsistent with it. It must be treated at any rate as perfectly reconcilable with, and not adverse to, the title of the mortgagee and the continuance of his lien on the thing, pledged. MANKEE KOOER v. SHEIK MUNNOO, 14 B.L.R. 315=22 W.R. 543. [R., 12 C. 614, 7 Bom. L.R. 772; D., 6 C. 564=7 C.L.R. 583; F., 17 P.W.R. 1908]

(15)—Mortgage—What does not amount to.—On 25th January 1875, the respondent executed a mortgage-deed in appellant's favour, in which he agreed to give the latter possession of a village as security for the re-payment of certain moneys, and for the re-payment of the balance paid by the appellant out of the sale-proceeds of a house on account of a certain debt, it being stipulated that the appellant should sell the house under the powers of a mukhtarnama which the respondent undertook to execute. No such instrument was executed by the respondent, and such house was not sold. The appellant sued the respondent for possession of the village, according to the terms of the mortgage, alleging that he had satisfied the debt. Held that, as no part of the sale-proceeds of the house had been or could be applied to the liquidation of such a debt, the appellant was not entitled to retain the village as security for the re-payment of a balance which had not and could not be paid by him on account of such debt. KRISHNA ROW v. APA SHASTRI, A.W.N. 1881, 13.

(16)—Alienation by mortgagor—Antecedent covenant.—A transfer of mortgaged property in breach of a condition against alienation is valid, except in so far as it encroaches upon the rights of the mortgagee, and, with this reservation, such a condition does not bind the property so as to prevent the acquisition of a valid title by the alienee. POHKAR DAS v. RAM PRASAD, A.W.N. 1887, 231. (4 A. 518, R.)

(17)—Acquisition of larger interest by the mortgagor after the date of the mortgage—Mortgagee not entitled to such larger interest.—Reg. XVI of 1827, ss. 19 and 20—Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), s. 43.—A mortgagee of Deshbat Vatan knew that the property which was being made over to him in mortgage, was land appurtenant to an hereditary office and was therefore inalienable beyond the life of the incumbent under ss. 19 and 20 of Reg. XVI of 1827. Subsequent to the mortgage, the mortgagor became entitled to enlarged estate. The mortgagee claimed to hold the enlarged estate against the mortgagor. Held, that the mortgagee took merely such estate as the mortgagor was capable of conveying at the date of the mortgage. GANGABAI v. BASVANT BALLAPPA, 12 Bom. L.R. 143=34 B. 175=5 Ind. Cas. 866.

(18)—Mortgage-bond, Construction of—Promise to pay—Personal liability, intention—Balance of unsatisfied debt, application for—Properties other than mortgaged, liability of.—Where a debtor has pledged his property as security for the loan, the creditor should have a personal remedy, unless the deed makes it clear that the intention of the parties was that the remedy of the mortgagee should be restricted to the lands mortgaged. Every mortgage contains within itself, so to speak, a personal liability to repay the amount advanced; in other words, where there is in a mortgage nothing to the contrary, there is an implied promise to pay presumed in law, from the fact of the acceptance of the loan; the mortgage merely giving the mortgagee an additional security in the shape of the pledged property. (19 W. R. 281, 12 C. 389, 14 A. 513, R.; 11 I.A. 83=10 C. 740, 16 C. 540, D.) Per Mookerjee, J.—Although a mere recital of a debt may not be, by itself, and apart from the context, sufficient to imply a contract to pay and thus create a personal obligation, a provision in a mortgage-deed, that the money will be repaid on a certain day, imports a covenant for repayment on that day for the breach of which, an action would lie against the mortgagor, the judgment in which action could be satisfied out of his general property. PARBATI CHARAN ROY v. GOBINDA CHANDRA KUNDU, 4 C.L.J. 246. [F., 9 C.L.J. 5=13 C.W.N. 138=1 Ind. Cas. 442; R., 4 C.L.J. 510, 6 C.L.J. 639.]

(18-a)—Mortgage—Construction—Securing future advances upon mortgaged property—Validity of—Transfer of Property Act, s. 58.—There is no law which prevents a party from securing future payments by a charge or mortgage upon immoveable property. A mortgage deed provided: "He (mortgagee) shall enjoy the profits of the mortgaged lands in lieu of interest. I, the executant, shall continue to pay to the mortgagee every year the deficiency in the amount of interest; and in case of default of payment of the same in any year, the Mahajan shall in that year have power to recover it from a nine anna zemindari share, the proprietary title and other moveable and immoveable property." Held, that the document must be held to amount to a mortgage in respect of the deficiency in interest on the mortgage money. BHOLA DAS v. BISHNATH LAL, 10 A.L.J. 162.

(18-b)—Mortgage—Covenant to pay money within a year—Construction—Mortgagor's benefit—Right to redeem and right to foreclose, co-extensive—Effect of contract to the contrary—No time fixed for re-payment—Effect.—Where the parties to a mortgage covenant that the mortgagor shall pay the amount of principal and interest within the term of one year, held, that the covenant cannot be construed as providing that the mortgagor was not to pay the amount of principal and interest before the expiry of one year, and that the clause was inserted for the benefit of the mortgagor, so that he might be at liberty to pay the principal with interest before the expiry of one year. (23 M. 33, Rel. on.) Unless there is an agreement to the contrary, the right of foreclosure and the right of redemption must be deemed co-extensive. In each particular instance, therefore, it must be determined, upon the terms of the contract between the parties, whether there is any provision in the contract which takes the contract out of the general rule. (14 S. I. M. 427, 8 A. 95, D.; 5 B. 22, 7 M.I.A. 323, 16 M. 486, 29 A. 47, 20 B. 677, R.) Where no time is fixed in a mortgage-deed for the repayment of the mortgage amount, the position is that the mortgagor can claim redemption whenever he pleased. PURNA CHANDRA SARMA v. PEARY MOHAN PAL DAS, 39 C. 828 = 15 Ind. Cas. 287 = 17 C.W.N. 149. (1892) 1 Ch. 385, 34 L.J. Ch. 13, R.)

(19)—Document — Interpretation of — Sale subject to agreement executed on the same day — Reserving right to vendor to repurchase — Documents to be read together — Mortgage.—Where a document purporting to be an out and out sale is made "subject to the terms of the deed of agreement executed by the vendee" on the same day, and the latter document promises to reconvey the property to the vendor or his representatives upon payment of the purchase money within a certain time, held that the two deeds must be read together as constituting a mortgage by way of conditional sale. WAJID ALI KHAN v. SHAFKAT HUSSAIN, 7 A.L.J. 998 = 7 Ind. Cas. 911. (12 A. 387, D.)

(20)—Construction of mortgage deed — Deed partly of the nature of a usufructuary and partly of a simple mortgage — Right to bring the property to sale — Presumption of English Law as to satisfaction of mortgage debt, whether applicable in British India — Attachment of mortgaged property in execution of money decree — Right to sue for sale in satisfaction of this claim and of any claim under the mortgage — Transfer of Property Act, ss. 99 and 67.—The intention of the parties is to be looked to in construing mortgage-deeds, and where a deed is partly of the nature of a usufructuary and partly of a simple mortgage, the mortgagee is entitled to bring the mortgaged property to sale under the conditions set out in the deed. (21 A. 4, F.; 28 A. 157, 10 Bom. L.R. 126, R.) Words of hypothecation have always been understood to import the right of the mortgagee to bring the property to sale for the satisfaction of the claim (12 C.P.L.R. 26, R.) It is only a usufructuary mortgage "as such" that is debarred from suing for sale by s. 67 of the Transfer of Property Act. Where there were a distinct hypothecation of property and also a distinct personal covenant to pay the mortgage-debt, though the mortgage itself was described as one with possession, held, the mortgage would be entitled to bring the property to sale in satisfaction of the debt for which it was hypothecated. The presumption of English law that, over twenty years having elapsed since the execution of the mortgage-deed, it should be deemed to have been satisfied, does not apply to mortgages in British India. A mortgagee, who attaches the mortgaged property in execution of a money decree against the mortgagor, but is precluded by s. 99 of the Transfer of Property Act from bringing it to sale save by a suit under s. 67 of the Act, can sue for sale of the property in satisfaction of such claim, as well as of any claim under the mortgage, in respect of which he has a right to sue for sale. FIDA ALI v. ISMAILJI, 6 N.L.R. 20 = 5 Ind. Cas. 701. (10 C.P.L.R. 21, 29 M. 424, F.; 16 A. 415, 17 A. 520, Not F.)

(21)—Mortgage-deed — Construction — Presumption — Interest — Prior mortgagee, right of.—Under ordinary rules of construction, every man's grant should be construed strongly against him. Where an absolute owner mortgages his property, he shall be presumed to have mortgaged his absolute right in the property, and not only a subordinate interest therein, unless there be an express indication to the contrary. A prior mortgagee purchasing the mortgaged property from the mortgagor is entitled to interest on the amount of the mortgage up till the date of sale, and not up till the date when he subsequently obtains possession of the property. CHIRANJEE LAL v. BHAGWAN SINGH, 8 Ind. Cas. 826.

(22)—Mortgage bond — Construction — Personal decree, suit for — Mortgaged properties, if must be first proceeded against.—Held, on the construction of the mortgage bond in this case, that it contained an express promise to pay the amount secured, so that the mortgagee was entitled to sue for a personal decree only. Held further—That a stipulation that "if the debt be not paid off by the hypothecated properties," the mortgagee "will be able to realise the money" by sale of the mortgagor's other moveable and immoveable properties, did not imply that the parties agreed to postpone the remedy against the person and other properties to that against the mortgaged properties. BENOY KRISHNA DEB v. DEBENDRA KISHORE NANDY, 15 C.W.N. 722 = 9 Ind. Cas. 660.

(23)—Mortgagee in possession prior to confiscation of Oudh estate — Dispossession on re-settlement with talukdar — Claim to sub-settlement.—Where, at the date of Lord Canning's confiscation proclamation of 1858, an estate in Oudh was in the plaintiff's possession as mortgagee "with birt zemindari rights" under a conditional deed of sale and was subsequently, the plaintiff being dispossessed, re-settled with the defendant as Talukdar, it was held, in a suit by the plaintiff in 1870 for possession as mortgagee, that the mortgage created only a subordinate zemindari interest and that the plaintiff's claim to a sub-settlement was valid.

Quære - (a) Whether the sub-settlement might not be supported even if the interest created by the mortgage was not strictly sub-proprietary? (b) Whether, under U P. Act XX of 1866, the defendant, as Talukdar, was entitled to malikana? GOURI SHUNKER v. THE MAHARAJA OF BULRAMPORE, 4 C. 839, P.C. = 6 I.A. 1 = 3 Sar. 873. [R., 13 A. 108.]

(23-a)—Damages—Breach of contract—Mortgagee failing to discharge prior incumbrances with money left in his hands, effect of—Set-off—Court-fee.—Where a mortgagor, at the time of the execution of the mortgage, left money in the hands of the mortgagee to pay off a prior incumbrance, which the mortgagee did not pay off, the mortgagor is entitled in law to recover from the mortgagee the damages resulting from his failure. A plea of set off is quite distinct from the plea of payment and should not be entertained until Court-fee with respect to it has been paid by the defendant in the Court of first instance, nor should it be entertained if the claim is not within the jurisdiction of the Code. MUHAMMAD RAZA v. KUBRA BIBI, 15 Ind. Cas. 526.

(24)—Payment by third person of money due under mortgage-bond—Intention to keep mortgage alive—Priority—Mortgage-bond, document whether—Court-fee—Appeal.—Where the money due under a mortgage-deed was paid by the money of a third person, the mere fact that the latter had paid off the mortgage-money would not, by itself, entitle him to the benefit of the bond as security for the payment. It must be shown that there was an agreement between the parties, when the payment was made, that the mortgage should be kept alive for him. The demand of a creditor, which is paid with the money of a third person and without any agreement that the security shall be assigned or kept on foot for the benefit of such third person, is absolutely extinguished by the payment; whether a mortgage paid off has been kept alive or extinguished depends on the intention of the parties; the mere fact that it has been paid off is not sufficient to show whether or not it has been extinguished; express declaration of intention will cause either the one result or the other, and in the absence of such expression, the intention may be inferred either one way or the other; and the ordinary rule is that a man having a right to act in either of two ways, shall be assumed to have acted according to his interest. An unsecured creditor of a mortgagor, who finds himself obliged for the protection of his own interest to pay off the mortgage-debt, is entitled to have an assignment of the security. Held, upon the facts and circumstances of the case, that they raised a strong presumption that, in the present case, there was the intention to keep the mortgage alive, when the payment was made by the plaintiffs. That the assignment of the bond in favour of the plaintiffs, who had paid off the mortgage, gave to them all the rights as first mortgagees, although the assignment was made after the date of payment. A agreed to pay loans up to a certain sum, which might be paid to him by B, and admitted that if he failed to do so, B would be entitled to recover the debt by sale of a certain property of A and from his person and other properties. Further, the deed was registered as an agreement in Book I, and not as a mortgage which would have been copied in Book IV, under the Registration Rules: Held—That the deed did not create any special lien on the specific property mentioned in the deed; and the circumstance that the document was registered as an agreement in Book I, was evidence of the intention of the parties to the document to treat it as an agreement rather than as a mortgage. In execution of a mortgage-decree, a property was purchased for Rs. 2,500 by the mortgagee. Held—That for the purposes of Court-fee, Rs. 2,500 must be taken as the value of the property affected by the decree. JAGATDHAR NARAIN PRASAD v. A. M. BROWN, 10 C.W.N. 1010 = 4 C.L.J. 121 = 33 C. 1133. [R., 36 C. 193 = 5 C.L.J. 611, 11 C.W.N. 705 = 6 C.L.J. 427.]

(24-a)—Mortgagee, right of, to take possession of the property mortgaged—Possessory right unaffected by subsequent mortgage—Usufructuary mortgage, right of, to resist a suit for possession by a prior mortgagee—Accrual of right to take possession—Priority.—Certain property was first mortgaged to the defendant under a simple mortgage, the same property was then mortgaged to the plaintiff under a covenant giving him possession in certain events. The plaintiff became entitled to possession under the terms of his mortgage, but, before he could obtain actual possession, defendant took a subsequent usufructuary mortgage of the same property in lieu of the money due under his previous simple mortgage. The plaintiff now sued to recover possession under the terms of his mortgage: Held, that the mere fact that the defendant held a prior simple mortgage of the same property would not entitle him to resist the plaintiff's suit for possession; the mere execution of a subsequent usufructuary mortgage would not take away from the plaintiff his right to take possession which had already accrued to him prior to the execution of the usufructuary mortgage to the defendant. JANGU SINGH v. GANESH RAM, 14 Ind. Cas. 735.

(24-b)—Property mortgaged different from property described—Transferee of mortgaged property not bound by the mortgage—Priority.—In 1876, one B purported to hypothecate four plots of land situated in mouza Nagala. As a matter of fact, the name of Nagala was inserted in the mortgage-deed by mistake; the property was situated in mouza Arazi. The heirs of B sold their proprietary right in mouza Arazi to one K in 1910 free of all charges. In a suit

(25)—Limitation — Adverse possession — Puisse mortgagee redeeming earlier mortgage in the hands of plaintiff—Period of limitation for suit for declaration of title acquired by prescription.—As long as possession can be referred to a right consistent with the subsistence of an ownership in being at its commencement, so long must the possession be referred to that right, rather than to the right which contradicts the ownership. (11 B. 422, R.) A man cannot hold a mortgage on his own property, and where a transferee of a decree for sale obtained by a prior mortgagee of certain property takes payment from the puisne mortgagees, he ought to be deemed to have acknowledged the title of the mortgagor to the equity of redemption. In a case of a co-sharer holding mortgaged property after redemption by him of the mortgage, limitation is computable only from the date when the possession becomes adverse by the assertion of an exclusive title. JAGDIP NARAYIN SINGH v. BILAR SING, 8 A.L.J. 324=9 Ind. Cas. 572=33 A. 463.

(26)—Mortgage—Adverse possession—Sale of equity of redemption—Registration—Limitation Act (IX of 1908), art. 144—Registration Act (XVI of 1908), s. 17.—Held that, a person entering into possession of land as a mortgagee is not at liberty to set up adverse possession against the mortgagor, by merely obtaining in his favour mutation of names as owner, until he succeeds in proving actual purchase by him of the equity of redemption. Held, also that a deed of sale of immoveable property mortgaged by a registered deed is not compulsorily registrable under s. 17 of Act XVI of 1908, if sale consideration minus the mortgage-money is less than Rs. 100. LEHNA v. The equity of redemption of a part of certain land on mortgage with A was sold to B and C in 1890. In 1895 the vendor re-sold the equity of redemption to C and D, and C and D sued the mortgagee for redemption in 1908, obtained a decree and got possession of the property. The litigation with the mortgagee related to the whole property on mortgage with A, B took no part in this litigation; he was neither impleaded as a defendant nor was he called as a witness in the case. In 1909, B sued C and D for possession of the land of which he had purchased the equity of redemption in 1890: Held, (1) that the suit was not barred by time, as B had 12 years from the date when C and D obtained possession in 1908 to sue them for recovery of the property; (2) that the sale to C and D of the equity of redemption previously sold to B did not amount to adverse possession; (3) that, in this property, the vendor had no rights left to him which he could sell in 1895 to C and D; and consequently the sale of this property to them was a mere nullity in law; (4) that B was not estopped by his conduct from contesting the validity of the sale to C and D; (5) that, although B, was equitably bound to re-imburse C and D for any sum spent by them in redeeming the property for which B sued, he could not beyond this be adversely affected by the litigation between C and D and A. LALA MOHUN LAL v. BHAGU SHAH, 14 Ind. Cas. 513=252 P.W.R. 1912. (6 C.W.N. 601, D.)

(27)—Mortgage—Suit on a mortgage—Plea that the mortgage was an unreal transaction—Onus of proof—Mortgage not impugned in prior proceedings where it was in evidence—Estoppel—Madras Revenue Recovery Act (II of 1864)—Purchase by benamidar, whether can be questioned by the real purchaser.—In a suit on a mortgage, defendant pleaded that it was an unreal transaction. In a previous proceeding, where the mortgage deed was put in evidence, the defendant, who was then also impleaded as party defendant, did not adduce evidence to show that it was an unreal transaction, though he was allowed an opportunity to do so: Held, that the defendant was estopped from impugning the mortgage in the subsequent suit. Where, at a revenue sale, the property was purchased by a person benami for another: Held, that it was open to the real purchaser to set up and prove his title. SULAIMAN v. PAT-TANA BIBI, 9 Ind. (28)—Fraud—Fraudulent transfer of possession—Reversioner obtaining fraudulent possession through assignee of the widow—Sale by widow—Mortgage by vendee—Suit by mortgagee for sale of property—Reversioner cannot deny the mortgagee's right—Estoppel—Mortgagor and mortgagee.—G's widow sold certain property to G A (the father of defendants 1 and 2) in 1878. It was mortgaged by G A to D (the plaintiff's uncle) in 1892. G's widow died in 1897. After G A's death in 1901, H (defendant No. 3), slipped into possession of the property by fraudulently inducing the defendants Nos. 1 and 2 to favour his claim. In 1908, the plaintiff sued to recover his money by sale of the mortgaged property. It was contended by H, who was a reversioner of G, that it was not competent to G's widow to alienate the property beyond her life-time:—Held, (1) that H, having obtained possession of the property by colluding with defendants 1 and 2, his fraud was sufficient in law to deprive him of the right to be heard in defence to the suit that he was entitled to the property as reversionary heir of G. (2) That the defendants Nos. 1 and 2 having been in possession of the property as mortgagors of the plaintiff were bound to hold it in that capacity; and if they were threatened or obstructed by defendant No. 3, claiming as the true owner, they ought to have given him (the plaintiff) notice of threat or obstruction so as to enable him to defend his rights as mortgagee, but, instead of that, they colluded with defendant No. 3 in the fraudulent transfer of possession; that, therefore, the rule of estoppel which applied to defendants Nos. 1 and 2 applied to defendant No. 3 also. The true owner of property is entitled to retain possession even though he has obtained it from a trespasser by force or other unlawful means. This applies only where the true owner gets into possession without bringing himself within the law of estoppel. As between a mortgagor and his mortgagee neither can deny the title of the other for the purposes of the mortgage. A mortgagor cannot derogate from his grant so as to defeat his mortgagee's title, nor can the mortgagee deny the title of his mortgagor to mortgage the property. HILLAYA v. NARAYANAPPA, 13 Bom. (26 A. 82, A.W.N. 1903, 199, F.) Where a person mortgages property, which he has no right to mortgage, representing that he is authorized to make the mortgage, and subsequently the property becomes vested in him, the mortgage will operate against him under the provisions of s. 43 of the Transfer of Property Act. *SARJU PRASAD v. (31)—Mortgage of occupancy fields by tenants to landlord—Suit for foreclosure—Wrongful possession obtained by landlord—Liability of landlord to account for profits as mortgagee in possession.—Plaintiff, a mulguzar, took a mortgage of the lands of his occupancy tenants and sued for a decree for foreclosure. Two years before the suit, plaintiff had wrongfully ejected the tenants and entered into possession of the lands and defendants contended in this suit that he was bound to account to them (mortgagors) for the profits he made out of the lands after he trespassed upon them and that such profits must be set off against the mortgage-debt. Held, that the position of a mortgagee is not adverse (6 C.P.L.R. 109, 10 C.P.L.R. 55, 18 A. 329, R.) to the mortgagor and that the plaintiff, who took possession, being the mortgagee, took possession as mortgagee and the fact that he was also landlord does not make his taking possession amount to an ejectment of his tenants and that he was, therefore, bound to account to the defendants for the profits of his possession. *PRABHUDAN v. (11 Bur. L.R. 37, F.; 8 Bur. L.R. 189, 1 L.B.R. 215, 11 Bur. L.R. 253, R.) An entry in Land Records Register IX, regarding the transfer of land, is at its best nothing more than a report or note of a transaction which has already been effected; but the transaction to which it relates is not effected by such entry. The pyatpaing (outer foil of Land Records Register), not signed by the person reporting the transaction, is not admissible to prove the report (1 L.B.R. 260, R.) But, if the thugyi (person making the entry) is called and gives evidence about the oral report, he might use the pyatpaing to refresh his memory, and s. 161, Evidence Act, would apply. The document used in that way becomes evidence under s. 3, Evidence Act. MA DUN v. LU O, 5 L.B.R. 40=2 Ind. Cas. 535.

(33)—Document, Construction of—Sale or mortgage—Condition to re-transfer.—Where all the indicia of the debtor and creditor relation are present, an instrument will not operate as a sale, merely because there is a stipulation in the deed that the alienee would re-transfer the property to the alienor, if the debt would be paid up by the alienor, within a stipulated period. MADHO KORO v. GOPA BANDHU NIPPAKO, 6 Ind. Cas. 512=8 M.L.T. 100.

(34)—Estoppel—Mortgage—Prior and subsequent mortgages—Sale of part of mortgaged property to mortgagee—Redemption of previous mortgage—Prior mortgagee not setting up his purchase as defence—Right of subsequent mortgagee to possession.—When the sub-mortgagees purchase the shares of some of the heirs of the mortgagor in the property mortgaged, and all the heirs sue for redemption of mortgage, and, pending suit for redemption, the property is mortgaged with third parties, and out of consideration for this latter mortgage the sub-mortgagees are paid up and redemption of the previous mortgage is allowed, the sub-mortgagees are estopped from setting up their purchase from some of the heirs of the mortgagor against the claim for possession made by the subsequent mortgagees. Their acceptance of the whole mortgage money constitutes an admission that the redeemed land had not been sold to them. BALA BAKSH V. LOHRI, 39 P.L.R. 1910=8 Ind. Cas. 229.

(35)—Acknowledgment—Acknowledgment not made before prescribed period—No inference that it proves the existence of a subsisting mortgage.—The acknowledgment of a mortgage, not having been made before the expiration of the period prescribed for a suit for redemption, does not by itself prove the existence of a subsisting and non-existence of a time-barred mortgage. The factum of an acknowledgment cannot of itself be held to conclusively prove that it was made within the period of limitation. CHOTI-RAM V. BHAU, 1 Bom. L.R. 2.

(36)—Statement in a mortgage as to amount of land excepted from its operation, nature of—Admission—Evidence.—Where a mortgage of a revenue paying mouza was effected, and there was a statement in the mortgage-deed as to the quantity of debutter land within the limits of the said mouza, which was exempted from the mortgage, held, that the statement in the deed regarding the debutter land was a deliberate admission imposing on the mortgagors who had made it the burden of proving that it was untrue or that they were not bound by it. JARAS KUMARI V. LALON MONI, 18 C. 224=17 I.A. 145, P.C.=5 Sar. 628.

(37)—Admission by mortgagee—Effect—Limitation.—When at a period of time within 60 years from the date of the original mortgage, the mortgagee in the course of a conveyance admitted that the mortgaged property was of the ownership of the original mortgagor, that the property had been mortgaged and that the mortgage was at the time existing, the admission amounts to an acknowledgment of an existing relationship of mortgagor and mortgagee and a suit to redeem the original mortgage can be brought any time within 60 years from the date of the admission. *VITHU V. (38)—Admission by mortgagee—Effect of admission.—Where a mortgagor describes his mortgagee as such and the latter admits in writing over his signature the correctness of that description, the meaning of the admission, is as plain as language can make it. Thereby the mortgagee unmistakeably affirms that he is what he is described to be a mortgagee and it is a necessary implication from the admission that he acknowledges all the legal consequences of his position as a mortgagee, one of which is his liability to be redeemed. SHEIKH MAHOMED V. JAMALUDDIN MAHOMED, 10 Bom. L.R. 385.

(39)—Mortgage—Attestation by only one witness—No proof required when mortgage is admitted by the other side—Evidence Act (I of 1872), s. 58—Effect of not impeaching the informality of the mortgage in the first Court at the first hearing.—Where the defendants in their written statements admitted that they had executed a deed of mortgage on account of an old debt due by them, and that subsequently it was arranged that a third person who was not a party to the mortgage should pay the debt and redeem the land: Held, that this was a clear admission that the relation of mortgagor and mortgagee was established between the defendants and the plaintiffs, and that, therefore, the production of the mortgage-deed was unnecessary under the provisions of s. 58 of the Evidence Act. The validity of the mortgage cannot be questioned in such a case, even if the deed is attested by one witness only. (U.B.R. 1897—1901, Vol. II, 379, F.) A Court can take no account of the informality of a transaction which was not put in issue. MAUNG KAN V. MAUNG MYAT THAING, 11 Ind. Cas. 850.

(40)—Ancestral property—Sale—Property reverting to joint family—Mortgage.—Where it is admitted that the property in dispute was originally the ancestral property of three brothers, and it is found on evidence that the property was not sold out and out, but mortgaged, and that subsequently to that mortgage the property reverted to the family, and was in its possession jointly, such reversion and the conduct of the parties were held to be sufficient to show that the sale was originally a mortgage. BANESHUR DASS V. BANEE MADHUB DASS, 18 W. R. 256.

(41)—Burden of proof—Mortgage relied on by plaintiff, Proof of.—Where a plaintiff, in a suit on a mortgage, fails to prove the mortgage on which he relies and which he alleges in his plaint, he cannot succeed upon the mere fact that the defendant admits that he is a mortgagee of the land. SALIK RAM V. RAMANAND, 3 O.C. 173.

(42)—Mortgagor and mortgagee—Subsequent possession of mortgagee not necessarily evidence of outright sale—Burden of proving subsequent outright transfer on mortgagee—Entry in register—Possession over 13 years insufficient—Burden of proof.—Where, after mortgaging the properties, the mortgagors remained in possession at first and subsequently made over possession to the mortgagees, who alleged that possession was made over outright and not in usufruct, the burden of proving the outright transfer is on the party asserting it. (1 L.B.R. 215, Appr.) An entry in Register No. 1 showing an outright transfer for consideration, coupled with the fact of possession for over thirteen years, is not sufficient to shift the onus, especially where there is no entry in Register IX of the corresponding year, and the possession is as consistent with the transaction being an usufructuary mortgage as with its being an out-right transfer. MA HNIN v. MA LE ME, 8 Ind. Cas. 610.

(43)—Malabar Law—Otti right—Purchase from another person setting up title as Jenmi—Does not enlarge the otti right possessed by the mortgagee.—Where a Kanam-holder admits that he holds under an otti created by one Jenmi, that fact, of itself, estops him from setting up a title by adverse possession originating in a purchase of the mortgaged property from another person claiming the rights of a Jenmi in that property. KADAKAM VELLI MAMMILI SHANARAN MOOSAD v. K.C. OTHEANAN NAIR, 2 M.W.N. 1911, 61 = 10 Ind. Cas. 339.

(44)—Suit on alleged mortgage against bona fide purchaser—Onus of proof of execution of bond and bona fides of transaction.—Where, in a suit on an alleged mortgage against a bona fide purchaser for value, the genuineness of the transaction is questioned, the plaintiff is bound to prove prima facie both the due execution of the bond and the bona fides of the transaction and the defendant need not give affirmative evidence of fraud. BRAJESHWARE PESHAKAR v. BUDHANUDDI, 6 C. 268 = 7 C.L.R. 6. [R. & Expl., 5 C.L.J. 653.]

(45)—Mortgage—Suit to obtain property unencumbered by previous mortgage—Payment of mortgage money—Consent—Mortgage alleged to have been under attachment—Onus probandi—Mortgage—Waiver of mortgage rights—Personal remedy.—Where the plaintiff sues to obtain certain property unencumbered by the previous mortgage and pays into Court the amount due under the defendant's lien as previous mortgagee, and on being questioned by the Court, states that he has no objection to this sum being appropriated to the payment of the defendant's lien, he has no cause of action as against the defendant. Where plaintiff alleges that an attachment subsists and that consequently the mortgage under which the defendant claims is invalid, he is bound to prove this allegation and he is not discharged of this burden merely by showing that the attachment was made some years previous to the alienation. Simply because a mortgage-deed provides that, in the event of the mortgaged premises being sold, and not being sufficient to meet the debt, the person and other property of the mortgagor would be liable, it cannot be held that the mortgagee must be considered to have waived his right under the mortgage and that he cannot follow that property into whosoever hands it may have passed. TOOLSEE DUTT MISSER v. BROJO MOHUN THAKOOR, 9 W.R. 332.

(46)—Estoppel—Mortgage of entire property by owner of half share—Purchase by defendant of entire property pending mortgage suit—Sale and purchase by mortgagee in presence of defendant—Defendant if estopped from proving title to the other half—Ignorance of plaintiff of real fact and misleading by defendant's conduct, to be proved.—F, who owned a half share in a property, purported to mortgage the whole. After a preliminary decree had been passed in favour of the mortgagee in his suit against F brought on the mortgage, N purchased the interest of F and his co-sharer and was brought on the record as the successor in interest of F. The mortgage decree was thereafter made absolute and the property put up to sale and purchased by the mortgagee. In a suit by the latter against N to establish his title to the entire mortgaged property, held—That N would not be estopped from showing that the mortgage sale passed only F's half share in the property to the plaintiffs, unless it was established that the mortgagee was not aware that F had only a half share in the property which he purported to mortgage and that he was misled by some representation by conduct of N into believing that F had full title. KAMAL KUMAR NANDI v. KALI MEAH, 15 C.W.N. 572 = 9 Ind. Cas. 662.

(47)—Deed—Consent of a person to the deed without previous title in the mortgage—Effect of consent.—A usufructuary mortgage for a period of ten years was passed to one K by defendant 1 of certain lands as his own on receipt of the whole consideration. At the foot of this deed, plaintiff added his consent with a remark that he was owner of half of the said lands, that he received half of the consideration and that he consented to the mortgage. The lower Courts held that the possession of the mortgagee for twelve years under this deed created a title in favour of the plaintiff to the extent of a half, the mortgagee's possession being adverse to defendant 1 in favour of plaintiff: Held, that in a suit by plaintiff to recover his half share in, or to be put in joint possession of, the mortgaged property he must show that at the date of the mortgage he was joint owner or owner of half the property independently of the mortgage deed. The consent in the deed operated merely as a piece of evidence and did not by itself alone create any title in favour of plaintiff. SUBBAN v. JIVANBHAT, 4 Bom. L.R. 25.

(50)—Mortgage of grain.—Where certain boats containing grain were assigned by the owners thereof in consideration of an advance of money by a Firm on condition that the owners of the boats were to work the boats for the Firm and be responsible for the safe custody thereof and that, if the advance should not be re-paid on demand by the Firm, the latter were to take possession of, and sell the boats, held, that the deed containing the stipulations was a mortgage and liable to stamp duty as such and not a pledge. KO SHWAY AUNG v. (51)—Mortgage of personal property not in existence—When valid.—A mortgage of personal property, which is not in existence at the time of the mortgage, is valid, provided the mortgagor has a potential interest in that out of which the property may arise. SIVA SON OF SABHA v. BISANDAS, 2 C.P.L.R. 193.

(52)—Mortgage—Future crops—Agreement to assign—Vague and uncertain bond cannot be enforced.—Future crops can be hypothecated. A mortgage of future crops operates as an agreement to assign. Such an agreement, in order to be enforceable, must be an agreement which a Court of Equity would enforce. An agreement, the terms of which are vague and uncertain, cannot be enforced. DIP CHAND v. RADHA, 5 Ind. Cas. 373.

(53)—Mortgage of property to come into existence in future—Creditor paying consideration—Mortgagor, trustee on property coming into existence—Subsequent mortgage—Salvage lien—Mortgage of indigo cakes to be manufactured in future—Nature.—A mortgage of property which is to come into existence in the future is a valid transaction, which Courts of Equity will enforce. (Clements v. Mathews, 11 Q.B. 8, 808; Holroyd v. Marshall, 10 H.L. 191, 13 C. 262, 10 A. 133, R.) On a creditor paying the consideration, the mortgagor becomes a trustee of the property for the creditor as soon as the property comes into existence. The creditor as cestui que trust acquires an equitable estate or interest in the property. Any subsequent mortgagee of the property, even though he obtains possession of it, will have no rights. Held also, that the lien claimed by the subsequent mortgagee had nothing in common with a salvage lien. (2 C. 58, R.) [R., 11 O.C. 301.] A mortgage of indigo cakes to be manufactured hereafter from the crops to be grown on the lands of a particular factory, from the date of the execution of the mortgage up to the date of its being paid off, being neither vague nor uncertain, is not bad in law. BALDEO PARSHAD SAHU v. (54)—Pardanashin lady—Execution of document—Attesting witnesses outside parda—Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), ss. 68 (b), 73—Sale of mortgaged property for arrears of Government Revenue—Charge on surplus sale proceeds—Suit for them—Limitation Act (XV of 1877), sch. II, art. 132—Sub-mortgagee—Right to sue mortgagor of mortgagor—Mortgagee—Apportionment of debt—Loss of mortgaged premises for mortgagee's default.—When a deed was executed by a pardanashin lady, the attesting witnesses were on one side of the parda and the lady on the other, and her son took the deed behind the parda and came back with it signed, and then the witnesses attested the deed, and it was not suggested that the lady did not in fact sign the deed: Held, that the deed was properly attested, although the witnesses did not see the executant sign (13 C. W.N. 40, 3 Ind. Cas. 309, F.) Where a mortgaged property was sold for arrears of Government Revenue for no default of the mortgagee, and the surplus sale proceeds were withdrawn by the mortgagor: Held, that the mortgagee had a right to sue for the amount, and the period of limitation that applies to such a suit is 12 years from the date when the surplus proceeds were realised. (27 C. 180, 31 C. 45, F.) A mortgagee taking an assignment of a debt by way of mortgage should be specially protected against obligation, which would otherwise attach to him to get in the debt in due course, under penalty of being charged with the loss, in case any should arise through his default. A sub-mortgagee is entitled to sue the mortgagor of his mortgagor as well as his own mortgagor; and this is so whether a mortgaged debt or a simple debt is mortgaged. (20 M. 35, F.) A mortgagee cannot claim to throw the entire burden upon a portion of the mortgaged premises, because, by reason of his own laches, he has lost his remedy against the remainder. ISRI PROSAD v. (57)—Unregistered mortgage bond—Divisibility of bond.—The defendant took a loan of of Rs. 120 from plaintiff and executed a bond mortgaging certain immoveable property as collateral security for the re-payment of the loan with interest. The bond was not registered. In a suit upon the bond, the plaintiff prayed "to obtain a decree directing the sum of Rs. 120 with interest to be recovered from the defendant and from the mortgagor's property." It was contended that the document was not admissible in evidence, because it was registered. Held that the document was divisible in its nature, it being in the nature of a bond where defendant agreed to pay a certain sum of money, with a provision that, as collateral security for the loan, certain property should remain hypothecated, and that it was, therefore admissible in evidence. *GOUR CHURN SURMA v. personal remedy against his mortgagors to be barred by time, a mortgage-decree cannot be allowed even as against them. PALUKDHARY JHA v. BALJIT CHOWDHRY, 4 C.L.J. 543.

(62)—Mortgage of joint property—Liability of share of mortgagor—Partition—Effect of.—Out of six houses belonging jointly to R. J. and R. D. five were mortgaged by R. J. to the predecessors in interest of the plaintiff. The remaining house was subsequently sold by R. J. to the defendant. On partition, the house sold to the defendant was allotted to the share of R. J. and the five mortgaged houses were allotted to the share of R. D. The defendant contended that the house sold to him could not be sold to satisfy the mortgage on the suit of the plaintiff. Held, that the contention was not valid, for the sale of the house by the mortgagor did not prejudicially affect the rights of the mortgagees and their representative in interest, the plaintiff. ALLAH BAKHSI v. APPALA RAJA, 20 M.L.J. 393=8 M.L.T. 133=6 Ind. Cas. 991. (23 B. 395, D.; 13 A. 106, 20 C. 533, 35 C. 388, 6 C.L.J. 46, R.)

The deed also provided for the payment of the principal, on a certain date, in any year, after five years from the date of the deed, with a further provision that, on default, interest at 12 p.c., should be payable "on the responsibility of the mortgaged property." Held, that the deed contained a personal covenant to repay, notwithstanding the words "on the responsibility of the mortgaged property." The deed cannot be construed as excluding the personal liability of the mortgagor, which exists in the case of a simple mortgage, unless there is a specific contract to the contrary. (22 A. 453, R.) The plaintiff is not precluded from claiming, under this covenant, by reason of the fact that there is no specific prayer in the plaint with reference thereto. The fact of his asking for "such other relief as the Court may think fit" is enough to enable the Court to give him the appropriate relief, if he is otherwise entitled to it. (2 M.I.A. 353, 27 A. 325, R.) Where a person is not a party to the mortgage transaction, the plaintiff is not entitled to a personal decree against him, in respect of the money alleged to be in his hands. The fact that plaintiff delayed in instituting the suit is no ground for holding that there never had been any intention to enforce the enhanced rate. The explanation to s. 74, Contract Act, as amended by Act VI of 1899, provides that a stipulation for increased interest from the date of default may be a stipulation by way of penalty. This explanation (25 M. 343, 8 A. 185, 10 M. 203, R.) is introduced to meet the decisions to the effect that, when the higher rate of interest is payable as from the date of default, and not as from the date of contract, the contract rate is enforceable. The explanation, read by the light of the illustrations, shows that it is for the Court to decide, on the facts of the particular case, whether the stipulation is or is not a stipulation by way of penalty. Even in the view that the stipulations are by way of penalty, and that s. 74 applies, it is open to the Court, under that section, to award to the plaintiff the penalty stipulated for, so long as it is not in excess of the reasonable compensation, to which he is entitled. It is within the scope of the authority of the ejaman of the family to make a contract, and the family are bound by it. ABBAKKE HEGGADTHI v. KINHIAMMA SHETTY, 29 M. 491. [R., 11 O.C. 307.]

(66)—Personal liability—Covenant to pay—Liability of son for mortgage by father—Mitakshara family.—If a person promises to pay a certain sum of money with interest and hypothecates certain property as security without any covenant that he would be personally liable or without stating any mode of payment not even the mode indicated in the Transfer of Property Act as to sale of the mortgaged property, he is personally liable, and if the right is not barred by limitation, a decree under s. 90 should be passed. After the death of the mortgagor, father and manager of a joint Hindu family, his son would be liable only so far as he might be in possession of the assets left by his deceased father. RAM KISHORE GIR v. The estate of the major co-sharer must be held liable for the debt incurred by such manager for its benefit. GENDAN SINGH v.INDER NARAIN SINGH, 3 C.L.J. 537.

(69)—Mortgage suit—Paramount title, when may be investigated—Hindu Law—Direction for accumulation—Direction not perpetual—Present gift—Bequest to wife of son when married, whether valid.—The rule that the question of paramount title cannot be properly investigated in a mortgage suit is subject to exceptions. Where the defendant is the legal representative of the mortgagor, and if the property really belonged to the mortgagor, she, the defendant, would be the proper person to be sued, it is open to her, when sued by the mortgagee upon that assumption, to set up her own title to the mortgaged property. The substance of a disposition by will was that D, the eldest son of the testatrix, would take possession of the estate upon the death of the testatrix, that he would get his brother S married in the course of ten years, that, if S married within this period, the estate would be taken by his wife, but that if S did not marry within ten years, upon the expiry of that period, D would sell the properties and apply the proceeds for certain specified religious purposes. The will concluded with a statement that D would be the executor till the marriage of S, when his wife would succeed to the office of executor: Held, that the true position of D was no higher than that of an executor who had clearly no power to spend the income; that he was to accumulate the income for a period which might extend to ten years or might be shorter, if S should be married in the meanwhile, that this trust for accumulation, not being one for perpetual accumulation, was good as there was a present gift to support the direction for accumulation; that the bequest to the wife of S was valid in Hindu Law; and that the estate vested in the wife of S as soon as she was married. Therefore, a mortgage of the estate by S before his marriage did not pass any title to the mortgagee. NAFAR CHANDRA KUNDU v. RATNAMALA DEBI, 7 Ind. Cas. 921.

In 1892, he mortgaged to B the same property and again in 1893 he mortgaged it to R, part of the consideration being the amount due on the mortgage of 1887. In 1899, B's heirs sued for the recovery of the amount due on the mortgage of 1892 making R who was then in jail a party. He did not make R's son, who was then living, a party to his suit. R did not enter appearance and the suit was decreed. In execution of this decree, the property was sold and purchased by B, whose heirs subsequently transferred it to A. In a suit, brought by R's son upon the mortgage of 1893, it was held that the decree obtained against R by B was not binding upon R's son, and R under the circumstances of the case could not be presumed to have represented his son in the previous litigation. PRAG v. that a mortgage by a female is valid, if the next heir assents to it at the time when the mortgage is made or afterwards. value of the annual produce of the land, and to remain liable for the remaining two-thirds of the debt with interest; and even if no default occurred on their part in payment of the moiety of the annual produce or the performance of their other covenants, and notwithstanding full payment of the principal, to continue for 15 years to pay the half-produce of the lands to the mortgagees. Held that the mortgage-deed must be treated as security for payment of the principal and interest thereon at 9 per cent. and that in other respects it must be set aside as inequitable, fraudulent and grossly oppressive. Held, further, that, even if the lands had been made over to the mortgagees as per decree of the lower Courts, they must be forthwith restored to the mortgagors and an account be taken of the rents, profits and produce of the said lands whilst in the mortgagee's possession, and received by them or for their use or by their order. [R., 4 B.H.C. A.C. 202, 9 B.H.C. 69, 13 C.P.L.R. 43, 12 Bom. L. R. 795.] Mere inadequacy of consideration, unless it be so great as to amount to evidence of fraud, is not sufficient ground for setting aside a contract or refusing to decree specific performance of it. Inadequacy of consideration when found in conjunction with any other such circumstance as suppression of the true value of property, misrepresentation, fraud, surprise, oppression, urgent necessity for money, weakness of understanding, or even ignorance, is an ingredient which weighs powerfully with a Court of equity in considering whether it should set aside contracts or refuse to decree specific performance of them. Quære.—Whether a mortgage of future crops is valid under the Hindu Law? B agreed to pay Rs. 1,235 to A, reserving to himself the balance as haq-i-tahsil, i.e., as collection charges, and as a security for payment of the promised amount mortgaged his property to A. Though the real consideration for the mortgage and the promise to pay Rs. 1,235 to A, was an intended assignment by A to B of his (A's) right to recover the rents due from the tenants, yet A gave no authority to B to collect the rents, and consequently B could recover nothing. A sued B on the basis of the mortgage. Held, that the mortgage was without consideration and, therefore, unenforceable. PARBHU NARAIN SINGH v. DEORAJ SINGH, 11 Ind. Cas. 4.

(77-a)—Burden of proof—Consideration, proof of, where a portion left in the hands of the mortgagee—Presumption as to receipt of consideration.—Where, according to the terms of a mortgage-deed, a portion of the consideration is left with the mortgagee to make payments to certain creditors, the burden of proving such payments lies in the first instance upon the mortgagee. The execution of the mortgage-deed and the proceedings which take place at its registration involve no admission by the mortgagor that the mortgagee has made such payments. BHIKHAM SINGH v. RADHA KUNWAR, 14 Ind. Cas. 136.

(78)—Widow mortgaging property—Part only of consideration for necessity—Suit for possession by mortgagee against reversioner—Mortgagee's right to proportionate possession—Incomplete contract.—In the case of a mortgage by a widow, if only a part of the consideration is proved to have been for necessity, the mortgagee is not entitled to recover possession of the mortgaged property from the reversioner after the death of the widow. A reversioner against whom part only of the mortgage consideration is binding is in the position of a mortgagor to whom part only of the consideration has passed and he can resist, on the ground of partial absence of consideration, the mortgagee's suit for possession. He is affected by so much only of the consideration as was for necessity and is not affected by the fact that the balance of the consideration, not for necessity, passed to the widow mortgagor, and must be treated as a party to a contract which has not been completed by the other party. The mortgagee is not even entitled to possession of a fraction of the mortgaged property in proportion to the amount of the mortgage-money proved to have been for necessity. *KHAIRA v. The mortgage-deed contained an admission of the receipt of consideration which consisted of old debts. The heirs of R brought a suit upon their mortgage, and impleaded G and L admitted execution, but denied receipt of consideration, but L denied both; Held, whether the admission of G contained in the deed was evidence against L or not, nevertheless the burden of proof was primarily on the plaintiffs to establish payment of consideration, and as against the transferee, who was no party to the bond and had no sufficient knowledge of the circumstances under which the document was executed, that admission was of very little value and was insufficient to shift the burden of proof on to the transferee. *LALAK SINGH v. (83)—Mortgagee protected from loss—Payment by him to prevent rent sale not voluntary.—The payment of moneys by the mortgagee of a patni taluk, for the prevention of its sale for arrears of rent, was not voluntary, notwithstanding that the mortgage-deed had insured him against loss by such sale. The provision of such protection by the mortgagee would not deprive him of the benefit of the equitable consideration, for which authority is derived from 11 M.L.A. 258. MOHESH CHUNDER BANERJEE v. RAM PROSONNO CHOWDHRY, 4 C. 539 = 6 C.L.R. 23.

(85)—Assessment—Payment of assessment by mortgagee—The amount so paid can be added to mortgage money.—Apart from special stipulation a mortgage is under no liability to pay assessment as between himself and his mortgagor; and if he does pay it for the purpose of preserving his security, then he is ordinarily entitled to add that amount to his mortgage-money, and to require that he should be paid it before he can be redeemed. When the mortgagee agrees to pay a certain sum as assessment and the assessment is subsequently increased, he is entitled to add the amount of the excess payments so made to his mortgage security. *NILAWA v. The revenue on the land was subsequently enhanced and plaintiff had to pay the excess over the original kist, to recover which excess he instituted the present suit against the defendant. Held, that the revenue payable under the

(87)—Mortgage—Mortgagee in possession, a trustee—Duty to repair—Right to cost of repair.—A mortgagee in possession of the mortgaged premises is in the position of a trustee. The mortgagee must use the mortgaged premises as liable to become the property of the mortgagor, and must not do anything to diminish the security upon which the money was lent. To allow the mortgaged premises to fall out of repair, and to become uninhabitable, would be diminishing the value of the security on which money was advanced, and preventing the mortgagor from paying off the debt from the usufruct. It is the bounden duty of the mortgagee in possession to keep the premises in necessary repair, and he will be allowed to charge for the same with interest. JOGENDRONATH MULLICK v. RAJ NARAIN PALOOYE, 9 W.R. 488. [Expl. & D., 8 B. H.C. A.C. 236; R., 10 Ind. Cas. 994 = U.B.R. 1910 75]

Held, that the mortgagee, whose mortgage had 17 years to run, was entitled to improve the mortgaged property, if he did not claim the cost of improvements from the mortgagor. Held, further, that the suit comes under Rule IV of the rules framed under s. 9 of the Suits Valuation Act, 1887, and that a further appeal lies. LAKHU v. SUNDAR DAS, P.L.R. 1900, p. 135.

Suit against vendees for enforcement of stipulation—Covenant running with the land.—By the terms of a mortgage-deed, the mortgagor agreed to pay by way of interest, a certain quantity of grain annually. Subsequently, the mortgagor sold the mortgaged land to other persons. The mortgagee sued the vendees claiming performance of the agreement to pay interest in kind. Held that, the mode of payment of interest by the mortgagor was a personal agreement between him and the mortgagee, and that as the produce of the land, by the terms of the deed, was not absolutely pledged to the mortgagee, the purchasers of the land were not bound by such promise which was not a covenant running with the land. SUNDRA v. Seq. Incorporation of, as O. XXXIV, Civ. Pro. Code, 1908—Effect—Mortgagor not appearing—Scale of costs.*—A was the first mortgagee of a certain immoveable property in Calcutta. B held a second mortgage over the same property and some other property in the mofussil. A sued on the original side of Calcutta High Court upon his mortgage and impleaded B as a defendant in his suit: B prayed for a decree in his favour for the amount of his claim, and for a direction that, in the event of the Calcutta property proving insufficient to pay the first mortgage and his own, the mofussil property may be sold by the Calcutta High Court. Held, that, in A's suit, B could only obtain any surplus sale proceeds of the property in that suit, and could not obtain any relief respecting the mofussil property (22 C. 100, 24 C. 190, 1 C.W.N. 106, D.) The effect of the incorporation of the sections of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882, as O. XXXIV of the Civ. Pro. Code, 1908, is to put an end to any independent practice on the original side of the High Court based on the old procedure, and that the original side should follow the provisions of the Transfer of Property Act which have been imported into the Civ. Although as a rule a decree is on scale No. 1 as against a defendant who does not appear, the first mortgagee was held entitled to obtain cost on scale No. 2. SARAT CHANDRA ROY CHOWDHRY v. M. M. Pro. Code (Act XIV of 1882), s. 257-A.*—A mortgage decree was passed in 1903, which provided that interest on the principal amount would run at the bond rate up to six months. The decree was executed and a date was fixed for sale of the mortgaged property. The judgment-debtors asked for time to enable them to satisfy the decree, and the decree-holder agreed to give time for a consideration, namely, the payment of interest upon his money up to the date of realisation. The application was made on the 18th November, 1905. In that application, the judgment-debtors expressly prayed for sanction of the Court as regards payment of interest up to the date of realisation. The Court thereupon granted time, and, in accordance with the terms of the petition, postponed the sale. The decree-holder afterwards, in several successive applications for execution, claimed interest on the basis of the agreement embodied in the petition of the 18th November, 1905. The judgment-debtors, with knowledge of the claim, never disputed it, and had, on 58 successive occasions obtained adjournments on part-payments and expressly agreed to pay the balance of the entire decretal amount on the adjourned dates: Held, on the construction of the order on the petition, that the agreement was sanctioned by the Court under s. 257-A of the Code of 1882, as the Court deemed the consideration reasonable under all the circumstances of the case. A decree must ordinarily be executed as originally made, and the parties cannot be permitted to make a substantial alteration therein. But where the parties have acted upon the decree, as altered, for a number of years, and treated it as valid, the judgment-debtors, who have been substantially benefited thereby, cannot be permitted to take exception to its validity. GOKHAI PADHAN v. XXXIV, rr. 4, 5, Part VII, and O. XLI.*—In a suit upon a mortgage, a preliminary decree was passed and an appeal was preferred against that decree. Before the appeal came on for hearing, a final decree was passed against which no appeal was preferred. The lower Court dismissed the appeal against the preliminary decree on the ground that the final decree not having been appealed against, the appeal against the preliminary decree was not sustainable. Held, by the High Court, that the mere fact that a final decree was passed, is no ground for dismissing the appeal against the preliminary decree without hearing, and that there is no provision enabling the appellate Court to do so. In other words, in a suit for sale by a first encumbrancer, where there are successive encumbrances, the puisne encumbrancers may be allowed to have their claim satisfied out of the surplus sale proceeds, if any. (1 C.L.J. 31, R.; 22 C. 100, 24 C. 190, 26 A. 407, D.) If the junior mortgagee is in a position to have his claim satisfied from the surplus sale proceeds realised at the instance of the senior mortgagee, he cannot be allowed to maintain another action to reach that very surplus, and his remedy is to follow the surplus in the Court which made the previous judgment. An order of this description, which enures to the benefit of the plaintiff—prior encumbrancer—as well as the defendant—junior encumbrancer—can be made only, if all the parties interested in the equity of redemption of both the mortgages are before the Court. In regard to the relation of mortgagor and mortgagee, when the mortgagor retains possession, a relation is created similar to that of landlord and tenant, and the mortgagor is estopped from denying the title of the mortgagee. A mortgagor must, from the very nature of the mortgage contract, preserve the property pledged for the purposes of the original security, and is therefore estopped, independently of covenants of warranty, from denying the mortgagee's title and the existence of the lien which he has created, or from defeating its enforcement against the property upon which it was placed. Although a purchaser of mortgaged premises is not estopped, by his mere acceptance of the deed, from disputing the validity of the mortgage or the amount due under it on the ground of objections which were open to the mortgagor, yet, he is limited to such objections or defences

only as could have been pleaded by the mortgagor, himself, and he cannot even set up all of these, for he is not permitted to urge defences strictly personal to the mortgagor. The purchaser at the execution-sale is bound by the same rule of estoppel as the judgment-debtor, on the principle that the former has purchased merely the right, title and interest of the latter and does not consequently occupy a position of greater advantage. The execution purchaser of the interest of the mortgagor is as much bound by the rule of estoppel not to dispute the validity of the mortgage as the mortgagor himself. (18 C. 188, 22 C. 909=22 I.A. 129, I.A. Sup. Vol. 40=1 B.L.R. 46, R.; 24 C. 62, F.; 14 M.I.A. 101, 18 W.R. 200, 7 C. 107=8 I.A. 65, 14 C. 401, 6 W.R. 197, 16 C. 355, 20 C. 236, Expl. & Disappr.) The purchaser at an execution-sale may take advantage of an estoppel arising from the deed by which the debtor acquired title and is, in his turn, estopped by the deed made by the debtor before the sale; in other words, the levying creditor is bound by an estoppel against the debtor as grantor. A solicitor has no implied authority as such to receive payment of a mortgage-debt, even though he may be authorized to receive payment of the interest and permitted to have possession of the mortgage-deed; nor can he, even if authorized to receive payment of a mortgage-debt, take a cheque in lieu of cash. A solicitor employed for the purpose of the execution of the mortgage security has no authority to receive payment therefor, much less has he any authority to enter into any agreement to relinquish the mortgage lien over any portion of the mortgage premises. An agreement to release a mortgage, if made for a consideration, binds the parties to it; but it does not bind a person not a party to it, and no such party could enforce it, unless he was induced by it to purchase the property, to advance money upon it, or to do some act prejudicial to his interest. In a mortgage suit, the defendants who have purchased the equity of redemption, are not entitled to claim as a matter of right that the mortgage-debt should be apportioned between the various mortgaged properties and each of them should be allowed to redeem upon payment of his rateable share thereof. The mortgage security is entire and indivisible, and unless there are exceptional circumstances, the mortgagee cannot be compelled to break up the security. (18 C. 320, 29 M. 217, 7 C.L.J. 274, R.) The general rule is that a mortgagee cannot be required, at the instance of a purchaser of part of the premises, to apportion his mortgage-debt among the several parts into which the property has been divided, and to look to each only of its proportionate share, unless circumstances have happened, the effect of which, in fact or in law, is to create a severance of the security. But an apportionment will be directed in exceptional cases, such as, where it is necessary for the benefit of one who has taken a part of the property under necessity and for the protection of his own interest, or where the mortgagee himself has become the owner of a part of the equity of redemption, or where, by his own conduct, there has been a break up of the entire security. (2 C.L.J. 202, 13 M.I.A. 404, 6 C.L.J. 46, 5 C.L.J. 315, 6 C.L.J. 612, 15 B. 186, 6 C.L.J. 672, R.) The test to be applied in each case is, whether there has been a severance of the security at the instance or with the consent of the mortgagee, and an apportionment will not be enforced upon the mortgagee, unless special equitable considerations are established. The rights of a mortgagee are not destroyed by the mere transmutation of the subject-matter of the security into a different form without his consent; this rule is applicable to cases of compulsory acquisition under the Land Acquisition Act (5 M.I.A. 271, 6 C. 142, 20 C. 241, 20 C. 533, 33 C. 92, 13 M. 321, 6 C.L.J. 745, R.) Where the consideration of a security is a debt due under a previous mortgage earlier in date to that of another person, and a suit is brought by the plaintiff upon the latter mortgage which is subsequent in date to that of the other mortgagee, the plaintiff is entitled to priority to the extent of the sum covered by the earlier security, on the ground that, at the time of his later mortgage, he must have intended to keep on foot the earlier lien. *DEBENDRA NATH SEN v. XVII of 1806. But this right was not enforced till the enactment of the Punjab Alienation of Land Act, 1900, which rendered the conditional sale clause in a mortgage-deed null and void. And the mortgagee afterwards applied to the Deputy Commissioner for the special remedy provided by s. 9 (3) of the Punjab Alienation of Land Act, but refused to accept a farm of the mortgaged land for eight years, which was offered to him by the Deputy Commissioner, and brought a suit for money-decree, against the mortgagor personally. Held, when the sole remedy given by the contract between the parties is put an end to by the intervention of the Legislature, and a special

XXXIV of 1802—Rule in Pattabiramer's Case—Applicability to mortgages executed by a Mahomedan.*—In contracts of mortgage by conditional sale executed before 1858, the title of the mortgagee becomes absolute by virtue of the terms of the contract, on default of payment within the time specified. [D., 50 P.R. 1906.] The obligation to account, imposed by the Reg. XXXIV of 1802, does not affect the absolute right of the mortgagee, when the mortgagor fails to redeem within the limited period. The decision in Pattabhiramer's case, does not become inapplicable by reason of the parties being Muhammadans. MALLIKARJUNUDU v. MALLIKARJUNUDU, 8 M. 185. (13 M.I.A. 560, R.)

(110)—Mortgage by conditional sale—Suit to redeem—Expiry of stipulated period before Act IV of 1872—Rules in Punjab prior to Act—Strict compliance with rules necessary.—Suit for redemption of a conditional sale. Defendant contended that the conditional sale had become absolute by the expiration of the term expressed in the deed, before Reg. XVII of 1806 acquired the force of law in the Punjab by the enactment of Act IV of 1872. Held, that the rules in force in the Punjab, before the passing of the Punjab Laws Act, not having been complied with in this case, the conditional sale had not become absolute when that Act was passed. The provisions of cl. 7 of s. 8 of the above rules required the mortgagee, when desirous of foreclosing the mortgage, to apply to the Court after the expiration of the period specified in the deed, that the opposite party may be called upon to pay the amount due thereon, within "one year from the date on which such notice may be issued." This the mortgagee had not done in this case. GURMUKH SINGH v. MALLA, 1 P. R. 1881. [R., 132 P. R. 1882; D., 171 P. R. 1882.]

(113)—Mortgage—Mortgage-money, payment of, after time fixed by Court—Mortgagor, Right of, to pay mortgage-money before application for order absolute made by mortgagee—Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), ss. 92, 93, 94.—A decree was passed in favour of the mortgagors under the provisions of s. 92, Transfer of Property Act, for the redemption of a usufructuary mortgage on payment of a certain sum of money on or before the 28th February, 1898. The decree directed that, if such payment was not made on the day fixed, the mortgagee might make an application under s. 93 of that Act. The decree did not order that, if such payment was not made the property should be sold. On the 9th September, 1899, without having applied for an enlargement of the time, the mortgagors paid the money into Court. They subsequently applied under the first paragraph of s. 93, Transfer of Property Act, to be put in possession of the mortgaged property. The mortgagee objected on the ground that the mortgagors were not entitled to be put in possession of the property, as they had not paid the money on the day fixed. Held, that the mortgagors, having paid the amount due and the mortgagee not having said that more money had become due to him, were entitled to possession of the mortgaged property. Payment of the amount specified in the first paragraph of s. 93, Transfer of Property Act, before an order absolute has been made, entitles the mortgagors to be put, if necessary, in possession of the mortgaged property. On failure of the mortgagor to pay the amount due on the day fixed, a right to apply for an order absolute accrues to the mortgagee, but the accrual of such right does not stand in the way of payment by the mortgagor of the amount due. If the mortgagor is unable to pay the amount and desires to have the day fixed for payment postponed so as to prevent the mortgagee from applying for an order absolute, he may apply to the Court for enlargement of the time; or, he may make such an application on the mortgagee applying for an order absolute. *HARDEO BAKHSH v. that at the time A's suit was brought, the property was in his possession under a registered mortgage-deed executed by Y and praying for possession. It was found that the mortgaged property belonged only to Y and that X and Z had no interest in it: Held, (1) that, as B was in lawful possession of the property, having purchased it at a Court auction, it was for the plaintiff to begin and prove his title. But when he showed that he received the land in mortgage by a registered deed and had obtained possession and had been deprived of that possession in execution of a decree to which he was not a party, the burden of proof was shifted to A and B; (2) that the effect of A's having waived his claim against Y was that A obtained a decree for the sale of X's and Z's interests in the property and that was all B also bought. As Y was not a party to the suit, her interests could not be affected by the decree; (3) that, as the property belonged to Y, B did not buy any interests in the property, and the plaintiff was thus clearly entitled to recover possession. *NGA LU GYI v. G in his sub-mortgage covenanted that, if during the period of the mortgage, the property mortgaged, in any year, by any reason, should pass out of the possession of B, or the mortgage-deed for any reason should be declared to be invalid, he would be liable to pay the loss sustained by the mortgagee. A applied under the Bundlekhand Encumbered Estates Act. G took no steps to realize the money. B preferred a claim, but his claim was rejected. B was ejected from the property: Held, that it was open to B to rely upon the absolute covenant contained in his mortgage-deed, and to hold G responsible for the loss which he had sustained by reason of his dispossession. GAYA PRASAD v. GANGA BISHUN, 6 Ind. Cas. 838.

(120)—Suit—Plaint—Date of mortgage—Variation of date of mortgage in the pleadings—Burden of proof—Prima facie title—Shifting of burden of proof—Admissions of mortgage.—Where the plaintiff, in his plaint in a redemption suit, states approximately the date of a mortgage, it is open to him on the pleadings to show that the lands were mortgaged, if not in the year stated in the plaint, at any rate at sometime about that period. In a suit for redemption of a mortgage very slight prima facie proof that a mortgage had been originally made would serve to shift the entire burden of proof on the defendant; but this prima facie proof must be forthcoming and in its absence a plaintiff seeking redemption cannot be relieved of the burden which is imposed on all plaintiff of establishing the fact or facts out of which their claim to relief arises. 'This does not mean that the moment the plaintiff adduces any slight evidence, the burden is shifted. As with all evidence, the Court must appreciate it and the burden is shifted only when the Court regards the evidence as trustworthy where it is a question of its trustworthiness. Where, however, there are admissions of a mortgage, the Court ought to deal with them as evidence, for admissions are only evidence and not conclusive proof, and if it finds that the admissions are trustworthy and may be legally used against the defendant, then the burden would be shifted. BALA v. SHIVA, 5 Bom. L.R. 85=27 B. 271.

(121)—Suit for sale on mortgage—Interest of puisne mortgagees and purchasers not set out in the plaint—Dismissal of suit—A suit by a mortgagee for sale of the mortgaged property should not be dismissed, because the plaintiff has failed to set out in his plaint the interests of parties in possession in the mortgaged property. SUDAILAMUTHU PILLAY v. MUTHUSAWMI PILLAY, 7 Ind Cas. 49.

(122)—Plaint—Plan—Suit for recovery of mortgage-money based on a mortgage-deed of house property, no plan necessary—Return of plaint when allowable.—Held, that, in a suit for the recovery of the mortgage-money based upon a mortgage-deed of house property, no plan of the house is required by law, and that the description of the house given in the mortgage-deed in the case was quite sufficient for the purposes of the suit until the contrary was shown. Held, also, that returning a plaint before its registration is improper under any circumstances; it is the duty of the Court to register a plaint when presented, even if it is considered defective, and the Court can then pass a formal order returning it for amendment, if necessary. SARDAR UTTAM SINGH v. Code, s. 244.—Two brothers, K and T, mortgaged their property to B. K then mortgaged his share to B. T's interest passed to other persons. B brought a suit for sale upon his first mortgage and obtained a decree. The sale of the property satisfied the first mortgage and left a balance. B applied for half the money so left, as a second mortgagee of K's share. The first Court adjudicated upon the rights of parties and awarded half to B and half of the money to transferees of T's share. The lower appellate Court reversed the decree. Held, that B was entitled to half of the surplus sale proceeds as a second mortgagee of K's share (18 B. 681, R.) Held, also, that the more regular procedure for the first Court would have been to refer the rival claimants of the money to a civil suit to establish their respective rights. Held, further, that there was no question relating to the execution, discharge or satisfaction of the decree within the meaning of s. 244, Civ. Pro. Code, as between the decree-holder or his representative on the one side, and the judgment-debtor or his representative on the other, and no appeal lay from the order of the Court of first instance. Appeal treated as revision and followed. BAKHTAWAR LAL v. BARU MAL, 4 A.L.J. 492=A.W.N. 1907, 201.

(124)—Suit by mortgage without making person in possession a party to suit—Purchaser in execution-sale—Suit for possession by purchaser, maintainability of.—The plaintiff purchased certain property in execution of a mortgage decree for sale obtained by the mortgagee against the mortgagor. After the mortgage, but before the suit thereon, the mortgagor assigned all his rights in the mortgaged property to certain persons, who were not made parties to the suit on the mortgage. The purchaser at auction-sale sued for possession against the assignees of the mortgagor. Held, that the suit for possession would not lie, as the only right purchased by the plaintiff was the right of the simple mortgagee, viz., the right to enforce a sale. *KANARAN v. (125)—Suit on puisne-mortgage—Puisne mortgagee a party to the former suit on prior mortgage—Right of redemption of puisne mortgage—Extinguished when decree passed on prior mortgage.—Certain property was mortgaged to R in January, 1892, and to R and S, in March 1892. The latter mortgage was found to have priority over the former as, with its consideration, some earlier mortgages had been discharged. This finding became final. R and S first brought a suit upon the mortgage of March, 1892, and foreclosed the property. R then brought the present suit for foreclosure of half the property in possession of L on his mortgage of January, offering to redeem the prior mortgage. Held, that, R being a party to the suit on the mortgage of March, his right of redemption was extinguished upon the foreclosure of that mortgage and the present suit was not maintainable. RAM LAL v. Act (IV of 1882), s. 68.—Held, that :—(1) A plaintiff, whose right to sue had not accrued at the date of institution of suit, cannot claim a decree simply on the ground that his right to sue has become complete during the pendency of the suit. (2) That a recital in the last mortgage-deed that the mortgagor shall pay the amount due under the previous mortgage-deed at the time of redemption supersedes the stipulation made therein fixing the time of payment by the mortgagor of the mortgage-money. (3) A mortgagee's suit to recover the mortgage-money due on a mortgage-deed in which the mortgagor agrees to pay it within a certain number of years is not maintainable before expiry of those years. in case of mortgagor's default. The only remedy left for him is now the one provided under s. 9 (2) of Act I of 1900; the last proviso of s. 68 of Act IV of 1882 cannot help him in the least. NANAK CHAND v. MEHR JAWATA, 137 P.W.R. 1910=8 Ind. Cas. 576. (29 P.W.R. 1910, R.)

(127)—Prior and puisne mortgagees—Separate suits by each of them without joining the other as a party—Mortgage-decrees—Sales in execution—Rights of purchaser at different Court-sales—Suit for possession by a purchaser at a subsequent sale against purchaser of the same property at prior sale on subsequent mortgage, whether maintainable—Relief not claimed in the plaint, granting of—Practice—Defendant not contesting plaintiff's excessive claim—Effect—Collusion.—A was the prior mortgagee, and B the subsequent mortgagee of the same property. B got a decree on his mortgage, and sold the property in execution of his decree and C was the purchaser at Court-sale. While B's suit was pending to which A was not a party, A brought a suit on his mortgage without joining B as a party thereto, and obtained a decree, in execution of which the same property was sold to D, who then brought a suit against the previous purchaser for possession of the property and prayed for such other relief as he may be found entitled to. Held, (1) that, since both the mortgagees had an equal right to sell the property, and once it was sold at the instance of one mortgagee, there was no further saleable interest left in the judgment-debtor to be sold again, all the interest of the judgment-debtor passed to C, the purchaser at the first sale. (2) that, therefore, D, the purchaser at the subsequent sale of the judgment-debtor's interest in the property, took nothing, and his suit for possession was not therefore maintainable (2 M. 108, 5 C. 265, 26 M. 486, F.) (3) The rights of a prior or subsequent incumbrancer are unaffected by a sale in execution of a decree to which he was not a party. But any relief to which he might be entitled by reason of his charge on the property could not be enforced in the present suit for possession. (27 A. 325, 31 M. 425, 28 A. 482, D.) Where the plaintiff's claim was in part excessive, the mere fact that a defendant did not contest the claim is not sufficient to show fraudulent collusion between them. *KUTTI CHETTIAR v. (128)—Purchaser of mortgaged property—Mortgage-suit—Purchaser not made party—Mortgage, whether to be proved against him again.—When a mortgagee has obtained a decree on his mortgage, the validity of the mortgage must again be proved against a purchaser who was not a party to the suit on the mortgage and who ought to be given an opportunity of redeeming it if valid. decree but defendant No. 1 was no party to it. In execution, the property was put up for sale and purchased by the plaintiff. Defendant No. 1 filed a claim which was successful and the plaintiff sued for confirmation of possession: Held, that, as the plaintiff had not proved the genuineness of the mortgage in the presence of defendant No. 1 who denied it, and had also not given him an opportunity of redeeming, the suit as framed was not maintainable. JOTE KUMAR v. INDRA NARAIN, 10 Ind. Cas. 137. (9 C.W.N. 728, 1 C.L.J. 371, 32 C. 891, 11 C.W.N. 403, 5 C.L.J. 315, R. & D.)

(129)—Mortgage-deed—Mortgage-debt recoverable before expiry of period, if mortgagee were dispossessed—Sale in execution—Suit for recovery of debt.—The mortgagor agreed that the mortgagee should be at liberty to sue for the recovery of the mortgage amount, before the expiry of the term prescribed by the deed, if the mortgagee were to be dispossessed of such land or of a portion of it. On a portion being sold in execution of a decree against the mortgagor, the mortgagee sued for the recovery of the mortgage-debt. Held, that as the sale of the portion was made subject to the right of the mortgagee no cause of action would arise until the purchaser dispossessed him. *JANKI SINGH v. (130)—Subsequent purchaser not made a party—Sale—Purchase by mortgagee himself—Mortgagee's right to sue for possession—Suit for sale—Limitation.—Where a mortgagee, A brought a suit on his mortgage, without making one D, a subsequent transferee from the mortgagor, a party, although he had notice of the transfer, and, in execution of the decree obtained in the suit, purchased the property himself. Held—that a suit by A for the recovery of possession of the property from D does not lie, and A's only remedy is by a suit for sale. *AGHORE NATH BANERJEE v. (134)—Suit for sale on mortgage—Interest of puisne-mortgagees and purchasers not set out in the plaint—Dismissal of suit.—A suit by a mortgagee for sale of the mortgaged property should not be dismissed, because the plaintiff has failed to set out in his plaint the interests of parties in possession in the mortgaged property. SUDAILAMUTHU PILLAY v. MUTHUSAWMY PILLAI, 7 Ind. Cas. 49.

made, and that it was not necessary to go into the question whether the relinquishment had been obtained by collusion between the tenant and the zemindar. SUBA BIBI v. RAGHUBIR SINGH, 7 A.L.J. 291 = 6 Ind. Cas. 284.

(136)—Suit on, where no period for payment is fixed.—Where a document sued on is a simple mortgage and implies a covenant to repay, it cannot be contended that the mortgagor has not the right to redeem at any time after the execution of the deed. The mortgagee's right to foreclose is co-extensive with his right. (23 M. 33, R.) So, a mortgagee can sue at any time after the execution of the bond, without a demand or a notice given before the institution of the suit. CHENGIAH v. PICHAYYA, 17 M.L.J. 177.

(137)—Mortgagee purchasing half of the mortgaged property—Suit to recover the remaining half of the mortgage-money from the other moiety of the property—Maintainability of suit—Discharge of mortgage-debt.—A and B mortgaged their property to C. In execution of a simple money-decree against A, the mortgagee purchased one-half of the mortgaged property. Held, that, by the purchase of one moiety of the property by the mortgagee, only one moiety of the mortgage-debt was extinguished, and that the mortgagee could recover the remainder half of the mortgage-debt from the other moiety of the property. JAGANNATH PERSHAD v. MIHIN, 10 Ind. Cas. 235. (22 A. 284, F.)

KESHAVRAM v. RANCHHOD, 7 Bom. L.R. 811 = 30 B. 156.

(139)—Suit to enforce mortgage—Scope of such suit—Parties necessary to such suit—Frame of such suit—Mortgagee if can debate title of mortgagor.—Not only the mortgagor, but all persons deriving title from him subsequent to the mortgage and bound thereby as holders of different fragments of the equity of redemption are necessary and proper parties to a suit to enforce the mortgage. The proper scope of a mortgage suit is to cut off the equity of redemption and to bar the rights of the mortgagor and those claiming under him; the only proper persons to such a suit are the mortgagor and the mortgagee and those who have acquired interest under them subsequent to the mortgage. It is not competent for the mortgagee to make as party defendant one who claims adversely to the title of the mortgagor and mortgagee; he is a stranger to the mortgage, has no connection with the mortgagee, and, as his adverse claim of title cannot, in any way, be affected by the mortgage suit in which he has no interest, he cannot be made a party for the purpose of litigating such claim of title. (12 C. 414, 32 C. 746, R.; 8 C.W.N. 365, D.) The above rule of law is not merely a technical and convenient one, but is based upon perfectly intelligible and substantial grounds. JAINESWAR DUTT v. BHUBAN MOHAN MITRA, 3 C.L.J. 205=33 C. 425. (140) — Mortgage-suit—Cross-objection by co-respondent—Test—Civ. Pro. Code (Act V of 1908), O. 41, r. 22, Sub-r. (1)—Party, if can question competency of cross-objection in second appeal—Mortgage-deed, execution of—Obligation, attachment of—Mortgage-deed, when operates—Registration, Act (III of 1877), s. 47—Evidence Act (I of 1872), s. 92, Proviso (4)—Deed, delivery of—Common Law deed and mortgage-deed in this country, difference between.—O. 41, r. 22, sub-r (1) of the Code, is comprehensive enough to admit of a cross-objection by one respondent against another. As a general rule, the right of any respondent to urge a cross-objection is limited to his urging it only against the appellant; and it is only by way of exception to this general rule, that one respondent may urge a cross-objection as against another respondent. No exhaustive rule on the subject can be formulated, and the true test is, whether, for the ends of justice, it is necessary that, upon the appeal of one of the parties, the matter should be re-opened only so far as he is concerned, or the whole case should be reviewed and some of the respondents allowed the opportunity to urge a cross-objection against their co-respondent. One test of a negative character is, sometimes useful; if the party, against whom a cross-objection is sought to be urged by his fellow-respondents, is not a necessary party to the appeal, the cross-objection can hardly be allowed to be urged. But if he is a necessary and proper party respondent to the appeal, whether cross-objection can be urged or not, depends upon the circumstances of the case. The test to be applied is, whether the questions which arise between the several sets of parties are so connected that one of them ought not to be allowed to re-open matters, so far as he is concerned, without opportunity allowed, in the interests of justice, to another to protect himself by urging his objections, even though they may be directed, not against the appellant, but against a co-respondent. The plaintiff and third and fourth defendants were so far united that their common interest was to defeat the fifth defendant, who set up a heavy prior charge, which, if real, was entitled to precedence over both of them. If the fifth defendant was defeated, the question of priority as between themselves would be immaterial, as the property was of sufficient value to satisfy the claim of both of them. The first

Court overruled the contention of the third and fourth defendants that they were entitled to priority. The fifth defendant preferred an appeal; Held, that the third and fourth defendants could file cross-objections against the plaintiff in the appeal of the fifth defendant. Held, also, that the party in second appeal could question the competency of cross-objection, although no such objection was preferred in the first appellate Court. Although a mortgage-deed has been duly executed and attested and no obligation attaches thereunder till certain conditions have been fulfilled, upon fulfilment of the conditions, the obligation attaches from the date of its execution and not from the date of registration or delivery of the deed. A mortgage in favour of the plaintiff was duly executed and attested on the 19th January, 1908. The mortgagor altered the date to the 23rd January, 1908, to the knowledge of the mortgagee, when the money was paid and the deed was registered. The mortgagee never agreed that the deed would take effect from the 23rd January; Held, that the mortgage-deed took effect from the 19th January, 1908. The intention of the parties was to fix the security on the title as it stood on the 19th January, and they effectively did so, even though there was a collateral agreement that no obligation should attach under the instrument till payment of money on the one hand and delivery to the registering officer on the other. The moment the conditions were fulfilled, obligation attached with effect from the date of execution and attestation, notwithstanding the execution and registration of another mortgage instrument by the mortgagor in the interval. The distinction between a Common Law deed in England and a mortgage-deed in this country pointed out. JADUNANDAN PROSAD SINGH v. KOER KALLAYAN SINGH, 15 C.L.J. 61=16 C.W.N. 612=13 Ind. Cas. 653.

(141) — Prior suit by puisne-mortgagee, making prior mortgagee party defendant—Decree for sale, without providing for latter's rights—Subsequent suit by prior mortgagee—Decree in former suit—No bar.—It is not necessary in a suit by a puisne mortgagee that the holders of prior mortgages should be made parties, and that the questions relating to their mortgages be determined. (1 C.L.J. 337, R.) Therefore, the mere fact that the decree in a prior suit instituted by a puisne-mortgagee directed the property to be sold in satisfaction of his mortgage without making any provision for the rights of the prior mortgagee, though the latter had been added as a party-defendant to that suit, cannot operate as a bar to an action by the prior mortgagee for the enforcement of his mortgage. KATCHALAI MUDALI v. KUP-PANNA MUDALI, 1 M.W.N. (1912) 41=13 Ind. Cas. 182. (24 A. 429, D.)

in law to prevent a person, who has several mortgages over the same property, from bringing a suit on the earlier mortgages without joining in that suit his claim under the latest, if he does not in such a suit pray for the sale of the property subject to the latest mortgage. GOBINDA PROSAD v. LALA HARI HAR CHARAN, 14 C.W.N. 1053. (30 B. 156, 25 M. 108, 26 A. 14, 30 M. 353, R.)

(143)—Suit on prior mortgage—Rights of subsequent mortgagee not impleaded—Decree awardable to subsequent mortgagee.—The omission by the prior mortgagee to make a subsequent mortgagee party to his suit, prevents the decree and sale in the suit from binding the subsequent mortgagee, who, as such, represents the equity of redemption to the extent of his mortgage. As puisne-mortgagee, he is entitled to have an opportunity of redeeming the mortgaged premises from the prior mortgagee, and could not be deprived of that right by proceedings to which he was not a party. It is open to him, under such circumstances, to sue on his second mortgage and obtain a decree based on his said right of redemption. DAMODAR DEVCHAND v. NARO MAHADEV KELKAR, 6 B. 11. [F., 10 B. 224; R., 9 A. 125 = A.W. N. 1886, 318, 13 A. 432, F.B., 20 B. 390, 1 O.C. 105, 28 B. 153.]

(144)—S. 64, Contract Act—Suit by mortgagee for realising securities.—In a suit by a puisne-mortgagee, for realising his security, in which all those interested in the property, either as prior or subsequent mortgagees as well as the mortgagor's representative, are made defendants, the rights created by s. 64, Contract Act, would not be enforceable as between the co-defendants in such proceedings, but in a suit for the enforcement of those rights. *RAJ COOMARY DASSEE v. (145)—Mortgage-suit—Suit by assignee of mortgage—Parties to the suit—Execution of mortgage-deed admitted—Consideration denied—Burden of proof as to consideration.—D, the assignee of a mortgage, brought a suit on the mortgage, and made the original mortgagor and the original mortgagee, parties to the suit. The mortgagor admitted the execution of the deed, but denied the receipt of consideration: Held, that the original mortgagee was rightly impleaded in the suit and that the plaintiff was entitled to ask for a relief against him if he failed to obtain a decree against the mortgaged property; Held, further that the onus to prove the want of consideration lay on the mortgagor. *DIRG SINGH v. of such interest. Though this section is not in force in the mofussil in Lower Burma, it lays down a general rule of law that should be followed, in order to avoid needless litigation and multiplicity of suits. THA KAING v. MA HTAIK, 3 L.B.R. 241. (U.B.R. 1892—1896, Vol. II, 581, 586, 3 L.B.R. 15, 18 A. 109, R.)

(147)—Suit for sale by prior incumbrancer—Necessary parties—Non-joinder of puisne-mortgagee—Transfer of Property Act, 1882, s. 85.—A prior mortgagee should join the puisne-mortgagees as a party to a suit for sale against the mortgagor, if he has notice of their mortgages. He cannot in the execution of a decree against the mortgagor, attach property in the possession of a puisne-mortgagee, if the latter has not been made a party to the suit in which the decree sought to be executed against him was passed. The mere fact that the puisne-mortgagee has himself brought a suit for a declaration that the property in his possession is not liable to be attached in execution of the decree against the mortgagor will not entitle the prior incumbrancer to have the questions regarding his right decided in that case. Although the Transfer of Property Act is not in force in the Punjab, the principles laid down in s. 85 of that Act are the principles which apply to similar cases in the Punjab. HUKAM CHAND v. KARAM CHAND, 64 P.R. 1908 = 132 P.W.R. 1908. (14 M.I.A. 101, 8 B. 168, 13 A. 318, 16 A. 478, 19 A. 379, 19 C. 116, 17 A. 537, 21 M. 222, 13 A. 432, 22 C. 33, 24 C. 644, 5 C.W.N. 423, 30 C. 755, R.)

(148)—Sub-mortgagee—Right to sell mortgaged property—Frame of suit.—In a properly constituted suit a sub-mortgagee is entitled to a decree for the sale of the mortgaged property. The mortgagor in such a suit must be impleaded as also the mortgagees, so that the former may have an opportunity of redeeming and the latter may be able to safeguard their interests in regard to the claim put forward by the sub-mortgagee, and see that the amount claimed is due. AHMED ALI KHAN v. BILAS RAI, 5 A.L.J. 402 = A.W.N. 1908, 191.

(149)—Mortgage-suit—Second mortgagee—Sale in execution of decree obtained by first mortgagee—Purchase by mortgagor in the benami of another—Lien and charge of second mortgagee, if subsisting—Purchaser, if a proper and necessary party to the suit of the second mortgagee—Party, objection as to, not taken at the trial—Estoppel.—The effect of a sale, under a power of sale, is to destroy the equity of redemption in the land and to constitute the mortgagee exercising the power, a trustee of the surplus proceeds, after satisfying his own charge, first, for the subsequent incumbrancers, and ultimately for the mortgagor; the estate, if purchased by a stranger, passes into his hands free from all the incumbrances. (6 I.A. 145 = 5 C. 198, F.) If, upon a sale by the first mortgagee, the property is purchased by the mortgagor himself, the mortgagor can only acquire the estate, subject to the second mortgage, upon the principle that it is his duty to discharge the estate for the benefit of the second mortgagee; such purchase does not in any way prejudice the second mortgagee, even if the second mortgagee was a party to the suit by the first mortgagee, and had an opportunity given to him for redemption. (5 C.L.R. 227, 3 C.W.N. 323, 23 C. 397, A.W.N. 1903, 75=25 A. 371, 16 I.A. 129=17 C. 23, R.) The estate or interest in the land which is drawn within the operation of a mortgage suit, which will be affected and bound by the decree, is the estate created and passing by the mortgage, or estates or interests subsequently acquired by the mortgagor, and enuring by way of estoppel to the benefit of the mortgagee, and not only the mortgagor but all persons, deriving title from him subsequent to the mortgage and bound thereby as holders of different fragments of the equity of redemption, are necessary and proper parties to the suit to enforce the mortgage. (33 C. 425=3 C.L.J. 205, R.) The question whether the title which a third person, a purchaser in execution of the decree obtained by the first mortgagee, alleges to have acquired after the plaintiff's mortgage, is or is not a real title, which is entitled to priority over the mortgage sought to be enforced, is a question which may be tried and adjudged in a mortgage suit. The question is not one of jurisdiction, but rather of the form of the litigation, and the scope of its enquiry, or in other words, a question of multifariousness and convenience affecting the discretion only and not the jurisdiction of the Court. Having assumed the role of being a proper and necessary party defendant, having pleaded to the merits, a person cannot, after being cast in the suit, change front and insist that error occurred in making him a party defendant. Parties litigant are not allowed to assume inconsistent positions in Court; having elected to adopt a certain course of action, they will be confined to the course which they adopt. BHAJA CHOWDHURY v. CHUNI LAL MARWARI, 5 C.L.J. 95=11 C.W.N. 284. (8 C.W.N. 365, R.) [R., 6 C.L.J. 572, 35 C. 701=12 C.W.N. 657=7 C.L.J. 565=6 M.L.T. 255, 10 C.L.J. 538=6 M.L.T. 255=3 Ind. Cas. 346.]

—A purchaser in execution of a mortgage-decree has no right to retain possession of the property, obtained through Civil Court, against a purchaser of the equity of redemption, who was not a party in the suit on the mortgage, and who had obtained and remained in possession till the sale in execution of the decree in the mortgage suit. HABIBULLAH v. JUGDEO SINGH, 6 C.L.J. 609. (24 W. R. 94, 8 C. 79, D.) [R., 6 C.L.J. 612.]

(152)—Limitation—Mortgage suit—Sons of mortgagor not impleaded within limitation—Dismissal of suit even against the mortgagor.—In a suit upon a mortgage, the sons of the mortgagor were not made parties to the suit within limitation: Held, that the suit could not be dismissed against the mortgagor because his sons had not been impleaded in time. BALA PROSHAD v. PARTAB SINGH, 13 Ind. Cas. 38.

(153)—Mortgagee omitting to join subsequent purchaser as party—Estoppel.—Where, at the time of filing a suit on his mortgage, the mortgagee knows or has reason to know that a third person has purchased the hypotheca, and fails to join the purchaser as a defendant in the suit, the mortgagee is estopped from denying that the purchaser is entitled to a declaration that the mortgage-decree is inoperative against the purchaser as regards the mortgaged property. NGA PAW E v. NGA SIN, U.B.R. 1911 2nd Qr., 92. (U.B.R. 1892—1896, Vol. II, 586, 3 L.B.R. 241, 12 M. 424, 12 M. 429, 15 M. 303, 15 M. 412, R.)

(154)—Puisne mortgagee not party to suit by prior mortgagee—His right—Transfer of Property Act, ss. 85, 58, 60, 82—Discharge of mortgage—Re-conveyance—Mortgagees acquiring equity of redemption in portion of mortgaged property—Attaching creditor becoming also part-owner of equity—Suit for foreclosure—Redemption—Right of mortgagors.—Where a mortgagee has obtained a decree for sale without impleading a subsequent mortgagee, or a party having a right of redemption, the right of redemption of the latter does not become extinct; on the contrary, such subsequent mortgagee or party is entitled to exercise it even after a sale has taken place in execution of the decree obtained on the prior mortgage. The party so entitled to redeem must be placed in the position which he would have held if he had been made party to the suit, that is, he must be placed in the position which will enable him to redeem; and he must, if he wishes to redeem, pay to the prior mortgagee the full amount due on his mortgage. (19 A. 527, 24 A. 187, R.) By a mortgage an interest in land is transferred to the mortgagee, and it is the right of the mortgagor on redemption to have a re-transfer of the mortgaged property, or such an acknowledgment in writing as is mentioned in s. 60 executed. The advantage of such a provision is obvious, as, by the observance of it, the cloud upon the mortgagor's title created by the mortgage is removed, and satisfactory evidence of its removal is provided. The mortgagor who does not enforce his right under the section, abandons a valuable protection. Whether or not however, an actual re-transfer is essential in case of redemption, the party redeemed ought to be in a position to transfer the entire mortgaged property to the party redeeming, so that the latter may have the full benefit of the mortgage. Where the mortgagees have acquired the equity of redemption in a portion of the mortgaged property, and an attaching creditor has also become part-owner of the equity, the simple and reasonable course is to allow the mortgagees to maintain a suit for foreclosure or sale against the attaching creditor who has so purchased for a portion of the mortgage-debt proportionate to the value which the property purchased by the latter bears to the value of the entire mortgaged property, such value to be calculated in accordance with s. 82 of the Act, and to allow the attaching creditor to redeem only the share which he has purchased. [R., 26 A. 72.] The mortgagee's action for foreclosure implies an offer to re-convey on redemption, and he cannot refuse, when the estate is redeemed, to restore possession of it to the mortgagor or those claiming under him; having no right, whether the mortgagor's title be good or bad, to dispute it; or, except by virtue of his power of sale, or unless evicted by some party having a better title, to deal with the security in such a manner that upon discharge of the debt the estate cannot be recovered. A mortgagee cannot abandon part of his security to the detriment of a subsequent incumbrancer who is called upon to redeem his security. DINA NATH v. LACHMI NARAIN, 25 A. 446 = A.W. N. 1903, 150.

(155)—Sale—Mortgaged properties—Order in which to be sold—Discretion of Court—Right of decree-holder to execute against any mortgaged property, wheter absolute.—Properties A and B were mortgaged, and after the mortgage, the property A was sold to R. The mortgagee brought a suit on his mortgage against the mortgagor and R, and obtained a decree for sale. He then applied for the sale of both the properties A and B, but the Court, in the exercise of its discretion, directed that property B should be sold first. The decree-holder then applied that his petition for execution may be dismissed and it was dismissed. He again applied for the sale of property A alone: Held, that the decree-holder was not absolutely entitled to execute his decree against any of the mortgaged properties he pleased, for in that case it would result in this, that the inherent power of the Court conferred by law to decide in what order the mortgaged properties are to be sold would be altogether abrogated at the option of the decree-holder. (34 C. 13, 4 C.L.J. 573, Doubt.) The present petition should be dismissed unless amended by adding the property B to the application so as to leave it in the discretion of the Court to order the properties to be sold in any order it may see fit. MAHOMED SIDDIK v. RAM LAL MANDAR, 7 Ind. Cas. 4.

(156)—Estoppel—Prior mortgagee, no party to a suit on a subsequent mortgage—Property advertised for sale as free from incumbrance—Prior mortgagee bidding for it without notifying his mortgage.—M was a prior mortgagee of the property in dispute. R, a subsequent mortgagee brought a suit without making M a party and obtained a decree. The property was advertised for sale as without any incumbrance. M was present at the time of sale and bid for the property, but did not notify his own claims. Held, that he was estopped from disputing the claim of the purchaser in execution of the subsequent mortgage-decree. *MANJI RAM v. (157)—Lease—Mortgage—Construction of document—Authority coupled with interest.—The question whether a transaction is a lease or a mortgage is one of construction, and the intention of the parties has to be ascertained, not from particular expressions to be found in the instrument, but from the provisions thereof as a whole. It is unquestionable that for a lease it is essential not only that the alleged lessee is given a right to the exclusive possession of the land, but also that he is given a right to the profits thereof in his right as lessee. *KONGATTI VALLA NAYAR v. Leases between a mortgagor and a mortgagee to last during the pendency of a mortgage are not bad in themselves. (7 Bom. L.R. 773, R.) but, where the documents expressly contemplate the continuance of the lease after the mortgage-debt, that would be a fetter on the equity of redemption which the Court ought not to enforce. *PAMURLAPATI ANKIVEDU v. (159)—Lease by mortgagor, effect of.—If a mortgagor left in possession grants a lease without the concurrence of the mortgagee, the lessee has a precarious title, inasmuch as, although the lease is good as between himself and the mortgagor who granted it, the paramount title of the mortgagee may be asserted against both of them. *MACLEOD v. (161)—Public charitable property.—A lease, which is to last as long as the pendency of a mortgage, is not bad as being for an indefinite period. As regards public charitable property, long leases are pro tanto alienations of the property. But it is competent to mortgage or alienate portions of the public charitable property for the purpose of the preservation of the charitable property. There is no authority for the proposition that public charitable property cannot be alienated at all. Lease between a mortgagor and mortgagee, to last during the pendency of a mortgage, are not bad in themselves, though, they, like all other transactions between a mortgagor and mortgagee, are to be looked upon with certain amount of suspicion. As between a mortgagor and mortgagee, the possession of the mortgagor is presumed to be permissive and not adverse. MAHOMED v. EZEKIEL, 7 Bom.L.R. 772.

(162)—Document described as lease, absence of clause for payment of rent—Possession in consideration of sum lent.—A document styled a lease, under which, in consideration of money advanced, the claimant under it was only to enjoy certain specified lands for a certain number of years, but which contained nothing as to the repayment of the borrowed amount, nor provided for payment of any rent as such, was held to be liable to stamp duty, not as a lease, but as a usufructuary mortgage, under which the rents and profits had been estimated to be sufficient to satisfy both principal and interest, so that no subsequent accounting might become necessary on either side. REFERENCE UNDER STAMP ACT, S. 46, 21 M. 358, F.B.

(163)—Lease of mortgaged property to mortgagor—Nature of the relation between the parties—Jurisdiction of Revenue Court—Remedies of mortgagee.—Where a usufructuary mortgagee gives the mortgagor a lease of the mortgaged property, with stipulations for the payment of profits in lieu of the interest on the mortgage amount, the relation between the parties continues as mortgagor and mortgagee, and does not become one between landlord and tenant, in respect of which the Revenue Courts have jurisdiction. And the decision of a Revenue Court, in proceedings between the parties wrongly had in such Court, would not bar a suit in respect of the same matter in a Civil Court. BAGHELIN v. a Will in his favour purporting to be that of the deceased Mahant, but could not get possession, and the other, who alleged that he had been installed by the deceased as his successor, managed to obtain and keep possession of the properties of the Math. Pending these disputes, the former executed the mortgage in disputes hypothecating Math properties. Soon after there was a compromise between the claimants, under which the survivor of the two was to be the Mahant and till the death of one of them, neither was to take the place of the deceased but both should jointly manage the properties, and the survivor would be bound to repay loans jointly raised by the claimants. In consequence of the breach of the agreement by first defendant, plaintiffs sued for the balance of the amount due to them under the three mortgage bonds executed by second defendant: Held, (1) that plaintiffs were entitled to sue on the mortgages and that they were not bound to enforce specific performance of first defendant's agreement; (2) that the first defendant was not entitled to refund of the interest he had paid in part performance of his obligations under the agreement. RUNGIAH GOWNDEN v. of 1883. The plaintiff sued for specific performance of this agreement, and got a decree for payment by A.K. within a specified time of Rs. 64,970-4-8 or in default for specific performance of the agreement. The decretal money was paid within the time limited by A.K., but the plaintiff appealed, claiming a further sum of Rs. 18,125-8-10, but admitting that his right to specific performance was gone. The plaintiff succeeded in his appeal and obtained a decree, which was a simple money-decree, for payment of Rs. 18,125-8-10. The plaintiff then attempted to execute his decree for this last-mentioned amount by bringing to sale portions of the property hypothecated under the deed of the 29th of July, 1883, but was met by objections on the part of two persons who held mortgages over the property subsequent in date to 1883. The plaintiff thereupon brought a suit for a declaration that he was entitled in virtue of his decree in the above-mentioned suit for specific performance to bring to sale the property in question in priority to the claims of the two subsequent mortgagees. Held, that the suit brought under the circumstances above described must fail; whether for the reason that it was not a suit under s. 67 of Act IV of 1882, or that it was barred by the proviso to s. 42 of the Specific Relief Act, 1877, inasmuch as, if the plaintiff was entitled to the relief sought, he was entitled also to bring a suit for sale on his mortgage. LAKHRAJ v. Plaintiff repudiated all liability in respect of the said further charges. The first Court passed a decree for redemption of the whole on payment of the total amount due on account of the original mortgage and the further charge. On appeal, the Divisional Judge held that, by allowing the further charges to be created by one of the original mortgagors, the defendants had practically destroyed the indivisibility of their original mortgage-lien over the whole land for the entire mortgage debt and decreed redemption of one-half on payment of half the mortgage-debt in terms of the plaintiff's claim. Upholding the latter's decree, held, that cases in which the mortgagee, by his own act, has destroyed the oneness of the security e.g., where he buys part of the mortgaged property himself, are exceptions to the general rule as to the usual indivisibility of a mortgage-debt. In such cases, to allow the mortgagee to throw the burden of the entire debt on the portion not purchased by him would be contrary to equity and violate an important principle of the law of mortgage, viz., that, in the absence of special circumstances, the mortgage-debt is to be regarded as apportioned over the whole of the mortgaged property. These principles applying to purchases of part of the mortgaged property by the mortgagee should also be extended to cases of further charges taken by the mortgagee. The defendants, in this case, have taken such a further charge and have acquired a special interest in a part of the mortgaged property. The indivisibility of the mortgage has thus been destroyed by their own action entitling the plaintiff to redeem his share of the properties on payment of a proportionate share of the original debt. SARAN DAS v. The decree fixed a time within which the decree-holder has to pay a certain sum to a prior mortgagee. In case he failed to pay, the decree further provided that the suit would stand dismissed. The decree-holder did not pay within the time fixed. He, however, deposited the money in Court after the expiry of the time, and the Court allowed the prior mortgagee to withdraw it. Some six years after, the decree-holder applied for a decree absolute: Held, (1) that the action of the Court in accepting the money deposited by the decree-holder after time and giving it to the prior mortgagee was purely mechanical. It did not extend the time for payment to the prior mortgagee; (2) that the effect of non-payment to the prior mortgagee within time was, under the decree, to let the whole suit stand dismissed against all the parties, the mortgagor and the subsequent mortgagees including. (19 M. 249, 23 I.A. 32, 13 A. 432, R.;

(8 C.W.N. 102, 29 C. 651, Rel. on; 1 Ind. He executed another mortgage in favour of D in 1892, in respect of one of the villages C only. He again executed another mortgage in 1895 in favour of B in respect of both the villages S and C. B sued on his mortgage of 1879, and obtained a decree, in execution of which the village S was sold in 1896. The sale proceeds yielded a surplus of Rs. 400 which was paid over to the mortgagor. B again brought a suit on his mortgage of 1895 and sought to obtain a decree against the village C. D contended that B ought to have applied the sum of Rs. 400 surplus in satisfaction of his second mortgage of 1895. Held, that B was not bound to so apply the surplus. HULASI v. mortgagee—Rights of purchaser.—A mortgagee is entitled to say to each of several persons who have succeeded to the mortgagor's interest that he shall not be entitled to redeem a part of the property on payment of part of the debt, because the whole and every part of the land mortgaged is liable for the whole debt. But it does not follow from this that a mortgagor who has acquired, by purchase, a part of the mortgagor's rights and interests, is entitled to throw the whole burden of the mortgage-debt on the remaining portion of the equity of redemption in the hands of one who has purchased it at a sale in execution of a decree against the mortgagor. Each has bought subject to a proportionate share of the burden, and must discharge it. NATHOO SAHOO v. LALA AMEER CHAND, 15 B.L.R. 303=24 W. R. 24. [R., 21 B. 619; F., 25 W.R. 388.]

Chinto—Hindu Law—Joint family—Decree against co-parceners—Estoppel by conduct.*—Admissions by a mortgagor, or an understanding between him and his mortgagee that the mortgagee has become owner, cannot destroy the equity of redemption and take the case out of the rule in Ramji v. Chinto (1 B.H.C. 199, R.). The rule has no application where there has been a transaction of purchase by the mortgagee subsequent to, separate from and independent of, the mortgage. Under the Hindu Law, a decree obtained against one co-parcener does not ordinarily bind the other co-parceners, unless the former was a manager of the joint family and the decree was for a family debt. The other co-parceners may by their conduct show that it is such a decree and therefore binding upon them. HANMANTAYAMAJI PATIL v. GOPAL SADASHIV SHIMJI, 11 Bom. L. R. 1145=4 Ind. Cas. 264.

If, therefore, a mortgagee, with notice that the equity of redemption in a part of the mortgaged property has been conveyed, releases any part of the mortgaged estate, he must abate a proportionate part of the mortgage-debt as against such purchaser. But this rule does not apply where the mortgagee releases a portion of the mortgaged property before the residue is transferred to third persons. If he does so release, he diminishes his own security; but, as subsequent purchasers can only take subject to the mortgage, the mortgagee, may throw the whole burden of the mortgage-debt on the residue. It is not open to subsequent purchasers of mortgaged property to compel the mortgagee to grant them a proportionate abatement of the mortgage-debt, unless it is established that such a defence would have been available to the mortgagors themselves. (10 C.L.J. 150, R.) The effect of the purchase of part of the mortgaged property by the mortgagee is not to extinguish his mortgage security in its entirety. (20 A. 23, R.) The relation between the mortgagor and mortgagee is not so far analogous to that between a trustee and cestui que trust, as to preclude a purchase of the equity of redemption by the mortgagee. This rule is subject to the qualification that the Courts, if called upon to scrutinise the transaction, will look upon it with jealousy, and will set aside a purchase made by the mortgagee, when, by the influence of his position or by constructive fraud, he has gained an unconscionable advantage and has purchased the property for such a low price as may be taken to be fairly indicative of fraud or undue influence. The effect of a transaction is to be judged by its nature. If the sale was intended to be one of the equity of redemption merely, the mortgagee acquired the property subject to his mortgage, and in such a contingency, while there is no extinguishment of his right to enforce the mortgage against the remainder, the mortgage is extinguished to the extent of the amount fairly chargeable upon the property purchased by him. If, on the other hand, the sale was of the property freed of the mortgage, and the intention of the parties was that the mortgagee should hold the portion transferred to him freed from the mortgage-debt and the purchase-money should be applied in reduction of his dues, the mortgagee will not be bound to apportion the debt. In this latter contingency, unless the purchase might be successfully impeached on the ground of fraud or undue influence, the mortgagee is not bound to allow credit for a larger sum than what was deliberately settled as the price of the portion purchased by him. Cases on the subject reviewed. A mortgagee may, at an execution sale, purchase a portion of the mortgaged property free of his mortgage. The distinction is not so much between a private sale and an execution sale, as between a purchase of the equity of redemption and a purchase of the entire interest in the property. (24 M. 97, 27 B. 297, 28 A. 593, 29 A. 233, 4 C.L.J. 317, 34 C. 13, 4 C.L.J. 573, R.) As between the mortgagor and mortgagee, the latter is entitled to release a portion of the hypothecated property and diminish his own security to that extent. It is not obligatory upon him to proceed against all the properties rateably or to exhaust them for the satisfaction of his debt. A mortgagee who has security upon two or more properties which, he knows, belongs to different persons, cannot release his lien upon one so as to increase the burden upon the others without the privity and consent of the persons affected. But this doctrine has no application to a case where the release took place at a time when the purchaser of the mortgaged properties had not purchased any interest in the mortgaged premises, and the mortgagors alone were affected by the release. *MIR EUSUFF ALI HAJI v. No allegation was made by the mortgagors charging the purchasers with fraud or collusion or bad faith or knowledge of the existence of facts which would invalidate the sale. Held, that the mere circumstances that the defendants failed to produce evidence as to the value of the property will not justify the Court in finding that the sale was fraudulent. A mortgagee is strictly speaking not a trustee of the power of sale. It is a power given to him for his own benefit to enable him the better to realize his mortgage-debt. If he exercises it bona fide for that purpose, without corruption or collusion with the purchaser, the Court will not interfere, even though the sale be very disadvantageous, unless indeed the price is so low as in itself to be evidence of fraud. *HADDINGTON ISLAND QUARRY CO., LD. v. During the subsistence of the mortgage, the mortgagee escaped paying rent to the zemindar for several years. Held, that the mortgagee was entitled to the benefit of such non-payment of rent to the zemindar and that the mortgagor was not entitled to redeem the mortgage on payment of the principal sum after deducting the rent not so paid. *FAKIR MUHAMMAD KHAN v. Land was situate in a part of the country to which the Transfer of Property Act had not been extended. Held, that the mortgagor must be held bound by the clause and that consequently he had no right to redeem the land. *MAUNG NAUNG v. S. 61 of the Transfer of Property Act has no application to the case, because that section refers to mortgages on different properties. BHARTU v. DALIP, 3 A.L.J. 672 = A.W.N. 1906, 278.

Under s. 65, Transfer of Property Act, the mortgagor must, no doubt, be taken to covenant, in the absence of contract to the contrary, to pay all public charges in respect of the mortgaged property, when the mortgagee is not in possession. Not only the mortgagee, but any one claiming through him, is entitled to the benefit of this covenant, but the purchaser of the equity of redemption from a mortgagor is not a party to such a covenant, and there is no obligation on him to pay the public charges accruing due in respect of what he has purchased, though it may be to his interest to do so and avert a revenue sale of the mortgaged property. Where a person purchased the equity of redemption in a portion of the mortgaged property, but before the revenue pattah was issued in his name in respect of the portion sold, that portion was re-sold by the revenue authorities, owing to a default in the payment of revenue in respect of the remaining portion of the mortgaged property, and purchased again by the purchaser of the equity of redemption in the portion sold, the purchaser has absolute rights over the portion purchased and is entitled to hold it free of the mortgage, and the puisne mortgagee cannot proceed upon that portion. *RENGA SRINIVASACHARI v. ancing is simple, and a formal transfer of a mortgage is never made, nor is an intention to keep it alive ever formally expressed. To apply to such a practice the doctrine of *Toulmin v. (1 I.A. 106 = 21 W.R. 233, R.) The principles on which substituted securities should be ascertained, discussed and explained. A mortgagee, who has a security upon two or more properties, which he knows to belong to two different persons, cannot release his lien upon one, so as to increase the burden upon the others, without the privity and consent of the persons affected. The purchasers of the properties not released are entitled to insist that no more than a proportionate share of the mortgage-debt shall be levied upon the properties in their hands. Where the purchaser undertook to discharge not only the prior, but also the puisne mortgage, and paid off the former but not the latter, he was not entitled to hold up, as a shield, the mortgage which he had paid off, as against the debt which he undertook to pay but which he did not discharge. Semle:—that, where a vendor leaves the consideration for the sale with the vendee for pay-

(206) — Mortgage—Puisne encumbrancer paying off prior incumbrance—Right to stand in place of prior mortgagee—Question of intention—Intention to be clearly proved—Where old debt satisfied and different security at increased interest taken, no right.—The mere fact that the money borrowed by the defendant from the plaintiff was used to pay off an old mortgage, cannot entitle the lender to the benefit of the discharged security; as that fact cannot give rise to a presumption that there was any intention to assign the old mortgage to the plaintiff or to keep the prior mortgage alive. (29 C. 154, D.) A puisne incumbrancer may keep alive a prior incumbrance for his own benefit, even though it has taken the form of a decree. (2 C. L.J. 202, F.) But it is a question of intention. It must be clearly proved that the person claiming the priority paid off the prior incumbrance, with the express intention of keeping it alive for his own benefit. Such an intention may be inferred from the circumstances of the case, though it is more satisfactory when it is found expressed in the subsequent mortgage-deed or other document. Where there are circumstances to indicate that the old debt was satisfied and the prior mortgage extinguished, and the lender accepted a new and different security at an increased rate of interest, the lender has no right to stand in the place of the prior mortgage. WOOMESH CHANDRA LASKAR v. On May 16, 1896, that decree was made absolute, and the respondents commenced execution proceedings by sale of the property. In the meantime, the wife of the mortgagor brought a suit in forma pauperis against her husband and respondents, claiming from her husband a certain sum of money under a contract of dower, and alleging that that sum was charged on the mortgaged property in priority to the mortgages the subject of the decree of December, 17, 1895. On May 11, 1897, the suit was decreed with costs against the mortgagor, but dismissed with costs as against the respondents, and an order was made under the Code of Civil Procedure (Act XIV of 1882), s. 411, that the Court-fees payable to Government should be the first charge on the amount decreed to the mortgagor's wife and should also be recoverable from the mortgagor. The Collector on behalf of Government applied for and obtained execution of the decree of May 11, 1897, and the property was sold to the representative of the appellants. In execution of the respondent's said decree the property was again put up for sale and purchased by the respondents. The appellants disputed the respondents' claim for recovery of the property, resting the validity of the sale to their (appellants') representative on two grounds (1) on the terms of the said s. 411 and the decree of May 11, 1897, and (2) on the prerogative of the Crown. The Courts in India decreed the respondents' claim: Held, that the decree of May 11, 1897, did not create or purport to create any charge on the mortgaged property in favour of Government, who had no right to attach the property and sell it under that decree, though such interest, if any, as remained in the mortgagor from whom the Court-fees were declared to be recoverable, might have been reached by a proper proceeding; and that the order for the first sale was, therefore, without jurisdiction and the sale passed no property to the Appellant's representative, who was the person declared purchaser. (210)—Money advanced to discharge first mortgage—First mortgage not extinguished—Priority.—Before a person advancing money for the purpose of discharging the debt due under the first mortgage can establish his claim to the rights of the first mortgagee, it must be shown that the first mortgage had been extinguished. Otherwise the result would be that a number of persons would be entitled to rank as first encumbrancers with reference to different sums of money advanced by them, and it would be impossible to work out the rights of the parties. HANUMANTHAIYAN v. MEENTACHI NAIDU, 10 M.L.T. 380=2 M.W.N. 1911, 158=22 M.L.J. 12=12 Ind. Cas. 412=35 M. 183. (5 C.L.J. 611, Rel. on.; 11 M. 345, 8 M. 246, Expl.; 16 M. 94, R.)

(211)—Property sold—Third party advancing money on security of the property mortgaged—Sale set aside—Third party entitled to benefit.—Where a mortgage-debt, for the payment of which a sale has been ordered, is satisfied by a third party on obtaining a security of the property ordered to be sold, for the advance made by him, and the proceeding for sale came to nothing, the incumbrance in respect of which the sale was ordered enures to the benefit of the party making the payment. N mortgaged one of the houses to R and subsequently all the houses were mortgaged by S to one A. On partition between the brothers, S got the equity of redemption of the former house, as part of his share so that, after the partition, the house stood in the hands of S subject to the mortgage to R. In execution of a certain money decree against S, the house was put up for sale and purchased by one B. Subject to the incumbrance in favour of R, B paid off the amount of that incumbrance, paid the decree-holder in full and the balance to S, the judgment-debtor. A, the other mortgagee, in pursuance of a decree obtained by him against S, had the house in question attached in execution. It was, however, released from attachment at the instance of the above-mentioned Court purchaser, B, and A, thereupon, brought the present suit for a declaration that the house was attachable and was subject to sale in execution of his decree against S. Held, since admittedly A was fully cognizant of B's purchase at the Court-sale, his silence and conduct towards B, a bona fide purchaser for value without notice, deprived A of his right to enforce his lien as puisne mortgagee against the property in B's hands. Equity requires that, as between A and B, it should not be that B, who purchased the house in an open Court-sale, in complete good faith must suffer while A, knowing of the whole transaction, stood by and allowed B to so purchase. The doctrine of lis pendens is applicable to ex parte mortgage suits and purchases in execution. RAM DOYAL DAS v. RAM TANU DAS, 11 Ind. Cas. 464=15 C.L.J. 137. (214)—Act IV of 1882 (Transfer of Property Act), s. 53—Assignment of invalid mortgage—Rights of assignee as against mortgagor and subsequent mortgagee for consideration—Maxim—Qui prior est tempore potior est jure.—On the 23rd October, 1897, one M.A., executed a mortgage of certain property in favour of H.A., which was registered on the 29th of October, 1897. This mortgage was found to be fictitious and without consideration, and to have been made solely for the purpose of defeating the creditors of the mortgagor. On the 15th of August, 1898, the mortgagee transferred his rights under this mortgage to his wife B, in part satisfaction of her dower debt. It was found that this was a bona fide transaction and that B obtained the transfer of the mortgage without any knowledge of its fraudulent character and was a transferee in good faith and for consideration. On the 29th of October, 1897, the same property was again mortgaged to one B.P., who accepted the mortgage in ignorance of the existence of the mortgage of the 23rd of October, 1897. This mortgage was registered on the 22nd of March, 1898. B.P. afterwards brought a suit for sale on his mortgage impleading B as a defendant, as well as the mortgagor and the prior mortgagee. Held, that B was entitled to no relief as against B.P., though as against the mortgagor she was entitled to be paid the amount of the consideration named in the deed of transfer in her favour out of the surplus sale proceeds (if any) of the mortgaged property, and that the proviso to s. 53 of the Transfer of Property Act did not apply to the case as it was intended to safeguard rights already acquired. BASTI BEGAM v. BANARSI PRASAD, A.W.N. 1908, 116=5 A.L.J. 305=30 A. 297.

(215)—Mortgagor, purchase by, if and when extinguishes his mortgage—Mortgagee purchaser, rights of, to fall back upon mortgage—Mortgage, if and when kept alive—Equity—Lis pendens, doctrine of, when applies.—Although a security is extinguished upon the actual sale of the mortgaged properties and distribution of the proceeds, yet, a mortgagee, who has purchased at a sale in execution of a decree upon his mortgage, is entitled to rely upon his mortgage as a shield against a subsequent encumbrancer. (30 C. 599, R.; 31 C. 863, Expl.) The question whether a mortgage which has been satisfied is to be construed as extinguished or kept alive for the benefit of the person who makes the payment, is simply a question of intention to be determined with reference to the surrounding circumstances as they exist at the time when the mortgage is discharged. Although, ordinarily, when the interests of the mortgagor and the mortgagee are united in the same person, it is not necessary for him to keep them distinct, equity will keep them distinct, when, from the intention of the party, either express or implied, it is for his benefit that they should be so kept; it depends upon the intention actual or presumed, of the person in whom the interests are united, and this person will be presumed to intend that which is most to his advantage. Where the mortgagee institutes an action to enforce his security, proceeds to judgment, sells the premises, and purchases them himself, it does not necessarily follow that he intends that his title under the mortgage should merge in the equity of redemption. A mortgage, however, will not be kept alive in aid of a fraud or wrong; a mortgage substantially satisfied may be kept alive in equity only when this is requisite to the advancement of justice, and this will never be allowed when the result will be, from the forms of law, to aid in perpetrating a fraud or an injury. 29 C. 154, R.) A purchaser of a share of an estate under s. 13 of Act XI of 1859 may be affected by the doctrine of lis pendens, if he makes his purchase during the pendency of a litigation to enforce a mortgage upon that property. (26 C. 966, R.) In the case of a mortgage suit, the lis pendens continues after the decree nisi, and the doctrine of lis pendens is applicable to proceedings to realize the mortgage after the decree for sale. (2 C. L.J. 288, R.) But where, as in the present case, the purchase at the revenue sale was effected some time after the mortgage sale had been confirmed, there was no lis pendens on the mortgage pending at the date of the revenue sale. BHAWANI KOER v. (218)—Mortgage—Priority—Decree obtained on a prior mortgage satisfied by execution of a fresh mortgage in favour of decree-holder—Priority over subsequent mortgages.—Where a decree-holder, prior to the actual sale of property in execution of his mortgage decree, takes from the judgment-debtor a fresh mortgage in lieu of the amount due on the decree, he is entitled to the benefit of the prior incumbrance which had been created between the original mortgage and the new security. A decree was obtained for sale upon a mortgage in 1901. The decree-holder took certain property in satisfaction of the decree in 1903, but did not certify the adjustment to the Court. He then executed the decree and sale was ordered by the Court. The judgment-debtor executed a fresh mortgage deed in 1904 in lieu of the decree, and thus the decree was satisfied. In the meantime, another mortgage had been executed. Held, that the mortgage of 1904 had priority over the latter mortgage. RAHIM-UN-NISSA v. BADRI DAS, 8 A.L.J. 112=9 Ind. Cas. 205=33 A. 368. out claiming any relief—Effect—Effect of disputing prior mortgage and asking for sale free of encumbrances.—In a former suit for sale on a mortgage, the then plaintiff set out the prior mortgage of one of the defendants, but did not make any allegation as to the amount, if any, then due under it, nor ask that the sale should be made subject to it or free of it. Held, that the decree for sale, though silent as to the prior mortgages, must not be understood to have negatived them. (220)—Prior and puisne mortgages—Estoppel.—In 1887, B mortgaged the land in suit to K, who in the same year mortgaged his mortgage rights together with other properties to N. A further charge was created by K in 1890, by a mortgage which also included some of the lands held by K in ownership by purchase, N having sued on his mortgages of 1877 and 1890, obtained a decree in 1896 against K personally as well as against the mortgaged properties. In execution of his decree, N applied for attachment and obtained prohibitory orders under s. 268 of the Civil Procedure Code, which enjoined K from recovering the mortgage money from B until further orders. N further obtained attachment orders under s. 276 of the Civil Procedure Code. B with the leave of Court mortgaged in 1896 the land in suit to N. In 1902, K brought a suit for recovery of possession of mortgaged land in the mortgage executed in his favour in 1887. N pleaded that the suit was barred by limitation and on the ground of acquiescence and estoppel. B in his application for leave to make a private alienation of property to satisfy the decree of N, had admitted the mortgage in favour of K. Held, that the suit was not barred by limitation, for under s. 19 of the Limitation Act, the application for leave to mortgage made by B operate as an acknowledgment of K's right and saved limitation. Held, also, that K was estopped from questioning the mortgage of 1896 or setting up his prior mortgage rights as a mortgagee against N as he had led N to believe that the mortgage of 1896 was proper and acceptable to him. *KANSI RAM v. The subsequent mortgagee also obtained a decree on his mortgage and purchased the property at a sale held under that decree. In a suit brought by the plaintiff against the subsequent mortgagee, in which the prior mortgagee was not made a party: Held,—that without prejudice to the rights of the first mortgagee and as between the plaintiff and the defendant, the latter could be allowed to redeem the former only upon payment of what was now due on the first mortgage—and not merely what the first mortgagee or the plaintiff himself had paid for the property. *GIRISH CHANDRA NANDI v. R.) Whatever rights the second mortgagee as such may have at the date of his mortgage, whether to possession (if his mortgage be one with possession and the previous mortgage, without it) or to sale or foreclosure under s. 67, Tr. P. Act, such rights remain altogether unaffected by the suit of the first mortgagee, without the second being a party to it and the sale in execution of his decree. He has also the right to redeem the prior mortgage, if it has not been extinguished by merger in the equity of redemption. The first mortgagee preserves his priority in spite of his purchase of the equity of redemption behind the back of the second mortgagee. The second mortgagee may, if he chooses, still redeem the first. Redemption is an equitable claim or, in India, a legal right which he may seek to enforce, and not a liability which he may be compelled to discharge. Held, also, (1) that a second mortgagee is entitled to the same rights as the first mortgagee with reference to his security, having regard to the nature of his mortgage; (2) that the purchaser of the equity of redemption after the first mortgage and the second mortgagee both stand on the same footing with reference to their respective rights against the first mortgagee, when they have not been impleaded in suit instituted by the

him on his mortgage; (3) that those rights are unaffected by the suit of the first mortgagee to which they are not made parties and the decree passed therein and the sale made in pursuance thereof; and (4) that the purchaser in such a suit, whether it is a first mortgagee or a stranger, does not acquire the rights of the mortgagor as at the first mortgage, but only those that subsist in him at the date of suit. *MULLA VITTIL SEETHI v. C was made thereafter subject to a subsequent mortgage. A and B were sold in execution of a decree enforcing the first mortgage and were purchased by the decree-holder. The decree-holder sought to recover the balance of his mortgage decree by sale of C. Held, that the principles underlying ss. 81 and 82, Transfer of Property Act, do not apply, and that property C is liable for the balance of the mortgage decree without regard to the burden of the second mortgage. GUL MAHOMED v. LOTOMAL, 4 S.L.R. 224 = 9 Ind. Cas. 725.

M took a subsequent mortgage of the same property expressly subject to S's mortgage. After M's mortgage, S obtained a decree on his mortgage, advanced a further sum and took another mortgage for the amount due under the mortgage decree and for the amount subsequently advanced. M claimed priority over S. Held, that S did not lose his priority by reason of the second mortgage under which a fresh advance of money was also made. The second mortgage cannot be construed as a surrender of S's rights as against M so as to convert M into a first mortgagee and relegate S to the position of a second mortgagee. The question whether a mortgage which has been satisfied is to be construed as extinguished or kept alive for the benefit of the person who makes the payment is simply a question of intention to be determined with reference to surrounding circumstances as they exist at the time when the mortgage is discharged. (7 C.L.J. 1, 11 I.A. 126, 10 I.A. 62, 29 I.A. 9, 20 M. 486, 16 C. 523, F.; 13 B. 348, D.; 26 M. 19, R.) The law imputes to a person an intention to act according to his interest. In the Court below no objection was taken to the suit on the score of the want of necessary parties, but on appeal, it was contended that the original mortgagor should have been made a party. Held, that the contention could not be considered in appeal and ought to have been put forward in the Court of first instance. Held, also, that a sub-mortgagee is entitled to a decree for sale of his mortgagor's interest and may even obtain a decree for sale of the original mortgagor's interest. *SITA RAM v. None of these had been made parties in the first mortgagee's suit, the latter not having had notice of their interest in the mortgaged properties. Held—that it was not obligatory on the first mortgagee to institute a fresh suit for sale on his mortgage against these persons, and a suit for recovery of possession of the properties, on the basis of his purchase, was maintainable. He sued on this sub-mortgage and obtained a decree for the sale of the mortgaged property as well as a personal decree. In execution, the land mortgaged to the 2nd defendant under the mortgage of 1892 was put up for sale and purchased by the plaintiff and he obtained possession, but was dispossessed under s. 335 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1882, at the instance of the 1st defendant who alleged that the mortgage had been redeemed. In a suit by the plaintiff to recover possession, it was held, that as the rights of a sub-mortgagee could not be affected by transactions between the original mortgagee and the mortgagor effected after notice of the sub-mortgage, the plaintiff was entitled to the possession of the lands, and that, he could not be met by the plea of payment of the original mortgage after the date of the sub-mortgage, when the same had not been made before notice of the sub-mortgage. NARAYANA MUDALI v. RAGHAVAMMAL, 18 M.L.J. 462.

(233)—Subsequent mortgage, effect of.—A subsequent mortgage of the same lands with other lands for the same debt does not, in the absence of any intention to that effect, per se, extinguish the earlier mortgage or lower its priority. GOLUKNATH MISSER v. LALLA PREM LAL, 3 C. 307. [Appl., 10 B. 88; R., 13 B. 348, 16 C. 523, A.W.N. 1886, 18.]

(234)—Effect of payment of prior mortgage by subsequent encumbrances as against intermediate charge—New relief claimed for the first time in appeal—General relief, Prayer for, Effect of.—One of the defendants, S, the proprietor of a village, mortgaged it to G. P. After that, in January 1890, he sold the property to his mother, his wife, and D, his son's wife. In March 1890, he executed another mortgage to G. P., in substitution of the former deed. G. P. sued S. and the three women for possession of the village, and was duly placed in possession. S's mother and the wife of D died, and D became proprietor of 2/3rds of the village. In May 1893, D mortgaged 2/3rds of the village to the plaintiff. In June 1893, D, S. and S's wife sold the village to the second defendant B for Rs. 7,000 of which Rs. 3,800 were left with him wherewith to pay off G. P. In March 1894, B purchased all the rights of G. P. In October 1895, the plaintiff instituted the present suit against D, B, and S for recovery of his mortgage-money by sale of the property mortgaged to him. Held, that B, the vendee of the mortgagor, having acquired the right of the first mortgagee, was as much entitled to use it as a shield against the second mortgagee as is a first mortgagee who has acquired the rights of the mortgagor. Held, also, that, in such a case as this, the second mortgagee must redeem the first mortgage before he can put the property up for sale. The plaintiff did not in his plaint expressly ask to be allowed to redeem the defendant's mortgage, nor was the point taken in his grounds of appeal; but in the course of his argument he asked that, if the mortgaged property could not be sold subject to the first mortgage, he might be permitted to redeem the first mortgage and then put the property up for sale. Held, that under a prayer for general relief contained in the plaint, such permission might be granted to the plaintiff. *GUR PARSHAD v. The lower Courts found as a fact that the plaintiff paid the money, out of his own funds, to S. Plaintiff contended that he held the position of an equitable mortgagee and that he succeeded to all the rights possessed by S under his mortgage. Held that under the circumstances of the case, as the plaintiff had paid the mortgage amount to S, there was a strong presumption that it was the intention of the parties that the plaintiff was to hold the same position as that held by S as mortgagee. [R., 32 P.R. 1903.] It was further argued on behalf of the defendant that if plaintiff had obtained the rights of a mortgagee in 1876, he would have pleaded this in a suit against him which the present defendant had brought against him in 1879 to recover possession of the mortgaged land. It was, however, held that nothing could be inferred against him from the fact that, in the former suit, he did not plead his rights as mortgagee. The contention that the present plaintiff (defendant in the former suit), not having set up his title as mortgagee as a defence to that suit, was debarred by s. 13, Civ. Pro. Code, Expl. II, from maintaining the present suit based upon the allegation that he was the mortgagee, was held by the Chief Court to be untenable. The former suit was brought by the present defendant to obtain possession of the land; the defendant (now plaintiff), never contended that he was under the terms of his mortgage entitled to possession of the land, and the defence that he was mortgagee would have been no answer to the former suit for possession unless he could have shown that, as mortgagee, he was entitled to retain possession. SHEIKH MEHR ALI v. MUSSAMMAT AZIM BIBI, 59 P.R. 1882. [R., 32 P.R. 1903.]

(236)—Mortgagee accepting deed of further charge from some of the mortgagors, effect on integrity of original mortgage.—Held, that the integrity of the original mortgage was not destroyed by the mortgagee's acceptance of a deed of further charge executed by some only of the original mortgagors secured on their own share of the mortgaged property. *THAKUR SINGH v. (237)—Substitution of new mortgage in place of old mortgage—Interest of persons in old mortgage subsists in new mortgage.—A mortgage was executed in the name of one of several brothers. Subsequently a partition took place amongst the brothers, by which all joint property, except the debts secured by this mortgage, was separated. After partition, the brother, in whose name the mortgage-deed stood, got it replaced by another mortgage-deed. Held, that the mortgage substituted for the original mortgage must be deemed to be a mortgage executed in favour of all the brothers and must enure for the benefit of all. *SAT NARAIN TEWARI v. mortgagee—Apportionment among several properties.—While the Court may, in a suit where a prior incumbrancer is a party defendant, either order that the sale of the property should be held subject to the prior mortgage or that it should be sold free from the incumbrance of that mortgage if the prior incumbrancer so consents, there is no adequate authority for holding, in a suit brought by a second mortgagee to bring to sale one out of several properties over which the first mortgagee holds a lien, that the first mortgagee can be compelled to assent to an apportionment of his lien among the different properties. MA KYAW v. MA SHWE ME, 1 L.B.R. 210. (25 W.R. 388, 9 C. 406, 22 C. 33, D.)

(239)—Prior and puisne mortgagees—Third mortgagee advancing money to pay off first mortgage—Preferential right of third mortgagee over the second mortgagee—Money advanced to pay off prior mortgage—Presumption.—The presumption, generally speaking, in the absence of any evidence to the contrary, is that a person, whose money goes to satisfy a prior mortgage, intends to keep alive that prior mortgage for his own benefit. (10 C. 1035, P.C., 3 C.W.N. 153, 4 C.W.N. 469, F.) So where a third mortgagee advanced some money, which was devoted to paying off the first mortgage, held, he would have a preferential right over the second mortgagee, and he would be entitled to a mortgage lien on the property in respect of the amount advanced by him. *SOOBAMANIAN CHETTY v. (240)—Mortgage — Joint mortgagors — Co-mortgagor, satisfaction by—Subrogation, extent of, right of—Interest—Tender—Part-payment—Deposit in Court—Appellate Court determining a larger sum to be due—Interest.—When one of several mortgagors redeems the whole mortgage, he acquires a charge on the share of each of his co-mortgagors for his proportion of the expenses properly incurred in redeeming the property. He is, however, not entitled as a matter of right to claim interest on the redemption money at the mortgage rate, from the date when he makes the payment to the date of realization. The right of subrogation is founded on equitable principles, and the extent to which subrogation would be carried in any particular case must be determined on equitable considerations. The principle that a mortgagee is not bound to accept any sum in part satisfaction of his decree applies only to cases where there is no dispute as to what is due. (16 B. 141, Appl.). Where a mortgagor brought into Court the whole sum found due by the Court of first instance, and, upon an appeal by the mortgagee, the appellate Court determined a larger sum to be due: Held, that the sum deposited operated as a payment pro tanto and interest would run after deposit only upon the difference. DIGAMBAR DAS v. HARENDRA NARAIN PANDAY, 11 C.L.J.

(242)—Mortgage of joint property, by receiver, pending partition suit—Attaching creditors of certain portion of the property, if entitled to priority over mortgagee.—The question in this case was whether the attaching creditors of the shares of certain of the co-parceners of a joint estate were entitled to priority over a mortgage executed by a Receiver pending a partition suit between the co-parceners. It was urged that the mortgage executed by the Receiver having been subsequent to the attachment, it must be held to be subject to them, and that the attaching creditors were, therefore, entitled to priority. Held, that it was immaterial what were the dates of the order under which the mortgage in question was executed or of the mortgage itself. The point was as to whether the suit for partition of the joint estate was pending at the time of the attachments, and, if it was, then, even if the order of the Court and the mortgage executed under that order had been subsequent to the attachment, the mortgagee would still be entitled to priority, because it would otherwise be impossible for the Court to carry into effect a partition of the joint estate, if particular creditors of particular owners could be heard to say that they are entitled to priority over persons, who have advanced money for the purpose of the partition, and on the faith of the Court's order giving them a first charge on the property to be partitioned. HERUMBOO NATH BANERJEE v. As the principle of subrogation by payment to the prior incumbrancer rests upon the presumption of an intention to keep alive the first mortgage as a shield against the puisne incumbrancer, it is safe to hold that that presumption is rebutted when the transaction in question contemplates the discharge of the puisne incumbrancer by payment out of the purchase-money. Govindasami Thevan v. Pro. Code (Act XIV of 1882), s. 316.—When a mortgage debt, for the payment of which a sale has been ordered, is satisfied by a third party who, when he makes the advance to satisfy the debt, obtains a security over the mortgaged property, the security created by the original mortgage-debt is not extinguished, and the original encumbrance, in respect of which the sale was ordered, enures to the benefit of the party making the payment (28 A. 778, 3 A.L.J. 630, A.W.N. 1906, 230, 29 M. 37, Rel. on.) But if the third party, when advancing the money, fails at the time to take any charge on the mortgaged property as security for his loan, but subsequently takes a mortgage over the same property, he is not entitled to claim that the second mortgage is a mortgage in continuation of the original mortgage which he has discharged, and the result is that he is not entitled led to step into the shoes of the original mortgagee. And if, in the interval, that is, between the advance made by him and the taking of the security subsequently, the property is transferred, his rights must be subject to that transfer. The title of an auction purchaser cannot be defeated by any transfer made by the judgment-debtor between the date of the sale and the date of the confirmation of the sale. Ram Saran Singh v. Khakhan Singh, 8 Ind. Cas. 657. (15 C. 546, 24 A. 475, A.W.N. 1902, 145, R.; 2 C.W.N. 589, 7 C.L.J. 1, F.)

(248)—Mortgage—Subrogation—Presumption of intention—Interest—Costs, if part of decree.—Where the kobala by which mortgaged properties were sold recited certain mortgages which were paid off out of the purchase-money, and the mortgage bonds were preserved by the purchaser. Held that there was a presumption of subrogation of the purchaser to the rights of the mortgagees; Held further—that, in order to establish right by subrogation, it was not necessary for the purchaser to prove any intention or agreement to subrogate, and the presumption from the circumstances would be in his favour. Where the contract rate of interest is not proved to be a penalty or unconscionable, the Court should not disturb it. Costs form a part of the entire decree and carry Court rate of interest. PRAYAG NARAIN KAFRI v. CHEDI RAI, 14 C.W.N. 1093.

(249)—Mortgage—Subrogation—Presumption of intention—Legal and equitable claim, if both may be urged together.—The principle of subrogation is one based on a presumption of intention which may be supported by circumstances or evidence of assignment or agreement or both. Where a debt on a mortgage decree obtained by N was paid off by money paid by plaintiff, for which the defendant executed a fresh mortgage bond, at an increased rate of interest, which recited the necessity for paying off the decretal debt, and which whilst actually mentioning one of three mesne mortgages falsely stated that the property was otherwise free from encumbrance: Held—That the plaintiff stepped into the shoes of N on the principle of subrogation and had priority over the mesne mortgagees. Subrogation by intention confers an equitable right and subrogation by agreement a legal claim. It is therefore open to a party to base his claim on both intention and agreement. TARA SUNDARI DEBI v. KHEDAN LAL SAHU, 14 C.W.N. 1089. (5 C.L.J. 611, D.; 6 C.L.J. 134, R.)

dealing with the property during the pendency of the suit, that all that happened was that the plaintiff took over mortgages which had come into existence prior to the mortgage suit of defendant No. 4 and thereby become subrogated to the rights of those mortgagees, who obviously could not have been bound by the doctrine of lis pendens, and that the plaintiff also could not have been so bound; Held, also, that, in the absence of evidence to the contrary, the presumption is that the plaintiff intended to keep those earlier mortgages alive for his benefit. TARA PROSAD MANDAL v. As he cannot redeem the mortgage piece-meal, he is bound to pay the whole amount of the mortgage, and if he does so, he is, by such payment, subrogated to the rights of the mortgagee and is entitled to priority over subsequent mortgagees from his co-mortgagor. A mortgagor who discharges a simple mortgage acquires a charge on the property of his co-mortgagor comprised in the mortgage for a rateable share of the debt. HAR PRASAD v. The appellant, however, had, in accordance with the terms of his mortgage-deed, satisfied two earlier mortgages, dated respectively 26th June 1886, and 28th June, 1887. In a suit for sale brought by the appellant on foot of his own mortgage, he claimed priority in respect of the amounts of these two earlier mortgages. Held, that the intention was that the earlier mortgages were to be kept alive for the benefit of the appellant and that he was entitled to priority. (10 C. 1035, 29 C. 154, 33 C. 1133, F.) Held, also that, in making the payment, the appellant did not act as the agent of the mortgagor. (255)—Construction of decree—Mortgage-decree—Direction to pay—Personal liability.—A direction that the defendant do pay a certain sum of money prima facie imposes a personal liability, though no doubt the words are not conclusive of the question. It may be that other clauses of the decree, if read together with such direction, might show that all was meant by what is prima facie a direction was to declare the amount for which the defendant was liable and the only immediate remedy intended to be given was against the mortgaged-property. A mortgage-decree, that gives concurrent remedies against the mortgaged-property and the judgment-debtor personally, is not in accordance with the Transfer of Property Act, but such a decree cannot be said to be null and void. It is only irregular in form, and if allowed to remain unimpeached cannot be called in question in execution. THE RAJAH OF KALAHASTI v. An interlocutory order for the examination of the accounts of a receiver cannot be treated as an adjudication of any right, claim or defence set up and is not a decree. An application for order absolute is to be presented to the Court which made the decree nisi sought to be made absolute, and even if the preliminary decree has been made in modification of the order of the Court of first instance by a Court of appeal, the application for order absolute may, both according to the practice of this Court and in law, be made to the Court of first instance which made the decree nisi; there is nothing in the law which requires that the application should be made to the Court of appeal. (23 A. 88, 31 A. 328, 23 M. 521, 25 C. 133, 12 C.W.N. 1028, R. & F.) In a mortgage suit in which a receiver of rents and profits has been appointed, the judgment ought to direct that in taking the account, the plaintiff should be charged with the amount, (if anything) paid into Court by the receiver, and with such a sum as should be in the receiver's hands, at the date of the certificate, and with such a sum (if any) as the plaintiff should submit to be charged with in respect of rents and profits to come into the receiver's hands prior to the order absolute. (11 C.L.J. 81, 155, Expl. & Diss.) The receiver appointed in the course of a mortgage suit should ordinarily be an indifferent person between the parties to the suit, one who has no pecuniary interest of his own, which might conflict with the duties of his office. The propriety of appointing the mortgagee himself as receiver, is extremely doubtful, and it would be prudent on the part of a plaintiff mortgagee if he does not accept the office of receiver. If, however, a plaintiff mortgagee accepts the office of receiver, he is liable to account, and the sums, if any, received by him must be applied towards the discharge of the judgment-debt, before he can obtain an order absolute for sale. If the mortgagee is himself the receiver, the sums actually realized or which with due diligence might have been realized by him, should be set off against the judgment-debt. SHAMULDHUN DUTT v. This was the first time the plaintiff heard of the sale and she now brought a suit on the mortgage-bond:—Held, that the plaintiff is entitled to sue the purchaser in possession, of whose possession she had no notice, on the mortgage as long as she is in time, and a suit for possession giving the defendant an opportunity to redeem would only be an alternative course of action involving precisely the same issues. BADAM KUMARI DASI v. (266)—Suit for recovery of mortgage-debt—Form of decree in use before the passing of the Transfer of Property Act—Attachment of non-mortgaged property—Effect of such attachment.—In a suit for recovery of mortgage-debt, a decree was passed, before the coming into force of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882, in favour of the plaintiff, declaring the amount due to him and that he had a lien on the property of the mortgagee for the amount so found to be due. In execution of that decree, the judgment-creditor attached certain property of the judgment-debtor other than the mortgaged property. This property was, in due course, sold, and subsequently certain mortgagees, who had taken a mortgage thereof pending the attachment, sued to have the sale set aside. Held, that, owing to the form in which the original decree was passed, the judgment-creditor had full power to attach and bring to sale in execution thereof any property of his judgment-debtor. RAM EARAN SINGH v. The plaintiff sued to recover the value of three khandies of paddy (not the paddy in specie) by the sale of hypothecated bullocks. The defendants admitted the debt but prayed for instalments. Held, (1) that the proper decree in the case would be a decree nisi in the first instance, for the replacement of paddy and in case of default for the sale of existing hypothecated property with liberty to apply in case the amount is not realized: the decree to be made absolute on the expiration of six months, as an ordinary mortgage of lands; (2) that as six months were allowed for payment the question of instalments did not arise. SHIVRAM v. Code (Act XIV of 1882), s. 209—Practice of Court—Discretion of Court in matters of interest in special cases.*—When a decree has been made on the basis of a mortgage and a date for payment of whatever might be due thereupon has been fixed in the decree, the matter in controversy passes from the domain of contract into the domain of judgment. The decree decides finally the rights and liabilities of the parties, which must thenceforth be ascertained by a reference to the decree and to the decree alone. It is not open to either party to go behind the decree and rely upon the terms of the original contract. The interest to be allowed after the date fixed for payment should have regard to the aggregate sum due on that date and not merely the principal amount mentioned in the mortgage-bond. (24 C. 150, 5 C.L.J. 106, F.) According to the usual practice, interest is no doubt allowed at 6 per cent. after the date fixed for payment, and although the Court would hesitate in any ordinary case to depart from what has been the well-settled practice as to the rate of interest in mortgage suits after the date fixed in the decree for payment, there can be no question that, in any special case where the circumstances justify a (271)—Suit to recover interest and compound interest—Mortgage—Construction—Remand.—The plaintiffs sued to recover from the defendants the unpaid amount of interest due to the plaintiffs from the 21st July 1898 till the 21st July 1903, on the amount payable to the latter under a registered mortgage-bond dated the 21st July 1893 passed by the defendant No. 1 for himself and as manager of his joint family to the plaintiffs' deceased father, together with another amount representing compound interest on Rs. 1,200 accruing due every year during the said period as stipulated in the bond. There were various pleas raised in defence, and the first Court after considering fourteen issues substantially decreed the suit. But on appeal the High Court dismissed it on the ground, that upon a proper construction of the mortgage bond, there was no personal covenant on the part of the mortgagor to pay interest from year to year, and that therefore, the plaintiffs were not entitled to bring the suit. Held, reversing the High Court, that there was a covenant in the mortgage-bond to pay interest from year to year and that the case should be remanded to the High Court so that the other issues might be dealt with. *MADAPPA HEDGE bin GANAP HEGDE v. It is not open to him to contend that the interest which he professed to transfer to the mortgagee could not validly be transferred to the latter. A minor son of the mortgagor who was governed by the Mitakshara School of Hindu Law was no party to the mortgage, but was joined as defendant in the mortgage-suit; it was ruled that his father, one of the executants of the mortgage-deed, should not act as his guardian ad litem. An original contract is discharged when satisfaction has been entered upon the original bond. If the discharge has been entered, the presumption is that the old contract has ceased to exist and the new contract has been substituted in its place. To effect a novation pursuant to an agreement to accept a new contract, the contract which is substituted must be one capable of enforcement in law. Where, although no cash payment was made, an endorsement was made on the mortgage security to the effect that interest had been paid and a rokka was taken by the mortgagee for the precise sum and was included in a subsequent mortgage. Held, that under s. 6 of the Sonthal Perganas Settlement Regulation, the rokka amount should be excluded from the subsequent mortgage and the endorsement on the mortgage-bond should be ignored. If the debtor voluntarily agrees to pay interest or damages upon sums used or retained, it is not open to him to contend later that the agreement to pay such interest or damages was without consideration. *RAMJIBAN SAHA v. (272)—Mortgage-decree—Construction—Proper form of decree—Decree nisi—Decree absolute—Execution—Court executing decree, power of—"Date of realisation," meaning of—Calculation of interest on mortgage.—A Court executing a decree is precluded from making a proper decree—a decree which should have been drawn up—it can only construe the decree without adding to or subtracting from it. The prevailing practice in the Province of Bengal in mortgage cases is to allow interest at the contract rate up to the date fixed for payment by the decree nisi, and thereafter interest at the usual Court rate of 6 per cent. per annum, and the "date of realisation" is understood generally to mean the date fixed for payment and not the date of actual payment by the mortgagors on realisation by execution sale, though occasionally words are imported to signify the date of actual realisation. The words "the date of realisation" in the decree mean the date fixed for payment by the decree, that is, a date within and not after the period of grace. *MAHA PERSHAD SINGH v. sub-s. (2) and is appealable as such. In directing the distribution of the sale-proceeds, the Court should proceed upon the assumption that each of the prior encumbrancers was entitled to interest at the contract rate up to the date of the confirmation of the sale, which was the earliest date on which money became really available for distribution amongst the different mortgagees. BENODE LAL BANDOPADHYA v. SRIKRISTO CHUCKERBUTTY, 8 Ind. Cas. 4.

(275)—Mortgage — Interest — Charge.—It is well settled that, when there is nothing in the mortgage-deed inconsistent with the interest being a charge on the mortgaged property, it becomes just as much a charge on the security as the principal debt. When a mortgagor agreed with the prior mortgagee that all the produce of the mortgaged land would go to him in lieu of interest on his loan, and within a month of the prior mortgage executed a mortgage in favour of another person, which was silent as to the first mortgage and purported to give the second mortgagee a right to possession and to recover his interest in the first place from the produce on the land, held, that, since there was no mention of the first mortgage in the second mortgage and the interest on the first mortgage swallowed up the entire produce of the land, it was reasonable to hold that the second mortgage was a fraud on the part of the mortgagor, and the second mortgagee was entitled to a charge on the land for both the principal and the interest. WADHOO SHAH v. Even if s. 86, T.P. Act, does not bind the Court to award the contract rate of interest for the period between the date of the mortgage-decree and the date fixed for payment, the Court may in its discretion award that rate, especially in a case like the present where the mortgagee cannot enforce payment before the time fixed. *VEERA REDDI v. (285)—Interest—Application of the rule of damdupat to.—The rule of damdupat applies in all cases as between Hindu debtors and creditors, both in respect of simple as also mortgage-debts. The rule, however, does not apply where the mortgagee has been placed in possession, and is accountable for profits received by him as against the interest due. But where these profits are by the terms of the bond received for only a portion of the interest on the mortgage-debt, the general rule of damdupat will govern such mortgage accounts. *SUNDARABAI v. The Transfer of Property Act has not affected the application of the rule of damdupat in the case of a Hindu mortgagor. The right of a mortgagee to sue for his principal and interest is a right arising from a contract, and must be taken to be made subject to the usages and customs of the contracting parties. *JEEVANBAI v. (289)—Assignment of mortgage, amount of consideration of, for the purposes of registration.—The question in this case was whether the deed of assignment of the mortgage in question required to be registered. The case turned on the point whether the said assignment by one A.P. to B.P. conveyed an interest of greater value than Rs. 100. The lower appellate Court decided that the assignment did not require registration on the ground that, as the deed recited that Rs. 5 had been paid to the assignor A.P. as consideration for the assignment, that amount alone must be taken into consideration for the purposes of registration and that the benefit derived by any third persons from the transaction could not be included. The High Court reversed the decree holding that the consideration mentioned in the deed was not merely the Rs. 5 paid to the assignor, but the agreement of the assignee B.P. to withdraw the suit instituted by him against one P.D., if the assignor A.P. executed the instrument assigning the mortgage. As to the money-value to be put on this part of the consideration, the Court held that the value which the parties put upon it must be taken to have been the sum covered by the stamp used for the instrument which would be Rs. 3,300. NAGO KANATURIA v. paid in part—Mortgagee's rights.—The defendant executed to the plaintiff a mortgage-bond on plain paper. The bond recited that certain immoveable property was mortgaged as a security for Rs. 1,300; of this sum, only Rs. 775 were paid. The bond also contained a stipulation that the defendant should within fifteen days from the date of the execution give in writing a mortgage-deed on a stamped paper and get it registered. This the defendant failed to do and he did not also pay Rs. 525. The plaintiff then got the bond registered on payment of penalty; and sued the defendant for recovery of Rs. 775 from defendant by sale of the mortgaged property: Held, (1) that the bond created actual mortgage and was not merely an agreement to create one. It was not a document which merely created a right to demand another document but created as between the parties a charge in the nature of a mortgage; (2) That the plaintiff was entitled to hold the mortgage good for the sum of Rs. 775. MOTICHAND v. (292)—Contract Act, s. 39—Mortgage—Part of the consideration unpaid—Rescission—Conveyance—Contract.—A registered mortgage, the consideration of which has partially failed, is enforceable at the suit of the mortgagee, inasmuch as the interest in the property mortgaged passed to him immediately upon registration. Per Karamat Hussain, J.—There is a fundamental distinction between a contract and a conveyance, i.e., a transfer of an interest in land, and for this reason the rights and duties of the parties to a contract are quite different from the rights and duties of the parties to a conveyance. A mortgage under the Transfer of Property Act is a transfer of an interest in the land mortgaged and not a mere contract. S. 39 of the Contract Act has no application, for the simple reason that it deals with contracts, and a mortgage when registered is not a contract but a transfer. (294)—Hindu widow—Interest provided by unregistered "rukks"—Appeal, plea taken for the first time in.—A Hindu talukdar executed three mortgages in favour of the plaintiff, and with each mortgage gave the mortgagee a rukka or written promise to pay additional interest. After the talukdar's death, his widow executed a fourth mortgage for a portion of the balance due for interest including that stipulated in the rukks. There was no evidence that an enquiry was made into the means and circumstances of the widow, or that the account had ever been put before her or settled by her. Held, that the mortgage executed by the widow was invalid and could not be enforced. Held, that the rukks, being unregistered, did not affect the mortgaged property and could not fetter the equity of redemption in that property. Held, further, that the question that in case the mortgage executed by the widow was not upheld, a decree might be given against the estate of the deceased talukdar based on his personal liability under the rukks, not having been raised in the plaint, or, referred to in the pleadings or issues, it could not be dealt with in appeal. TIKA RAM v. In such a case, before the mortgagee can succeed, he must show (a) that the mortgage was with consideration and for necessity and (b) that the minor's share was mortgaged for his benefit. Where a minor's two uncles undertake to pay his father's just debt by including it in their own bonds, and afterwards mortgage their share as well as that of the minor in the ancestral land, in consideration of that bond-debt, the mortgage cannot be enforced so far as the minor's share is concerned as such an alienation cannot be considered for his benefit. (49 P.R. 1911=136 P.W.R. 1911, F.) Where a portion of the consideration for a mortgage by a male proprietor of his ancestral holding is not for necessity, the mortgage is incomplete so far as his reversioners are concerned, and on his death the mortgagee cannot maintain a suit for possession of the property on the strength of that mortgage against the reversioners. Where A and B jointly and severally execute a mortgage of their shares as well as their minor nephew's share, and on the suit for possession of the property against A, the sons of B and the nephew, the mortgage is found ineffective so far as the shares of the nephew and the sons of B are concerned, the mortgagee is entitled to get possession of the share of A in consideration of the entire mortgage-money entered in the mortgage-deed. In case of registered mortgage-deed acknowledging receipt of consideration, the onus of its non-receipt lies on the person executing the deed. A ground of attack, mentioned in the plaint in respect of which no issue was drawn by the first Court, and which was not repeated either in the written grounds of 1st or 2nd appeal, cannot be raised at the time of argument before the Chief Court. *HIRA SINGH v. The document was registered at Fyzabad. The transferees obtained succession certificate in respect of the debt. In a suit for sale on foot of the mortgage against the heirs of the original mortgagor, held, (1) that the sale-deed in favour of the plaintiffs was void for want of proper registration, and (2) that, the plaintiffs having obtained a succession certificate, under s. 16 of the Succession Certificate Act, it was conclusive against the heirs of the original mortgagor. *AZMAT ALI v. But, when B subsequently applied for the benefit of the Indian Insolvency Act, 1848, C handed over the property to the Official Assignee and applied to the Court to direct the Official Assignee to sell the property and pay him the sale-proceeds towards the amount due to him on his mortgage. A also put in his claim to the sale proceeds based upon his mortgage, and claimed priority by reason of his prior registered mortgage. Held, the creditor who completed his title by taking possession is superior to and is entitled to priority over the creditor who, although his mortgage was prior in date, did not obtain possession. *S.R.M. Any question of contribution which may arise by reason of the purchase by the decree-holder of some of the mortgaged properties, must be worked out, not in execution-proceedings, but in a separate suit properly framed, and in the presence of all the necessary parties. *AMEER CHAND v. Plaintiff paid cash for his purchase, but the others undertook to pay the price to the mortgagee towards the mortgage. It was not found that the property was sold to the plaintiff free of incumbrances. The assignee of S, the mortgagee, brought to sale the property purchased by the plaintiff, and the plaintiff, to save it, paid up part of what was due on the mortgage. Plaintiff now sued for contribution and contended that the other purchasers, being bound to pay Rs. 1,200 towards the mortgage, must be held liable for that amount, and that rateable distribution over all the property should be made only for the balance. Held, that the contribution must be calculated on the footing that all the properties were liable for the full amount. S. 40, Transfer of Property Act, will not apply, because there was no contract between the plaintiff and his vendors, that the lands sold to others should be liable for Rs. 1,200 of the mortgage money. *SESHAGIRI AIYAR v. (310)—Mortgage—Contribution, right to—Property purchased by different vendees—Undertaking by one vendee to discharge encumbrances—Second vendee buying free of encumbrance—Interest—Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882 s. 82.—Certain persons were owners of shares in properties X and Y. There were mortgages on these of different dates. X was sold to the plaintiffs, and they were left in possession of funds sufficient to discharge all the encumbrances that existed on X and Y. The vendors, however, subsequently took some money from plaintiffs, and it was agreed between them that the vendors themselves would pay off to the mortgagee the money they had taken from plaintiffs, and that the balance, the greater part of the debts, would be paid by plaintiffs. Subsequently to this, shares in Y were sold as "free of encumbrances" to the several defendants. The money due on the mortgages were not paid by either the vendors or plaintiffs. The mortgagee brought a suit for sale, and having obtained a decree, proclaimed, portions of X and Y for sale. In order to stop the sale, plaintiffs paid up the decree and sued for contribution. Held that, under s. 82, Transfer of Property Act, the shares purchased by the plaintiffs and defendants, respectively, were originally liable to contribute rateably to the mortgage-debts. The right to enforce contribution was essentially an equitable right, and the defendants were entitled to resist the claim on equitable grounds. It was not the intention of any of the parties concerned after the sale in favour of the plaintiffs that the shares in X and Y should contribute rateably to the mortgage-debts, and the defendants were therefore entitled to hold the property free from liability to contribute to those debts. The plaintiffs agreed to discharge the greater part of the mortgage debts, and if they had done so at the time stated in their agreement with the vendors, they would have been considered to have done so out of the funds supplied to them for the purpose, and would not have been entitled to claim contribution either from the vendors or from subsequent purchasers of the property in respect of the payments so made. The fact that the plaintiffs made the payment at a later date and under pressure of a threatened sale of the property made no difference in the rights of the parties. When contribution is ordered between different funds, each of them ought to be placed in the same position as if it had contributed its proper proportion at the time at which it ought to have done so. *MUHAMMAD ABBAS v. holder, and by consent the sale was set aside. Held, in a suit by him against the other mortgagors for contribution, that, although the defendants were not liable under s. 69 of the Contract Act, the plaintiff not having paid the money to prevent the sale, the defendants, who kept the property, were bound in equity to pay their share of the money which the plaintiff had paid to release the property. Then the second mortgagee, the plaintiff, paid to the defendant, the first mortgagee, Rs. 215 for the express purpose that the property purchased by the second mortgagee should be released from all liability under the defendant's decree. The defendant was unable to release the property by reason of objections taken by persons interested in the equity of redemption. The property was, therefore, sold and purchased by a stranger. The defendant applied the sale-proceeds towards the satisfaction of his decree. The plaintiff brought this suit for recovery of the amount, Rs. 215: Held, that there is no answer to the claim of the plaintiff, who should not be driven to a contribution-suit to enable him to realise a proportionate amount from persons who have been benefited by the payment he made. GULAB RAI v. (313)—Sale by mortgagor of certain parcels of mortgaged property to different people—One purchaser forced to pay the mortgage amount—Contribution—Time of valuation—Transfer of Property Act, s. 40.—A mortgaged to S for Rs. 1,300 certain properties of which three parcels were sold, one parcel to third defendant's father, another to fourth defendant, and a third parcel to the plaintiff. The plaintiff paid cash, but the other purchasers each undertook to pay the price to the mortgagee towards the mortgage. Subsequently, S's assignee brought the plaintiff's property to sale, and the plaintiff, to save it, paid part of what was due on the mortgage and sued for contribution against the owners of the other two parcels. It was contended for the plaintiff, that the third and the fourth defendants, being bound to pay the purchase-money in respect of their lands, towards the mortgage, must be held liable for that amount, and the rateable distribution over all the property should be made only for the balance. In dismissing the contention, held, that s. 40 of the Transfer of Property Act could apply only if there were found to be a contract between the plaintiff and his vendors that the land sold to other purchasers should be liable for that portion of the mortgage money covered by the price of the lands they purchased, and there was no such contract in this case. Held, also, that the plaintiff who must be taken to have purchased the land subject to the mortgage, cannot claim the benefit of an agreement between the prior purchaser and his mortgagors, but that, if the plaintiff had purchased the property free from the mortgage, then he could claim the benefit of the covenant between his vendor and the prior purchaser. Held, further, that the benefit of such a covenant did not pass with the title to the mortgagor's assignee, but might be accorded, if the Court should find it necessary in order to make effectual or preserve any rights of the mortgagor. Held, also, that as it was admitted that whatever changes have occurred in the value of the land since the date of the mortgage have equally affected all the mortgaged lands, it does not matter what date is chosen provided that the same date be chosen for all. In this case the date of the sale to the plaintiff was chosen. SESHAGIRI IYER v. VYTHIALINGA PILLAI, 6 M.L.T. 119.

(314)—Consideration as recited in deed, not paid—Effect—Minor—Money and articles supplied to—Mortgage after majority—Validity—Contract Act, s. 25 (2).—Where the mortgagor, at the time when he executed the mortgage-deed, had not actually received the full sum of consideration as recited in the deed and admitted before the Registrar to have been received, the mortgage cannot, solely on that account, be held to be voidable at his option. The rule that a mortgage would be inoperative against the mortgagor, if the mortgagee fails to carry out his promise to pay the amount of consideration in its entirety, cannot apply to a case where the consideration relates not to a future payment but to a payment in the past. (59 P.R. 1907, F.B., 103 P.R. 1906, 100 P.R. 1889, R.) Though a promise by an infant is, in law, a mere nullity and void, yet an agreement made by a person of full age to compensate wholly or in part a promisee, who has already voluntarily done something for the promisor, even at a time when the promisor was minor, falls within the purview of s. 25 (2) of the Contract Act. (16 M.L.J. 422, Diss.; 86 P.R. 1888, 11 C.W.N. 135, 10 B.H.C. 214, R.) Therefore, a mortgage executed by a person after attaining majority, to secure advances of money made or value of goods supplied to him during minority, will be valid and will bind his legal representatives to the extent of compensating the plaintiff for moneys and articles actually supplied to that person during minority and for any sums of money and articles supplied after he came of age. KARM CHAND v. guardian ad litem upon mortgage — Minor's right on attaining majority to repudiate alienation of his share by mother—Guardian—Mahomedan Law—Limitation Act, sch. ii, art. 12—Equity.—H, the owner of an 8 annas share in a village devised one-fourth thereof to his wife F and her three sons H.M., S.M., and A.M. in equal shares. He stated in his will that his 8 annas share was subject of a mortgage for Rs. 300 of which Rs. 75 should be paid by F and her three sons. When H died in February 1886 all the interest on the mortgage had been paid up to the end of December, 1885. On February 15th, 1889 H.M. who had attained majority, and F purporting to act for herself and her two sons, S.M. and A.M., who were still minors, mortgaged the 2 annas share to the defendant for Rs. 800. In September 1894 the defendant obtained a decree upon the mortgage in a suit in which F was appointed guardian ad litem for the minors and in execution of the decree in that suit he purchased the property himself. On October 18th, 1898, S.M. sold his rights to the plaintiff R. On June 1st 1899, the plaintiffs (A.M. & R.) sued the defendant for recovery of a one anna share, that is, six pies of A.M. and six pies of S.M. In the plaint, it was stated that A.M. attained majority on October 15th 1896, and S.M. on August 20th 1898. The defendant contended that the minors having been represented in their suit upon the mortgage by a properly appointed guardian were bound by the decree obtained therein, unless it was proved that their guardian had been guilty of fraud and negligence. He also contended that the suit was barred by art. 12, sch. ii of the Limitation Act. The Court passed a decree in favour of the plaintiffs for possession of the one anna share provided that they paid to the defendant Rs. 130 and interest thereon from July 15th 1889. This sum was made up of the proportionate amount for which the minors were liable for the mortgage debt due by their father and a sum which it was found that F had borrowed for their benefit. Held, that the decree obtained by the defendant did not stand in the way of the plaintiffs. Held, further, that F, not having at any time been appointed guardian of her minor sons or their property by any Court and under the Mahomedan law not being a near guardian, had no power to deal with the property of her minor sons and therefore the sale founded upon the mortgage effected by her conferred no title upon the defendant and did not need to be set aside by them. Held, therefore, that the suit was not barred by art. 12, sch. ii of the Limitation Act. Held, further that, considering the equities of the case, the plaintiffs should be compelled to pay the sum of Rs. 130 to the defendant before being allowed to recover their share. *MATADIN v. (316)—Mortgage — Joint Hindu family — Manager—Family property — Minority.—The suit was instituted by the assignee of a mortgage dated October 23, 1892, against one S.M., and others to recover the amount due thereon. The mortgage deed purported to have been made between the said S, of the first part, the said M, the only brother of S of the second part and the mortgagee of the third part. The said S was the sole mortgagor, and by the said deed, he, declaring that he was the absolute owner in possession of the property mentioned in the deed and that there was no sharer in the said property, purported to mortgage the said property to the mortgagee as security for the re-payment with interest of the money lent to him by the mortgagee. M, was made a party to the deed in order that the fact of his having signed it might afford evidence that he had assented to the taking of the loan by S and the granting of the mortgage. By the suit plaintiff sought to make M personally liable for the mortgage debt and interest and to bring to sale M's share in the mortgaged property, which, in fact, was ancestral property of the joint Hindu family which at the date of the mortgage consisted of the said S and M, whose father died leaving debts. It was to discharge those debts and some debts which had been contracted by S, that the mortgage sued on was executed. M pleaded that at the date of the mortgage he was a minor. The plaintiff contended that in borrowing the money from the mortgagee and in making the mortgage S had acted as the manager of the family and for the benefit and protection of the estate, and, consequently, it was immaterial whether M was or was not of full age at the date of the mortgage. Held, that S was, at the date of the mortgage, merely a co-sharer with his brother M in the property of the joint Hindu family of which they were members; that the mortgagee made insufficient inquiries and lent the money to S, not as the manager or even as a member of the joint Hindu family, but in his assumed position as absolute owner of an impartible estate; that S, on his own behalf and in his own interest, and not as representing M, discharged the debts which their father had contracted; that the mortgage was, not made by S, as the manager of the family or in any respect as representing M; and that M was a minor at the date of the mortgage, and, consequently, the mortgage-deed as against M and his interest in the estate was not merely voidable, but was void and of no effect, and must be regarded as a mortgage-deed to which M was not even an assenting party and as a mortgage-deed which did not affect him or his interest in the estate. RAJA BALWANT SINGH v. It is for the creditor to show that the rate of interest charged was one of necessity or of clear expediency for the benefit of the infant's estate, and, in the absence of proof of such necessity or expediency, nothing more than the ordinary rate of interest upon loans on good security can be allowed. Code must be interpreted as if, after the words 'under whom they or any of them claim' the words, 'by a title arising subsequently to the commencement of the former suit' were inserted.—It is not absolutely necessary to make puisne incumbrancers parties to a suit by the first mortgagee, and a sale in enforcement of the prior mortgage would defeat the rights of the puisne incumbrancer, who is conclusively presumed in jurisprudence to take with knowledge of the prior mortgage, or at least cannot take more than his mortgagor had to give. The puisne incumbrancer could only escape the decree on the prior mortgage by proving fraud or collusion, or he might prevent the sale in execution of it by redeeming the prior mortgage (1 A. 240, 4 A. 518, R.) [R., 10 A. 520.] Therefore, after a mortgage has been duly created, the mortgagor, in whom the equity of redemption is vested, no longer possesses any such estate as would entitle him to represent the rights and interests of the mortgagee in a subsequent litigation, so as to render the result of such litigation binding upon and conclusive against such mortgagee. *SITA RAM v. (6 B.

110, 7 C. 381, R.) A decision does not operate as res judicata between co-defendants, unless it is established that there was a conflict of interest amongst the defendants, that the adjudication between the defendants was necessary to give the appropriate relief to the plaintiffs and that the judgment did define the real rights and obligations of the defendants inter se. (31 C. 95, 5 C.L.J. 611, R.) As against persons who were not parties to a mortgage transaction, the recital in the mortgage deed that the consideration has been paid is no evidence, and the onus is upon the mortgagees to prove affirmatively the reality and necessity of the transaction. (6 C. 268, 17 A. 428, R.) As against the mortgagor, on the other hand, the recital in the deed is weighty evidence, and the onus lies upon the mortgagor to establish that the statement contained in the deed is untrue. What a party himself admits to be true may reasonably be presumed to be so, but the party may prove the statement to have been mistaken or untrue. (34 I.A. 27, R.) Where a plaintiff has rested his case upon fraud, when the case of fraud has failed, he cannot be permitted to support it upon an entirely different and inconsistent ground. Although, therefore, a suit, brought as one for possession, may, in the discretion of the Court, where the circumstances of the case permit it, be converted into one for redemption, on the assumption that the mortgage was valid and binding, a plaintiff must ordinarily succeed on the case he has made in the plaint and, unless there are special circumstances, an action instituted for purposes absolutely inconsistent with redemption cannot be converted into an action to redeem. The third was in July 1900 for 8 annas of the same property as also of another property in favour of the plaintiff and was said to be for the first mortgage debt as also for a fresh loan. In April 1901, the mortgagees in the second transaction brought a suit on their bond and made the plaintiff a party on the basis of the last mortgage, obtained a decree and bought the property. The plaintiff then brought the present suit on the basis of the last mortgage, alleging that, as it kept alive the lien created by the first bond, it was entitled to priority over the second. Held, he was bound to appear in the previous suit and raise this defence. By omitting to do so, he was precluded from setting up such a case now. Held, also, plaintiff was not bound in the suit of 1901 to disclose his first mortgage. MAHABIR PERSHAD

In 1881 he mortgaged the same property together with another share to the plaintiff and one S. In 1885 R brought a suit upon his mortgage and obtained a decree for sale of the mortgaged property. To this suit the mortgagees of 1881 were parties. Before this decree was actually put into execution, the heirs of the mortgagors redeemed half the property mortgaged from S, in 1893. In 1906 the prior mortgagee R, put his decree into execution and got the other half of the mortgaged property sold. On a suit by the plaintiff to recover half the mortgaged property, it was held that the mortgage security had with the consent of all the parties, viz., the heirs of the mortgagors and the mortgagees, been split up into two portions, and the portion redeemed in 1893 was not liable to the claim of the plaintiff, nor could the other half of the mortgaged share be recovered by the plaintiff, as whatever rights he had were lost in execution of the decree based on the prior mortgage. R sued the 1st defendant for recovery of the house No. 3 and the well, and his suit was dismissed. R then conveyed all his rights in houses Nos. 1 and 2 and the entire well to the plaintiff K. K now sued for a declaration of his right to the entire well and an injunction against the 1st defendant and another claiming under her. Held, that the 1st defendant's claim to one-half of the well became res judicata by reason of the decision in the suit between R and the 1st defendant. The plaintiff, as purchaser from R, is not in a better position than R, and is bound therefore to recognise the 1st defendant's equity of redemption in a moiety. The mortgage security came to an end by the conveyance executed by R in favour of the plaintiff who thereafter ceased to be in possession as mortgagee. Held, also, that the conveyance passed only a moiety of the well, and that the mortgage interest in the other moiety was extinguished by the discharge of the debt, and not transferred to R. The equity of redemption having been parted with, R would only be a trustee for the 1st defendant, a mere conduit pipe to pass the possession to him. (See s. 94, Indian Trusts Act). The discharge of the mortgage merely enlarges the security of the subsequent encumbrancer or adds to the interest of the owner of the equity of redemption. Held, that, though the 1st defendant was merely the owner of the equity of redemption in a moiety under the gift, and though the right to possession was outstanding in the mortgagee at the date of the gift, the mortgage having become discharged, she is entitled to possession of the moiety, and cannot be prevented from using the well as owner of such security. PONNAMAL v. years. S brought two suits on foot of his two mortgages, and the mortgagor mortgaged all her three properties to S on 31st August, 1888, the debt being repayable in twelve years. On 22nd July, 1903, the plaintiffs brought a suit for sale on foot of their mortgage and impleaded the heir of S as a puisne mortgagee. The latter set up his two mortgages of 1882 and 1883, and pleaded that the property could not be sold without these being redeemed. The plaintiffs, thereupon, amended their plaint and expressed their willingness to redeem the prior mortgages. They obtained a decree on 4th May, 1904, conditional on their paying the amount due on the prior mortgages upon doing which they could sell the property for the amount so paid and the amount due under their own mortgage. Upon the mortgagors failing to pay, the plaintiffs paid off the amount of the prior mortgages. The order absolute was passed on 26th August, 1905. One of the properties being sold, the amount realised by the plaintiffs left a balance still due to them. On a suit being brought to realise the balance on 12th February, 1909: Held, that the second suit was not maintainable on the principle that the defendant could not be vexed twice for the same cause: Held, also, that the plaintiffs were not entitled to a simple money-decree, the personal remedy on the two mortgages of 1882 and 1883 having become barred. MUHAMMAD HUSAIN v. A member of an undivided Hindu family mortgaged his share in the joint property to the plaintiff, and it was recited in the mortgage deed that the money was borrowed for the purpose of bringing a suit for partition against the mortgagor's co-parceners. A suit for partition was brought accordingly, by the mortgagor, but judgment was allowed to go against him by default. Subsequently the mortgagee instituted the present suit for possession of his mortgagor's share in the property in question. Held that the mortgagor could not be considered as the agent of the mortgagee in bringing his suit for partition, and the partition suit being subsequent to the mortgage, it did not operate as res judicata against the present suit by the mortgagee for possession. [R., 5 Bom. L.R. 3.] Where a usufructuary mortgagee brought a suit for mesne profits which was dismissed on the ground that his mortgagor was not in possession of his share in the property which belonged jointly to an undivided Hindu family, it was held that it did not operate as res judicata against a subsequent suit by the mortgagee for the possession of his mortgagor's share in that property. KRISHNAJI LAKSHMAN RAJVADE v. They did not challenge it in the lower appellate Court. Held, that they could not challenge them in second appeal. The sons and grandsons of a Hindu are bound by the mortgage created by the father, in lieu of antecedent debts which were not contracted for immoral purposes. In a suit brought by a prior mortgagee, both the mortgagor and the subsequent mortgagee were made parties. could not be res judicata as between the mortgagor and the subsequent mortgagee, in a suit brought by the subsequent mortgagee, on the strength of his mortgage. A suit was brought by a prior mortgagee, and the subsequent mortgagee was made a party. The subsequent mortgagee was given an opportunity to redeem the prior mortgagee, but he failed to do so. The property was put to auction free from all incumbrances and was purchased by a person who sold back the property to the heirs of the mortgagor. Held, in a suit brought by the subsequent mortgagee, that the property thus purchased by the mortgagor ceased to be security for the mortgage-debt of the subsequent mortgagee, and was, therefore, not liable for that debt. SAHDEO RAI v. as before left for payment to C. The essential conditions of both the mortgage-deeds were that A was to hold possession and pay interest at the stipulated rate; B was to pay off C and set free the land with him, on default of payment of interest in any one year, B was to be entitled to possession. It was not till 1904 that B paid off C and so secured for A the possession of the whole land. In 1907, B sued for possession on the allegation that interest for the first six years on Rs. 450 was paid by A, but nothing was paid thereafter. A pleaded that the suit must fail because of the non-payment of C's debt within a reasonable time, and further alleged that he had paid interest in full on Rs. 600 to date of suit. Held, that:—(1) The burden of proving non-receipt of consideration in the case of a registered deed lies on the executant or his representatives in interest. (2) In a suit by a mortgagee for possession against his mortgagor, if the right of the mortgagee to possession is established, it is sufficient to pass a decree for possession simpliciter, the matter of the amount of the lien being left to be decided upon redemption. (3) The suit was within time, as A himself asserted payment of interest within 12 years before date of suit. (4) By regular payment of interest A acquiesced in the continued possession by C of a portion of the land; that A acted as if the delay in paying C off was not unreasonable and made B understand that he did not intend to raise any objection on this score. (5) A could not plead that the mortgage was incomplete and ineffectual by reason of non-payment of C's debt within a reasonable time. (6) In deciding what is "reasonable time" for payment of the unpaid portion of mortgage money, the wishes and interest of the mortgagor are an important factor—in most cases they are the decisive factor. (7) The absence of a demand by the mortgagor upon the mortgagee for redemption of previous mortgage would not save the mortgagee from losing the benefit of his mortgage, by reason of the non-payment of the debt due to the previous mortgagee. *KIMAN v. The lower Courts agreed in finding that the land in suit, 4.72 acres or 17 yaukseiks, was all acquired by Ma Ka by inheritance during her coverture with Maung Sa. Plaintiff-respondent, who is still a minor, is the only grandson of Ma Ka and Maung Sa, who had three children, two of whom died without issue. The eldest son, Aung Pyo, had one son, plaintiff. Ma Ka died about 25 years ago; Aung Pyo died about 13 years ago and Maung Sa about 11 years ago. It was argued that the suit was barred by limitation, as it was said that Aung Pyo had 12 years within which to bring the suit from the death of Ma Ka. It was, therefore, urged that he was barred before his death and that Aung Myat was equally barred as claiming through him. Held, that it was not clear that Aung Pyo was time barred before he died, as appellant, Ma Shwe Hmon, herself stated that, at her marriage with Maung Sa, Aung Pyo was only 9 years old, and that, therefore, he was a minor when his mother died; and because Ma Shwe Hmon in her written statement said that Aung Pyo died 14 years ago. It was further argued that plaintiffs' share should be $\frac{1}{4}$ and not $\frac{3}{4}$, land inherited during marriage by husband and wife being classed as lettetpwa. Held, that, throughout the Dhammathats, it was recognised that the party by whom it was inherited had a superior right in the inherited property to the other party, and that, in the case of divorce by mutual consent, for instance, the inheriting party takes a $\frac{2}{3}$ share, because he or she is the party through whom it was obtained. (U.B.R. 1906, 4th Quarter, 19, 13 Bur. L.R. 246, Appr.) Held, also, that the rule was clearly laid down in para. 226 of the Attathankapa, according to which the plaintiff was entitled to a $\frac{1}{4}$ share of his grand-mother's inherited property, namely, the 4.72 acres of land in suit. There were two mortgages effected on the land by Maung Sa after Maung Ka's death, which he was entitled to effect. One was of 2.84 acres to San Dun for Rs. 80, and the other of the remainder of the land for Rs. 50 to Maung Seik, afterwards transferred to Maung Shan Gyi. Held, that, as regards the mortgage for Rs. 50, plaintiff was not entitled to claim possession until he had paid off the mortgaged debt, but that he was not entitled to possession of $\frac{3}{4}$ on paying off $\frac{3}{4}$ of the debt, as the mortgage affected the whole land and was not divisible. Held, as regards the other mortgage, that the plaintiff had nothing to pay to any of the present defendants in respect of this land and that as against them he was entitled to the relief prayed for. MA SHWE HMON v. MAUNG AUNG MYAT, 14 Bur. L.R. 117.

(344)—Pre-mortgage—Wajib-ul-arz—Mortgagee of co-sharer not a co-sharer himself.—A co-sharer, even though he has mortgaged with possession his interest in the mahal, and so has temporarily abandoned his right to actual possession of the land, is nevertheless, a co-sharer and retains the right of pre-emption and the mortgagee does not become ipso facto a co-sharer. Therefore, if such mortgagee give an assignment of his mortgage or execute a sub-mortgage to one who is not a co-sharer, the same result does not ensue as in the case of an alienation by a co-sharer, i.e., it does not give rise to a right of pre-emption or pre-mortgage. Two co-sharers A and G mortgaged their proprietary interest with possession to L. The latter made either an assignment or a sub-mortgage of her interest under the mortgage for a term of twenty years to one B, with a foreclosure clause in case of non-payment. B afterwards transferred for an unexpired period of sixteen years and eleven months to X the interest in the property which he had acquired from L. One N.L., being a co-sharer in the village, thereupon instituted a suit for pre-emption, or rather pre-mortgage, under the terms of the village wajib-ul-arz, which gives a right of pre-emption and of pre-mortgage when the share of a co-sharer is sold or mortgaged. It was admitted that neither L nor her assignee B nor B's assignee X, is a co-sharer in the village. It was also admitted that N.L. made no attempt to assert his alleged rights when the first or the second alienations were made. The question to decide was whether the third transfer noted above gave to the plaintiff N.L., any cause of action on which he could maintain the present suit. Held that A and G did not, by reason of the mortgage they executed in favour of L, lose the status of co-sharers in respect of the mortgaged property, that neither L nor her assignee (or sub-mortgagee) B became a co-sharer by virtue of their respective mortgages, that when B assigned or sub-mortgaged to X, what was transferred was not a co-sharer's interest, but an assignment of a mortgage of (or a sub-mortgage of) an interest executed by a stranger and not a co-sharer, that to such an alienation the terms of the Wajib-ul-arz did not apply, and that, therefore, the plaintiff N.L., was not entitled to the right claimed by him. NAND LAL v. BANSI, 20 A. 19, F.B. = A.W.N. 1897, 160. (A.W.N. 1887, 93, 14 A. 195, F.) [R., 25 A. 421.]

(345)—Suit for pre-emption—Mortgage of right in the property sought to be pre-empted—Mortgagee obtains a charge—Valid mortgage—Equity treats as done what ought to have been done.—K brought a suit for pre-emption. He borrowed money to carry on the suit and mortgaged the property, the subject-matter of the pre-emption suit. Afterwards, he obtained a decree. Held that, when the mortgagor acquired by pre-emption and got possession of the property, equity, treating that as done which ought to be done, gave the mortgagee a charge by way of mortgage upon the pre-empted share and placed him in the position of a mortgagee. The mortgagees, therefore, could bring the pre-empted property to sale. GAYA DIN v. KASHI GIR, 4 A.L.J. 57 = A.W.N. 1907, 7 = 29 A. 163. (10 A. 133, R.) [R., 7 C.L.J. 387, 11 O.C. 301.]

(30 M. 388, 29 M. 339, F.) The right of pre-emption as an incident attached by custom to an otti mortgage does not stand on a higher footing than a distinct contract between the parties that the mortgagee should have a right of pre-emption. SUBRAMANIAN EMBRANDIRI, v. KRISHNAN EMBRANDIRI, 2 M.W.N. (1911) 486=12 Ind. Cas. 625.

(347)—Mortgagee with right of pre-emption—Suit by third party for specific performance of contract to sell—Specific Relief Act, s. 27 (b).—A stipulation in or at the time of mortgage giving the mortgagee a right of pre-emption in case the mortgagor wished to sell the property should be upheld. But if in any case a stipulation for pre-emption could be shown to be fraudulent, oppressive or unfair, it would not be upheld. (22 A. 238, 2 C.W.N. 575, R.) If the mortgagee obtains a conveyance of the property before a third party who has contracted with the mortgagor for the purchase of it, the third party cannot enforce the contract against the mortgagee even although the latter knew of the mortgagor's agreement to sell to such party. MUNG SAN NYEIN v. MAUNG TUN, 2 L.B.R. 108.

(347-a)—Mortgage—Onerous and unconscionable—Equitable relief—Right of assignee for value from mortgagor—Mortgage to avoid pre-emption.—A sold certain property to B. A suit for pre-emption was brought in respect of the sale. A and B, however, cancelled the sale and substituted a mortgage, the terms of which were exceedingly onerous. The suit for pre-emption was accordingly dismissed. Subsequently, A sold his equity of redemption to C, who sued for redemption of the mortgage and contended that he should be allowed to redeem the mortgage on payment of a much smaller sum than would be due under the onerous conditions of the mortgage: Held, (1) that C, as an assignee by purchase from A, could not succeed in getting equitable relief against the onerous conditions of the mortgage, unless he could show that A could get such relief: (2) that under the circumstances of the case, neither A nor C was entitled to equitable relief from the conditions of the mortgage. There may be circumstances entitling an assignee for value to equitable relief in regard to an unconscionable bargain, but when Courts of equity are considering their duty in regard to giving such relief, the position of a voluntary assignee by purchase must always be a different one from that of the original transferor. The foundation for equitable relief is that the original transferor, owing to the circumstances under which he finds himself, was more or less compelled at the moment to enter into the onerous bargain from the unconscionable conditions of which he seeks relief. The position of a voluntary assignee by purchase must always have this marked distinction, that he has taken over the bargain under no such stress or compulsion. *SODHI KISHEN SINGH v. and tenant—Jurisdiction of Civil Courts—Findings of fact—Estoppel.—B. S., a usufructuary mortgagee, sub-mortgaged to G. S. in August 1888, the terms being that the latter should be put into possession, and that the former should be personally liable for the mortgage money. In August 1900, within limitation, G. S. sued for the principal and interest alleging that he had never been put into possession. G.S. obtained a decree for the principal against the property mortgaged, and his appeal against so much of the decree, as dismissed the suit for interest, was dismissed. In consequence of the enactment of the Land Alienation Act (XIII of 1900), G.S. did not execute his decree. In 1907, G.S. brought the present suit for possession, on the ground that B.S. denied his title in 1905. The lower Courts found that G.S. had obtained constructive possession of the mortgaged property through tenants till 1905, and that there was not a new agreement between the parties in 1901, and decreed the plaintiff's claim. Held that G.S.'s allegations in the suit of 1900 did not estop him from alleging in this suit that he was in possession of the property up to within twelve years of the present suit, and that the suit was within limitation. Held also that the mortgage did not merge in the decree obtained by G. S. in 1900, and a cause of action survived on the mortgage: and that ss. 13 and 43, Civ. Pro. Code, 1882, did not bar the suit. Held also that the facts found did not establish the relation of landlord and tenant between the parties, and therefore the Civil Courts had jurisdiction. Held also that no further appeal lay, as the value of the suit and appeal for purposes of jurisdiction was less than Rs. 1,000. *BAHADUR SHAH v. S. 53 of the Transfer of Property Act does not apply to the case of a mortgage where the mortgagee is a transferee in good faith and the mortgage is for consideration, even if the consideration be inadequate. An intention to defeat or delay the creditor cannot be inferred from the mere fact that the mortgagor and the mortgagee are related to each other, especially where the creditor obtained his decree years before the mortgage

Code, Act X of 1877, s. 43—Suit against mortgagor for money—Subsequent suit against purchaser of mortgage property to enforce lien—Suit against mortgagor for money decree—Alienation of mortgage property pending suit—Lis pendens, doctrine of, if applicable.*—Mere possession by a creditor of title deeds belonging to his debtor would not constitute an equitable mortgage, in the absence of evidence that they were deposited as security for money. If the title deeds were deposited at the time the money was advanced, that might be enough, but when it is intended to make deposit security for a prior debt, some further evidence of the intention is required. Where the terms of a bond showed that it was intended that a house should be hypothecated for a debt, it might perhaps be inferred that the subsequent deposit of title deeds was made in furtherance of that intention; but where the only reference to the house was contained in these words, "I shall sell my house anywhere, I shall first pay the above mentioned amount to the above mentioned person," (i.e., to the creditor), it was held that such words were not sufficient to constitute any mortgage of the house. Where, in a previous suit brought against the heirs of a mortgagor, for the recovery of the money due on the bond, there was merely a money-decree, which was declared to be recoverable out of the deceased mortgagor's estate in their hands, without any declaration of the mortgage lien in the decree, a suit to enforce the mortgage lien against the subsequent purchaser of the mortgaged property was held not barred by s. 43 of the Civ. Pro. Code, (Act X of 1877), as the cause of action against the subsequent alienee was different from that against the obligee of the bond to recover the money due thereon. [F., 142 P.R. 1882.] Where after the institution of a suit against the heirs of a mortgagee for the recovery of the money due on the bond, without making any reference to the existence of any collateral security, the property alleged to be hypothecated is first mortgaged and then sold after decree to a third person, the doctrine of lis pendens will not apply, the suit being no bar to the alienation of the property as there was no claim to it in the suit then pending. *MUSSAMUT CHAND KOUR v. does not necessarily lead to a presumption of an equitable mortgage by deposit of title-deeds. To make out such a mortgage, it must also be proved that the intention of the depositor was to create a security. Entries of payments made by a creditor in the Samadaskat book belonging to the debtor fall within the language and intention of s. 32, Evidence Act, and although they are admissions in his own favour they are not excluded by s. 21 of the Act. Where an equitable mortgage is effected to satisfy a time-barred debt, the equitable mortgage affords a sufficient ground of action to the mortgagee to sue for the debt, even though the provisions of cl. 3 of s. 25, Contract Act, are not complied with; since, by the deposit of title-deeds as security for a time-barred debt, the equitable mortgagor virtually discharges the debt by assigning to the creditor an interest corresponding in money value with the debt due on the property mortgaged. JETHIBAI v. PUTLIBAI, 14 Bom. L.R. 1020.

(352)—Decree on mortgage—Decree set aside as against one mortgagor—Second suit to recover proportionate share of the debt maintainable.—One S executed a mortgage in favour of A. S died leaving him surviving two daughters, a brother, and an illegitimate son. A assigned the mortgage to the sons of the brother of S, and they brought a suit upon foot of the mortgage against the daughters and the illegitimate son of S for sale, which suit was decreed. Thereupon, R, one of the daughters of S, brought a suit to set aside the decree so far as she was concerned, and she succeeded in the Privy Council, her share having been restored to her under the Privy Council decree. The plaintiffs now brought a suit to recover from R's share of the mortgaged property her proportionate share of the mortgage-debt. Held, that the suit to recover from R's share the proportionate share of the mortgage-debt was maintainable. RASHID-UN-NISSA v. MUHAMMAD ISMAIL KHAN, 9 A.L.J. 738, F.B.=34 A. 474=16 Ind. Cas. 85.

(353)—Mortgagee undertaking to pay off debt due under decree on previous mortgage—Institution of suit on his mortgage without so paying off—Subsequent payment of prior mortgage—Second suit to enforce right under prior mortgage—Maintainability—S. 74, Transfer of Property Act—Distinct causes of action—S. 11, O. II, rr. 1 & 2. Civ. Pro. Code, 1908—No bar to such suit.—Where a mortgagee who, inter alia, undertook to pay off the debt due under a prior mortgage decree, instituted a suit on his mortgage without discharging that debt, and obtained a decree, and where, after paying off that debt, he again brought a second suit to enforce his rights under the prior mortgage. Held, that, when he discharged the prior mortgage, he became, under s. 74, Transfer of Property Act, entitled to the rights of the prior mortgagee, and that, his cause of action to enforce that right being distinct from his right on his mortgage bond, his second suit was not barred under s. 11, O. II, rr. 1 & 2, Civ. Pro. Code, 1908. The plaintiff's proper remedy was not to proceed in execution of the decree upon the prior mortgage, but to institute a fresh suit on the right acquired by him by paying off the prior mortgagee. SUNDARA REDDIAR v. SUBBIAH KOUNDAN, 24 M.L.J. 28. (27 A. 325, R.)

(254)—Lekha mookhee mortgagee in possession, duty of, to render account as trustee—Presumption in case of default by mortgagee.—The mortgage in this case was of the kind known as the lekha mookhee obtaining in Mooltan, etc., in which kind of mortgage the mortgagee is put in possession, charges the mortgagor with the interest of the mortgage debt and, at the same time, credits the mortgagor with the proceeds of the land. The Chief Court ruled that, in such a case, the mortgagee was in the position of a trustee for the mortgagor and was as such bound to render accounts to him regarding the management of the property. In this case, the mortgagee was unable to render the necessary accounts and the Chief Court, held that, although, on the mortgagee failing to give an account of the proceeds of the property, the Courts should place the income at the highest possible figure and to presume everything against him, yet, as both the lower Courts had agreed as to the value of the proceeds of the land, the onus of proving the alleged payment in cash, apart from the proceeds of the land, lay on the mortgagor who failed to discharge it. RANJA v. MUSSUMAT PIAREE AND CHELA RAM, 99 P.R. 1869.

(355)—Mortgage—Purchaser without notice—Rights.—In a suit by a mortgagee against the mortgagor and purchasers of the mortgaged property without notice of the prior mortgage, held that the mortgagee was entitled to a decree against the property, i.e., a decree for the mortgage debt for which, if not satisfied, the property could be brought to sale. DWARKA DASS v. RAMJI DASS, 76 P.R. 1870.

(356)—Civ. Pro. Code, Act VIII of 1859, ss. 2, 7—Suit by mortgagee for money lent, and for enforcement of lien—Simple money decree alone passed—Subsequent suit to proceed against mortgaged property, if maintainable.—Though s. 7, Act VIII of 1859, requires that, if all rights arising out of the same cause of action are not sued for together, the portion abandoned cannot be separately sued for afterwards, it does not enact the same penalty for all rights under the same title or similar titles, the right to sue for which may arise under different dates and causes of action. A deed of mortgage by which a loan of money is raised, and by which the mortgagor has given a lien on the land mortgaged to the lender, creates two rights—one against the person of the borrower and the other a right to proceed against the property mortgaged, and these rights may accrue at different dates. As separate suits may be lodged, when there are distinct rights enforceable at different dates under the same document, the mere fact of a mortgagee having, in his plaint, sought to recover his money and to enforce his lien, the latter part of his prayer not having been put in issue and not having been heard and determined, cannot entirely alter the nature of the case and preclude his lodging a suit (ss. 2 and 7 not being a bar to such suit), for what, had he acted otherwise, he could have claimed. DOONA v. KASHMIRI MAL, 69 P.R. 1876. [Appr., 113 P.R. 1880.]

(357)—Mortgage—Money decree obtained against mortgagor alone without impleading other persons interested—Purchaser at sale in execution of decree—Extent of title acquired.—It cannot be the law that a sale in course of execution of a decree obtained by a prior mortgagee in a suit against the mortgagor alone passes an absolute title against all persons having interests in the property created by the mortgagor subsequent to the first mortgage, nor would it be just that this should be so. Further, it is no injury to any of the mortgagee's rights, to require that, if he desires the full value of his security, i.e., to bring the property to sale in such a manner that the purchaser will receive an absolute title free from all encumbrances, he shall so frame his suit as to bring all the persons with interests in the property derived from the mortgagor, before the Court in the proceeding instituted by him to enforce his lien on the property. Consequently, it is only by a sale in execution of a decree made in presence of all the persons interested in the property, against which the first mortgagee seeks to enforce his charge, that an absolute title passes to the purchaser free from all dispositions made by the mortgagor subsequent to the first mortgage. FAIZ MUHAMMAD JAN v. KAZE MUHAMMAD AMIR JAN, 10 P.R. 1879. [R., 94 P.R. 1881, 97 P.R. 1883, 2 P.R. 1886.]

(358)—Mortgage—Prior and subsequent mortgage—Suit by subsequent mortgagee—Relief—Amendment.—A mortgaged his property to T on 11th August, 1865. A mortgaged the same property to J on 28th of April, 1866. T, brought a suit on the basis of his mortgage, obtained a decree and purchased the property himself on 20th of July, 1867. To this suit, J was not a party. J also instituted a suit on foot of his mortgage in April, 1867, obtained a decree and purchased a part of the property himself. T was not a party to this second suit. T and his transferees continued ever since the purchase of the property by T to be in possession of the property. In 1910, J brought another suit impleading the prior mortgagee as party to it, and in the relief he claimed that the defendants might be ordered to pay the amount which he claimed upon foot of his mortgage or in default the property might be sold: Held, that all that the plaintiff could do was either to redeem the prior mortgage or to sell the property subject thereto, but as no such relief was claimed, the suit was not maintainable. Held, further that, having regard to the fact that the plaintiff was seeking to disturb possession which had gone on for upwards of 40 years, no amendment of plaint could be allowed. JUGAL KISHORE v. SHAFI UDDIN, 14 Ind. Cas. 537. (29 A. 385, 4 A.L.J. 273, A.W.N. 1907, 97, 2 M.L.T. 248, R.)

(359)—Mortgage—Sale certificate—Misdescription of property—Intention of parties—Subsequent sale to another party by mortgagor—Rights of subsequent vendees—Equity.—Where the description of property comprised in a mortgage of sale certificate granted by Court is wrong either in extent or boundaries, and there is evidence as to what the document really meant to convey, the mortgagor or vendor cannot set up the misdescription against the mortgagee or vendee contrary to what has been found to be the real intention of the parties, and a subsequent purchaser can claim no better title than his vendor, in the absence of a special countervailing equity in his favour. KARNAM NARAYANAPPA v. TANGATUR SUBBIAH, 14 Ind. Cas. 585.

(360)—Transfer of Property Act—Mortgage by pattadar—Subsequent relinquishment to Government—Grant by Government to a stranger—Suit on the mortgage and sale thereunder—Subsequent suit for possession by purchaser against the grantee—If maintainable—Contract Act, s. 70—Voluntary payment.—V, the owner of land granted on pattah by the Government, mortgaged to plaintiff and then relinquished it to Government, who subsequently granted it to the defendant. Plaintiff then sued upon his mortgage, got a decree, brought the properties to sale in execution, and purchased them himself. He then induced the revenue authorities to grant a pattah to him for the land and then brought a suit against the defendant for possession thereof and for recovery of Government assessment paid by him. Held that, as V had executed a relinquishment in favour of the Government before the plaintiff instituted his suit, his decree and sale thereunder could give him no right to recover the land against the defendant who claimed under a title granted by Government, and that, as he paid the assessment voluntarily and not on behalf of the defendant, he could not recover it. Quære—Whether relinquishment to Government by the owner subsequent to a mortgage created by him extinguishes the right of the mortgagee to proceed upon the mortgaged property. MOOLINTI VEERANNA GOWD v. as mortgagee, but A, the mortgagor, who happened to be also the lambardar, continued in possession of the property. B instead of suing for possession sued A for profits. Held, that the suit was not maintainable. HANUMAN DIN v. RAM BISAL, 14 Ind. Cas. 260.

(362)—Mortgagor's dealings with mortgaged property after the date of mortgage, effect of, on mortgagee's rights—Mortgagee's right to possession on default of payment not affected by subsequent lease.—Held that a mortgagor cannot, by any dealings with the mortgaged property subsequent to the date of mortgage, affect the rights of the mortgagee under the contract. Where the mortgage-deed provided that the mortgagee was to get actual possession of the mortgaged property on default of payment of the mortgage-debt by a certain date, and, default being made, the mortgagee sued, for possession, held, that lessees claiming through the mortgagor under leases granted to them subsequent to the date of mortgage could not set up the leases so as to defeat the mortgagee's right to take possession under the mortgage. QURBAN ALI v. SETH RAGHUBAR DAYAL, 15 O.C. 239 = 16 Ind. Cas. 476. (30 B. 250, 2 A.L.J. 294, R.)

(363)—Document—Alteration of date to secure registration—Mortgage-deed—Contest of mortgagee—Subsequent lessee of mortgagor—Suit upon mortgage—Mortgagor and his lessee whether competent to object to mortgage on ground of alteration—Estoppel—Fraud.—A mortgage-deed was presented for registration more than four months after its execution, and to enable it to be registered, the date was altered by the mortgagor. The mortgagee consented to the alteration. In a suit by the mortgagee on the mortgage: Held, (1) that the mortgagor was estopped from setting up the alteration as an answer to the claim of the mortgagee; the mortgagor's lessee who took the lease subsequent to the alteration being equally estopped; (2) that the matter would have been different if the lessee had been defrauded. GOPAL CHANDRA CHAKRAVARTI v. SURENDRA KUMAR ROY, 15 Ind. Cas. 460.

(364)—Mortgage executed during pendency of suit in which mortgagor's title to the property is in question—Lis pendens—Res judicata.—A mortgage, executed during the pendency of a suit in which the mortgagor's title to the property is in question, is subject to the result of the suit. re-pay a loan, an account is taken of the money due to the mortgagee and a fresh bond is executed, the priority of the original mortgage is not affected, although any fresh advance made under the subsequent deed will not have any effect as against an intermediate incumbrancer. There is a distinction between the case of a purchaser at an auction sale who buys property which is declared to be subject to prior mortgages and the case of a person who buys property not subject to a mortgage but with notice of a mortgage and subject to such risks as the notice may involve. In the former case the purchaser acquires nothing more than the right to redeem the mortgage and cannot be heard to deny the validity of the mortgage subject to which he made his purchase, nor can he be permitted to question the terms of the mortgage or to raise a plea to the effect that the said mortgage was not given for full consideration. But in the latter case the purchaser is not precluded from impeaching the validity or denying the existence of the mortgage. RAM KUMAR v. DWARKA PRASAD, and DWARKA PRASAD v. BISHESHUR BAKSH SINGH, 15 O. C. 211=15 Ind. Cas. 5, (366)—Contribution—Release of part of mortgaged property from mortgage charge—Effect on its liability to contribute.—While mortgaged property remains in the hands of the mortgagor, the mortgagee may enforce his mortgage against any part of the property, and so long as there are no other persons interested in the property, the mortgagee may, as between himself and the mortgagor, release any part of the property from the mortgage. But when an estate subject to a mortgage belongs to or subsequently becomes the property of several co-sharers, and one of those persons pays off the debt, he can call upon the other co-sharers to contribute rateably out of their shares to the payment of debt, and when, after a mortgage has been made, another person purchases or takes in mortgage part of the property, the prior mortgagee cannot, even with the consent of the mortgagor, release any part of the property from the first mortgage to the prejudice of that person; that is to say, notwithstanding the release, the part released remains liable to contribute rateably to the payment of the mortgage debt. JUGAL KISHORE SAHU v. KEDAR NATH, 10 A. L. J. 211=34 A. 606=16 Ind. Cas. 400.

(367)—Mortgagor and mortgagee—Lease by mortgagee in favour of mortgagor for the mortgaged property—Suit for rent of the mortgaged property, maintainability of.—If the mortgagee chooses to put the mortgagor in possession of the mortgaged premises on payment of rent, the mortgagee is at perfect liberty to recover the arrears of such rent as arrears of rent through the Court from which such arrears are ordinarily recoverable, and it is not necessary for the mortgagee to include these sums in a suit upon the deed of mortgage. MAHADEI (MUSSUMMAT) v. BHIKHAN, 15 O. C. 291. (6 O. C. 26, F.)

(368)—Hypothecation—Instalments—"Due" meaning of—Failure of instalment—Right to claim whole debt.—An instalment hypothecation bond executed by the defendant to the plaintiff contained the following stipulation:—"I agree that, if I fail to pay the said balance of purchase-money with interest thereon..... according to the terms hereinbefore contained, it shall be lawful for the said Collector on behalf of the Secretary of State to sell the said lands and apply the proceeds of such sale in or towards the payment and satisfaction in the first place of the expenses of such sale and then of the amount due or owing by me on account of the said balance of purchase money, etc., etc." Held, that the word "due" in the said bond meant payable, and that the creditor could, in default of any instalment, claim only the overdue instalments and not the entire balance due on the bond. ANNAVARAPU NANCHARAMMA v. THE SECRETARY OF STATE, 15 Ind. Cas. 231.

(369)—Pardanashim lady—Hard terms of mortgage—New plea in further appeal not allowed—Compensation for improvements—Costs of defending a suit by third person to establish his right in the mortgaged property.—An Indian lady, who does not ordinarily appear in public, but goes about the Bazaar to make purchases for the household, can hardly be described as Pardanashin in the strict sense of the term. Such a lady cannot take the advantage of her being Pardanashin in making a transaction, when its terms are unusually hard, particularly where she has the opportunity of taking the advice of her male relative not on bad terms with her. A party cannot be allowed to put forward a new case in appeal. A mortgagee is entitled to get compensation for improving the mortgaged property if allowed to do so by the mortgagor, and the money due to the former is a charge on the latter's interest in the mortgaged property. When a mortgagee is most likely to know at the time of mortgaging the property that a third person has interest therein, he cannot claim costs incurred by him in the litigation for opposing the claim of that person. RAM DITTA MAL v. MUSSAMMAT KARAM DEVI, 167 P.W.R. 1912=190 P.L.R. 1912.

(370)—Practice—Suit for a declaration that certain mortgage documents were not binding—Equitable jurisdiction of Court.—The plaintiffs, the junior members of a Marumakathayam family, sued for a declaration that certain mortgage documents executed by the karnavan were not binding on the tarwad. The Munsiff found some documents invalid and others partially valid, and gave a decree for possession of the items. The Sub-Judge dismissed the suit, apparently on the ground that a suit in ejectment or for a declaration cannot be converted into a suit for redemption. Held, reversing the decree of the Sub-Judge, that, though the mortgages are not valid as such a portion of the money secured was for the benefit of the tarwad, and that the mortgagees were entitled to a charge for that portion; and that, by resorting to the equitable jurisdiction of Courts, where mortgages are declared invalid, Courts can declare charges to the limited extent of the amounts that are binding. KUNHAMINA UMMA v. IBRAYAM HAJI, M.W.N. 1912, 993 = 12 M.L.T. 264 = 16 Ind. Cas. 404.

II, arts. 132, 147—Mortgage executed prior to Transfer of Property Act—Power of sale—Limitation Act (1908), s. 31.*—A mortgage, executed when the Limitation Act of 1871 was in force and not barred when the Limitation Act of 1877 was passed, gets the benefit of the extension of the period of limitation under the latter Act, though a right to sue already barred cannot be revived. A mortgagee can also claim the benefit of s. 31 of the Limitation Act of 1908, provided he institutes his suit for sale within two years of the passing of that Act. The word 'mortgage' is not restricted, in its application, to documents executed after the passing of the Transfer of Property Act, and mortgages executed prior to the passing of the Act have the power of sale incidental to them. Subsequently, the mortgagor's landlord sold the mortgaged land in execution of a rent decree, and the plaintiff deposited the decretal amount to set aside the sale. Afterwards the mortgagor, defendant No. 1, sold the land to defendant No. 2, who paid into Court only the amount due to the plaintiff under the preliminary decree. The plaintiff then brought this suit to establish his right to a lien on the mortgaged land for the amount paid by him to have the sale set aside: Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to a decree. *AMBIKA CHARAN DATTA v. that the mortgagee should, from a certain date, hold possession as owner. Such an agreement may not be valid to confer immediate title on the mortgagee; but there is no principle of law which precludes both parties from agreeing what the character of the possession of the mortgagee should be from a certain date. The mortgagee cannot, by a mere assertion of his own or by any unilateral act of his, convert his possession as mortgagee into possession as absolute owner. This is a principle in favour of the mortgagor, preventing the mortgagee from altering the legal character of his possession by his own act or assertion. But it does not prevent an agreement between the parties that the mortgagee should hold possession as owner and not as mortgagee. USMAN KHAN v. NAGALLA DASANNA, M.W.N. 1912, 995 = 12 M.L.T. 330 = 23 M.L.J. 360.

(374)—Lease—Granted after decree for sale on mortgage in ordinary course of management by mortgagor—Not void.—Where, after the passing of a decree for sale of mortgaged property, certain leases were granted by the judgment-debtor in the ordinary course of management of his estate, and not fraudulently, and subsequently the estate was, with the permission of the Court, purchased for a sum far in excess of the decretal money which was fully discharged: Held that such purchaser acquired the right of the mortgagee to the extent of the mortgage, and such right in the mortgaged property as was left with mortgagor on the date of purchase, and was consequently not entitled to question the alienations made prior to his purchase. ADANKI TELI v. MOTI CHAND, 9 A. L.J. 759 = 16 Ind. Cas. 102.

(375)—Simple mortgage—Estoppel—Denial of mortgagee's right by mortgagor's representatives—Capacity in which right denied—Adverse possession—Trespass against mortgagor—Whether period runs against mortgagee.—The representatives of a mortgagor are estopped from denying the mortgagee's title, but it is open to them as mutawallis to plead that property was waqf and that the mortgage of it was void. (6 A. 24, D.) A simple mortgage is not merely a security for the debt, but it is a transfer of an interest in the property mortgaged. Hence a trespasser who ousts a mortgagor under a simple mortgage, after the execution of the mortgage, and holds the property adversely to him, may by prescription become the owner of the limited estate which the mortgagor had in the property; but such adverse possession cannot extinguish the right of the mortgagee. *NANDAN SINGH v. —2—Accounts between mortgagor and mortgagee.

(1)—Redemption suit under old law—Defendant's liability to render account, notwithstanding original agreement to the contrary.—The transaction in this case was of the nature of a usufructuary mortgage and the plaintiff substantially sued to redeem; and, the case having been one under the old law, plaintiff was held to be entitled to an account from the defendant although the terms of the original agreement exempted the defendant from such liability to account. It was also held that the smallness of the principal sum advanced could not make any difference; however trifling the amount might be, the plaintiff would be entitled to an account of the usufruct of the land held by the mortgagee. DOORGA DEBEE v. ISSUR CHUNDER CHATTERJEE, 10 W.R. 367.

(2)—Liability of mortgagee in possession for not keeping proper accounts of income—Right of mortgagor in such a case—Sale—Free consent.—Held, that it is a well established legal principle, that, when a mortgagee with possession does not keep a proper and true account of the income of the mortgaged property, the mortgagor is entitled to calculate it on the basis of the highest profits the property is capable of yielding. Held, also, that, (as in this case), where a vendor is a helpless puppet in the hands of a vendee, and the deed of sale is executed and registered under peculiar circumstances, the sale cannot be treated as a genuine transaction entered into with free consent. RAM CHAND v. KAIM KHAN, 10 P.W.R. 1908.

(3)—Mortgagee in possession, duty of, to render accounts of payments towards mortgage amount.—Plaintiff sued for possession of certain property under a right of redemption based on the allegation that the mortgage had been satisfied. The defendant denied that the mortgage-debt had been liquidated. The first Court holding that the mortgage had not been satisfied, dismissed the suit of the plaintiffs; and the lower Appellate Court reversed that decision. On special appeal the High Court held that the Judge was right in having decreed the suit, finding as he did that the defendant had received all the money he had lent on the mortgage and the plaintiff was therefore entitled to redeem. With respect to the payment not distinctly found by the Judge, the plaintiff asserted that he had paid the whole sum due amounting to something less than Rs. 11,000, the defendant admitted that he had received the sum of Rs. 15,000 from the plaintiff, but, he claimed to credit some portion of the money to other mortgages that he held from the plaintiff. He was not able to specify however what portion he had paid to each such mortgage. The defendant, as mortgagee, was bound under the law to give an account of all payments made towards the liquidation of his mortgage, and on his refusal, failure or neglect, to furnish such account, every presumption will have to be made against him. SIRDAR GOLAB SINGH v. RAM BUDDEN SINGH, 6 W.R. 127.

(4)—Accounts—Production of accounts—Beng. Reg. XV of 1793, s. 11.—Under s. 11 of Regulation XV of 1793, a mortgagee in possession is bound to produce the accounts of collection and disbursement, and to swear to them; and a plea of "no assets" will not exempt him from acting up to those requirements. BHEECHUCK SINGH v. LUTCHMINARAIN SINGH, 1 Hay 182.

(5)—Accounts—Right of mortgagor to call on mortgagee to file account—Beng. Reg. XV of 1793—Beng. Reg. I of 1798.—A mortgagor, who has recovered possession of the mortgaged property by the deposit of the principal sum lent under Regulation I of 1798 is, in a suit subsequently brought by him for the adjustment of accounts during the period the mortgagee was in possession, entitled to force the defendant to file his accounts and swear to them according to the provisions of Regulation XV of 1793. TUFUZZOOL HOSSEIN v. MAHOMED HOSSEIN, 2 Hay 17.

(6)—Mortgage—Redemption—Mortgagee's accounts—Suit for redemption—Mortgage debt not fully paid up—Decree.—In a suit for redemption of mortgaged property, the law only requires that the mortgagee's account of receipts and disbursements shall be made out, filed in Court, and then sworn to as correct by the mortgagee. If such an account can be shown to be false or incorrect, it is open to the mortgagor to show that fact. Per Bayley, J.—Mortgagees are bound to exhibit the detailed items of all their actual receipts and disbursements, up to the time of accounting, verified by themselves, and accompanied by all vouchers. Per Phear, J.—In a suit for redemption of mortgaged property, no redemption can be decreed as long as there is any balance found due. Per Bayley, J.—In such a suit, the plaintiff ought to obtain a decree for re-conveyance on payment of the balance found to be due, with interest and costs of suit, within a time specified, although it has been the practice of some Courts to treat a suit for redemption as if it were a suit for ejectment, in which the plaintiff could not have any decree except by showing that every condition precedent necessary to entitle him to immediate possession had been fulfilled. Per Phear, J. MOKUND LALL SOOKUL v. GOLUCK CHUNDER DUTT, 9 W.R. 572.

(7)—Mortgage—Mortgagee in possession—Liability to render account.—Where a mortgagee, whether usufructuary mortgagee or not, is in possession of the mortgaged property, he is bound to give an account of the profits realized by him from the property so long as it is in his possession, whether he has taken possession with or without the consent of the mortgagor. NILKANT SEIN v. SHEKH JAENOD-DEEN, 7 W.R. 30. [R., 6 A. 303 = A.W.N. 1884, 92, 2 N.L.R. 92.]

(8)—Reg. I of 1798, s. 3—Mortgage—Accounts required from mortgagee—Toujees.—Where a mortgagor alleges that the mortgage-debt has been satisfied from the usufruct, the account required from the mortgagee is one setting forth what he has realized—from what portions of the mortgaged property—in what terms or period with what loss and gain on the several assets—with what necessary reductions—and what remains then as the net profits which can be taken as the actual realizations towards liquidating the sum due under the mortgage transaction. Toujees, Mehal Melani papers, jaidads, and jumma wasil bakee papers are not per se an account within the meaning of s. 3, Reg. I of 1798, but may corroborate such account. GOLUCK CHUNDER DUTT v. MOHUN LALL SOOKUL, 5 W.R. 271. [Re-heard after remand, 9 W.R. 572.]

(9)—Mortgage—Suit for possession on ground of liquidation by usufruct—Necessity of production of accounts.—This suit was instituted to recover possession of certain mortgaged property on the allegation that the debt, with interest, had been liquidated from the usufruct. The case had been remanded giving directions to the Principal Sudder Ameen as to the course he was to take in settling the accounts, and that officer had carried out those instructions, and given a decree for the plaintiffs to recover possession and the sum of money realized in excess of the debt due by him. Held that the course adopted by the Court in disposing of the case was, under the circumstances, quite proper, since the production of accounts is very essential in every case like the present where the plea of complete liquidation, has been taken as the ground for recovery of possession. RAM LOCHUN PATUK v. BABOO KUNYA LAL, 6 W.R. 84.

(10)—Mortgage—Redemption—Usufructuary mortgage before Act XXVIII of 1855—Claim for mesne profits also—Objection of mortgagee to produce accounts—Proof of satisfaction of debt.—Where a mortgagor sued for redemption of an usufructuary mortgage executed before Act XXVIII of 1855, and claimed also mesne profits, alleging that the mortgagee had been paid from the usufruct over and above the legal dues, it was the duty of the mortgagee to produce his accounts showing the actual collections made by him during his possession. If the mortgagee failed to do so, the mortgagor was not thereby absolved from the duty of showing that he was entitled to a redemption of the mortgage together with the claim for mesne profits. SYUD HASHUM ALI v. BABOO RAM-DHAREE SINGH, 7 W.R. 82.

—2.—Accounts between mortgagor and mortgagee—continued.

(11)—Mortgage with possession—Mortgagee's rights confiscated—Suit for redemption—Account for excess of profits.—Where a mortgagee in possession became a rebel and his property was confiscated and his rights as mortgagee in the estate, sought to be redeemed, were given to defendants, held, in a suit by the mortgagor for redemption of the mortgage, that the defendants must account for the excess of profits over interest in the years when they were in possession. SYAD MAHOMED SALAMUT HOSSEIN v. MUSSAMUT SOOKH DAYEE, 2 Agra 116.

(12)—Zur-i-peshgee mortgagor, right of, to recover possession before expiry of term—Mortgagor entitled to account from mortgagee—Stipulation to the contrary inoperative.—The special appellant in this case contended that the lower Court was wrong, firstly, in having held that the mortgagor (the person that granted a zuripeshgee lease) can sue to recover possession of his lands before the expiry of the term fixed by the lease, on the ground that the mortgage debt had been more than paid off by the mortgagee's receipts while in possession; and, secondly, in having held that the mortgagor was entitled to an account from the mortgagee, when it was expressly stipulated in the lease that the latter shall not be liable to account. Held that the contentions were unsustainable. With reference to the second point, the High Court observed that the contract having been entered into prior to the passing of Act XXVIII of 1855, the condition that the mortgagor should not claim an account from the mortgagee who had been in possession, did not in any degree bar the operation of the law that the lender shall account to the borrower for his receipts while in possession. PUNJUM SINGH v. MUSST. AMEENA KHATOON, 6 W.R. 6. [D., 14 W.R. 455.]

(13)—Suit for redemption of mortgage—Mortgagee found to have been overpaid—Order for refund to mortgagor—Bombay Act, XVII of 1879, ss. 12, 13.—The general practice, when the mortgagee has been found on taking the accounts to have been overpaid, is to order the payment by him, of the balance due from him with interest from the date of the institution. The application of such a rule, in a redemption suit instituted under the Deccan Agriculturists Relief Act, in cases where the provisions of the mortgage contract between the parties have been set aside for the purpose of taking the account under s. 13 of that Act, would not only lead to the redemption of the mortgaged land contrary to the terms and conditions of that contract, but would in many cases oblige the mortgagee to refund money which had rightly come into his hands under that contract. There is no express provision in the Statute either directing or enabling this to be done; and it would be going beyond the object of the Act, if it were construed to entitle the agriculturist mortgagor also to a refund of money which had already properly come into the mortgagee's hands under the contract. JANOJI v. JANOJI, 7 B. 185. [F., 14 B. 19; R., 16 B. 141; D., 22 B. 520.]

(14)—Mortgage—Suit by mortgagee for mortgage money—Mortgagee in possession—Refusal of mortgagee to give account—Nature of decree to be passed.—A usufructuary mortgagee in possession is liable to account for the profits whether such possession be by himself or by his agent, and a suit by him to recover the mortgage money should not be dismissed merely because the mortgagee refused to give the account, but the Court should give proper directions for the mortgage account to be taken, charging the mortgagee with the amount of the ordinary annual profits if received by him or his agent, but not so charging him if the profits were received by the agent of the mortgagor. MUSSUMAT NAWAB JAFFREE BEGUM v. MUSSUMAT UJBEE BEGUM, 3 Agra 153.

(15)—Mortgagee in possession cultivating by himself—Duty to account for—Profits.—A mortgagee in possession of land, who, instead of letting it to ryots and realizing the rent in the ordinary way, cultivates it himself, is not responsible or liable to account for the whole of the profits arising to him by farming the land, but only for such profits as he would have realized had he let it to a tenant, or as the mortgagor would have realized had he let it. RUGHONATH ROY v. BARAIK GEEREE-DHAREE SINGH, 7 W.R. 244.

(16)—Mortgage—Sale of equity of redemption—Payment by mortgagor to purchaser for discharging mortgage—Right of purchaser to claim accounts from mortgagee.—Where the purchaser of the equity of redemption received from the mortgagor a certain sum for payment of the mortgage, he was not thereby precluded from claiming from the mortgagee an account of the income of the mortgaged property. NOWAB JAFFREE BEGUM v. GUNGA RAM, 3 Agra 91.

(17)—Usufructuary mortgage-deed—Reservation of huk ajiri to proprietor—Mortgagee's liability to render account not affected.—In the suit, the first Court decreed plaintiff's right to the possession of certain dams in a mouza but refused a claim made by him to a certain yearly money payment, termed huk ajiri, which the first Court held was cognizable only in the Revenue Court, being in the nature of rent, and was besides barred by limitation. The lower appellate Court also agreed in treating this sum as rent and did not take it into account. Plaintiff contended that he had a right under the law of usufructuary mortgage to an account from the defendant, and that the latter could not avoid the obligation of rendering the same; and that huk ajiri was more in the light of malikana or acknowledgment of the proprietor's right than of annual rent. The circumstances were such that if the sum was to be considered as rent, the plaintiff was out of time, and the High Court came to the conclusion that the sum could not be considered as rent. SHAIKH HYDER BUKHSH v. HOSSEIN BUKSH, 4 W.R. 103. [R., 12 W.R. 215.]

(18)—Suit for redemption—Suit by purchaser of equity of redemption against subsequent purchaser—Onus of proof—Actual possession.—Where the purchaser of the original proprietor's equity of redemption sues the subsequent purchaser of the same proprietary rights, to establish his right to redeem, he is bound to prove his original deed of purchase and either actual possession or receipt of huk ajiri or some portion of the proceeds of the property. SYUD FUZOOL RUHMAN v. MOULVIE ALI KUREEM, 5 W. R. 163.

(19)—Reg. XV of 1793, s. 11—Ascertainment of amount received by mortgagee whilst in possession—Jumma wasil-bakee papers.—Where it is necessary for the Court to ascertain the amount received by the mortgagee whilst in possession, the mortgagee should file his jumma wasil-bakee papers and proceed generally in terms of Regulation XV of 1793, s. 11. SHAH AMEEROODEEN v. RAM CHAND SAHOO, 5 W. R. 53.

(20)—Mortgage, accounts relating to—Evidence—Reg. XV of 1793, s. 11.—Under s. 11, Reg. XV of 1793, mortgagees who are in actual possession should be examined as regards the truth of mortgage-accounts, excluding persons (such as females) who, according to the customs and manners of the country, are unable to appear in Court, or others who, from their position, are not likely to be acquainted with the actual state of facts. But where one of the co-sharers has a competent knowledge of the facts, he may depose to the truth of the mortgage accounts. RAM PHUL PANDEY v. WAHED ALI KHAN, 14 W.R. 66.

(21)—Evidence—Income-tax return papers—Mortgage—Mortgagee in possession—Duty to keep accounts.—Where the accounts of a mortgagee in possession are being taken, his income-tax return papers are wholly inadmissible for the purpose of showing what the collections actually were. They are admissible for contradicting the mortgagee; but they cannot be taken against the mortgagor. It is the duty of the mortgagee to keep regular accounts from the date he entered on possession; and it is on the mortgagee that the onus lies in the first instance. If the mortgagee has not kept proper accounts, the general presumption will be against him; but this does not mean that, because the mortgagee has neglected to keep proper accounts, all statements of the mortgagor against him must be taken as true. The Court must take the best evidence available and decide upon it. SHAH GHOLAM NAZUF v. MUSSAMUT EMANUM, 9 W.R. 275.

(22)—Reg. IX of 1833—Mortgage—Right of mortgagor to question correctness of Jumma-bundee filed by putwaree.—A mortgagor was not precluded from questioning the correctness of the jumabundee annually filed by the putwaree in obedience to the provisions of Reg. IX of 1833 by reason of his not having brought the incorrect entries to the notice of the Collector at the time the papers were filed. SYUD TAIG ALI v. GOLAB CHOWDHRY, 3 Agra 314.

(23)—Usufructuary mortgagee, rights of, dependent on contract—Right of mortgagor to accounts—Taking benamee lease, not fraud per se.—With regard to the contention in this case that a usufructuary mortgagee in possession cannot, in any case, have a personal remedy against the mortgagor, or sell the land, it was held that, though in the case of a pure usufructuary mortgage, where the lender takes possession of the estate of the borrower and agrees to pay himself out of the profits, the mortgagor cannot be sued personally nor can the land be sold, yet there is no rule of law that, if a mortgagor be so minded, he may not also give his usufructuary mortgagee the power to sue him personally or to sell the land or both at any time. As to the next contention that a mortgagee in possession was bound in every case to account for the profits, and the mortgagor cannot by contract deprive himself of this right, it was held that, though while the usury laws were in force, a restriction in this respect did certainly exist, yet, on the abolition of those laws, the restriction ceased with them and, by s. 4 of Act XXVIII of 1855, it has been expressly enacted that an agreement that the use or usufruct of any property shall be allowed in lieu of interest, shall be binding upon parties. The mortgagor and mortgagee therefore are at liberty to make what contract they please with reference to the profits of the mortgaged estate. Held also that, although a benami transaction ought to be generally scrutinised with care, since it is frequently resorted to, to cover a fraud, yet a mere taking of a lease benami, unaccompanied by any other circumstances of suspicion, does not in itself constitute fraud. MUNNOOLAL v. BABOO REET BHOOBUN SINGH, 6 W.R. 283.

(24)—Redemption suit—Power of Court in matters of account.—Case where it was held in a redemption suit that it was for redemption the peculiar province of the Judge to go into and adjust the accounts between the parties. PRO-SUNNO COOMAR DUTTA v. CHYTUNNO CHURN BIDYALUNKAR, 25 W.R. 74.

(25)—Mortgagee in possession—Taking of accounts—Regulation XV of 1793, s. 10.—Under s. 10, Reg. XV of 1793, it is the duty of the Court to take an account of the receipts of the mortgagee from the property and then adjust the mortgage-account of principal and interest after ascertaining what was received by the mortgagee in possession. SHUMBHOONATH ROY v. MONOWAR ALI, W. R. 1864, 109.

(26)—Principle of taking accounts.—Accounts between mortgagor and mortgagee should be taken in accordance with the principles laid down in Macpherson on "Mortgages," 7th Ed., p. 550. GANDA MAL v. THAKUR HARKISHEN, 3 P.R. 1900.

(27)—Zur-i-peshgee—Mortgage—Account, method of taking.—Case where the High Court specified the manner of taking accounts in a suit for possession of property the subject of a zur-i-peshgee mortgage, and the form of suit in such a case. BIBEE SUYEEDUN v. SYUD ZUHOOR HOSSEIN, W.R. 1864, 44.

(28)—Principle of taking accounts—Mortgage decree for account and sale—Withdrawal from execution proceedings.—Case where the Court explained and stated at length the principles of taking accounts in mortgage decrees. A mortgagee who has obtained a decree for an account and sale is not entitled to withdraw from the execution proceedings when those accounts appear to be going against him. DOOBE CHAND v. OMDA KHANUM alias BABU SHIBBU, 6 C. 377 = 7 C.L.R. 375. [R., 5 C.L.J. 192 = 34 C. 223.]

(29)—Mortgagor in possession—Accounts how to be kept.—How a mortgagee in possession should keep and maintain accounts in regard to the collections realised from the mortgaged property. RAM KISSEN SINGH v. SHAH KUNDUN LALL, W.R. 1864, 177.

(30)—Receipt of interest by mortgagee—Method of calculation of interest.—There is no law restricting a mortgagee to the receipt by way of interest of the amount of the principal lent. On this second appeal, the defendant took the objection that the calculations made by the Sudder Ameen were incorrect. He had taken year by year the amount of the advance, added to it interest at 12 per cent., and then deducted the value of the usufruct. On this calculation, made from the time of the advance being given, up to the date of plaintiff's dispossession, he found that defendant had still Rs. 29-2-6 to receive, and he gave him a decree, for this amount. The High Court held that the above procedure of Sudder Ameen was correct and that it was the method of calculation usually followed in such cases. SYED ENAET ALI v. KUHUR ROY, 2 W.R. 289.

(31)—Accounts—Mode of taking accounts—Duty of Court on taking them—Practice.—Per Fulton, J.—A mortgagor seeking to redeem must prove how much of the debt and interest has been repaid. It is the duty of a mortgagee in possession to keep a full, true and accurate account of the actual receipts and disbursements. When an account is presented the Judge of fact on whom rests the responsibility of coming to a true decision must examine it and before arriving at a conclusion as to whether it is such an account as a prudent man ought to accept, he must consider the detail and ascertain whether it has been kept on principles which indicate that it is probably correct. Before accepting or rejecting accounts in suits between mortgagor and mortgagee it is usually necessary to examine them critically. The omission of the mortgagor to assist by criticising the items may of course be taken into consideration. In some cases such omission may be accepted as showing that the accounts cannot be attacked or in other words are known to be correct. But in other cases it may merely indicate ignorance of the proper course to take of the inability on the part of the client to give suitable instructions to his pleader. No general rule can of course be laid down. While it is true that no general rule as to the value of accounts can be laid down, still it is clear that in such a case all the circumstances must be considered such as the relative positions of the parties to each other, the trade or caste of the mortgagor and any other matters likely to be material. It is for the party who puts forward the accounts to explain them and support them in such a way as to convince the Judge that there is such a probability of their accuracy as to make it reasonable for a prudent man to accept them. KUNDANMAL v. KASHI-BAI, 4 Bom. L.R. 42=26 B. 363.

(32)—Mortgage—Redemption—Usufructuary mortgage—Balance in lieu of interest after payment of rent—Breach of condition—Claim for account.—Where, under the terms of a mortgage deed, the mortgagee was bound to pay the rent due for the mortgaged property, taking the balance in lieu of interest and the mortgagor was to redeem by payment of the principal and the mortgagee failed to pay the rent, and the mortgagor had to pay it: Held, that the mortgagor was not bound to pay the whole principal and bring a suit for the amount of the rent paid by him, but was entitled to claim an account and a reduction of the mortgage debt by an amount equivalent to the rent paid by him. RAM NARAIN v. IMAMUDDIN, A.W.N. 1900, 134.

(33)—Usufructuary mortgage—Redemption—Mortgagor's right to an account—Express stipulation as to interest or profits—Novation of contract—Recital of a subsequent contract not a novation of a previous one—Reg. XV of 1793, ss. 3, 4, 10 and 11—Act XXVIII of 1855, s. 7—Stat. 13, Geo. III, c. 63.—In a suit for redemption of a usufructuary mortgage, executed while Reg. XV of 1793 was in force, the plaintiff's claim to an account, on the ground that the principal and the interest had been discharged out of the usufruct, was resisted by the defendant, who pleaded that, subsequent to the repeal of the Regulation by Act XXVIII of 1855, the mortgagor had agreed not to claim an account. This agreement was said to be contained in a wajib-ul-arz, in which were recited the terms of a sub-mortgage of usufructuary mortgagee's rights, providing, inter alia, that all the profits were to be taken towards interest and that the mortgage should be redeemable on payment of the principal. Held, on the true construction of the wajib-ul-arz, that there was no new contract or ratification of the contract, as to the application of the profits, but only a recital by way of description, and that the plaintiff was entitled to an account. Where the mortgagee has become the owner of a part of the mortgaged property, the accounts to be taken in connection with the redemption suit should be calculated only on the basis of the portion of the property to which the mortgagor is entitled. Observations by Stuart, C.J., on Reg. XV of 1793 and Stat. 13, Geo. III, c. 63. MAHTAB KUAR v. THE COLLECTOR OF SHAHJAHANPUR, 5 A. 419=A.W.N. 1883, 43. (2 B.L.R. (36)—Mortgage—Division among mortgagors and apportionment of mortgage-debt—Acquiescence by mortgagee—Effect—Liability of mortgagors.—The defendants, after mortgaging their property to the plaintiff, divided it among themselves and apportioned their liability under the mortgage-debt. In pursuance of this apportionment, defendants 2 and 3 (two of the mortgagors) passed certain bonds to the plaintiff in discharge of their shares of the mortgage-debt, which the plaintiff accepted. In a suit by the plaintiff to recover a one-third share of the debt by sale of a third share of the mortgaged property and from the first defendant (the third mortgagor) personally, held that the claim of the plaintiff must be decreed. Though the mortgagee was not bound to recognize the arrangement made by the defendants among themselves, yet, as the amounts paid by two of the debtors for discharging their shares of the debt had been appropriated by him, without there being any special direction to that effect from those debtors, he had a right to recover the remainder of that debt from the share of the mortgagor-debtor by whom it was due. MAHADAJI HARI LIMAYE v. GANPATSHET DHONDSHET, 15 B. 257. [R., 28 M. 555 = 15 M.L.J. 442.]

(37)—Decree in mortgage suit—Mortgagee in possession under decree—Liability to account to mortgagor for profits.—The position of a mortgagee resting merely on his mortgage as the ground of his relation to the mortgagor is practically different from that of the mortgagee who has obtained a decree. The decree supercedes the contractual relation and the relation constituted by it stands on the same footing as ownership. In the present case, the decree, in the event which happened, of the mortgagor making default, ordered that the mortgagee should take possession, and retain it with the attendant benefits until the mortgagor should pay a definite sum which, however, was never paid. The possession and the enjoyment of the mortgagee under the decree having been under a complete title conferred by the decree, he could not be held liable to account to the mortgagor for the profits of the land. NAVLU v. RAGHU, 8 B. 303. [Appr., 16 B. 656 ; R., 13 B. 567, 19 B. 140 ; D., 14 B. 327.]

(38)—Taking of accounts in suit for redemption—Onus on mortgagee to prove dues from mortgagor.—In taking the account in a suit for redemption, it lies upon the mortgagee to prove what is due from the plaintiff in respect of principal and interest. Where, therefore, the mortgage-deed itself happens to be inadmissible in evidence owing to the refusal of the mortgagee to pay the necessary penalty and additional stamp duty thereon, he can only be credited in the account with the sum which the mortgagor admits was the amount of the principal. On the other hand, the mortgagee would have to be debited with the income derived from the property since he has been in possession, for which he must account. GANGA MULIK v. BAYAJI, 6 B. 669.

(39)—Suit for redemption—Mortgagee in possession, legality of, to account for rents and profits—Mortgage-deed, construction of—Right of mortgagee to receive interest as well as rents and profits.—The plaintiffs sued for redemption of a mortgage on the ground that the whole of the mortgage-debt had been discharged by the usufruct of the property and that a balance was due to them. Held, that, upon the true construction of the mortgage-deed, it could not be said that possession was to be given and profits were to be taken and enjoyed by the mortgagees in addition to interest. Where a mortgage-deed is silent as to possession, and there is no agreement to the contrary, a mortgagee, who takes possession, takes also the obligation upon him to account for the rents and profits during the time he is in possession. That was the obligation which was cast upon the mortgagees here. There was no condition in the document that the mortgagees should not be liable for the rents realized by them. That being so, they must account for the rents and profits received by them during the time they had been in possession. Suit remanded for an account being taken of the amount of rents and profits and to set them off against the mortgage-debt. (Aikman, J., dissentiente). MADARI v. BALDEO PRASAD, 27 A. 351, F.B. = A.W.N. 1904, 270.

(40)—Usufructuary mortgage—Satisfaction of debt—Suit for possession—Accounts—Effect—Interest—Stipulation to pay interest—Equity—Discharge of mortgage debt—Evidence—Onus of proof—Mortgagee not keeping accounts—Misconduct—Costs.—In a suit to recover possession of land in the possession of the mortgagee under a usufructuary mortgage, if upon taking an account it appears that the mortgagee has been fully satisfied, the mortgagor is entitled not merely to have the property back, but the Court being a Court of equity and acting upon the principle that it is always the aim of a Court of Equity to finally determine, as far as possible, all questions concerning the subject of the suit, an account should be taken up to the time of the decree, the account so taken being considered binding, and the parties not being at liberty, except under peculiar circumstances, to re-open it in another suit. [F., 22 W.R. 269, 24 W.R. 275.] Where all that the plaintiff, mortgagor, is seeking is that which he is (by virtue of the law which prevented more than 12 per cent. interest being taken) entitled to, viz., to have the account taken and to have it ascertained whether the mortgagee has, by means of his usufructuary mortgage, obtained more than 12 per cent., and if he has, that the surplus may be applied in reduction of the principal—he is certainly not seeking that which would authorize the Court to depart from the agreement of the parties that this sum should not bear interest during those years. There is no equity in obliging him to pay interest for the period that the mortgagee had agreed that he should not receive interest for. Where the plaintiff, mortgagor, alleges that the mortgage has been satisfied and that he is entitled to have back the property, the onus is upon him to show that to be the fact; he must certainly give some evidence to satisfy the Court that what he alleges is the truth, and that he is entitled to have back the property. In suits between mortgagor and mortgagee, where a mortgagee has failed in his duty to keep accounts and has not produced proper accounts, it is regarded as misconduct which ought to be taken into consideration upon the question of costs. BABOO KULLYAN DOSS v. BABOO SHEO NUNDUN PURSHAD SINGH, 18 W.R. 65.

deduct from the mortgage-debt, are sums actually received by the mortgagee in reduction of the mortgage debt. The fact that the mortgagee owed money to the mortgagor on some other account would not of itself entitle the purchaser of the mortgagor's equity of redemption to set off that money against the mortgage-debt. TARINEE KANT BHUTTACHARJEE v. GANODA SOONDUREE DEBEE, 24 W.R. 460.

(42)—Redemption—Zuri-peshgi lease—Possessory suit—Claim to surplus collections—Adjustment of accounts.—In a suit to recover possession of land with surplus collections, by redemption of a mortgage created by a zur-i-peshgee lease, which was executed before the usury law of 1855 was passed in favour of the defendant where the lessee claimed the surplus collections as his profits. Held that the mortgagee should be charged in taking the account between him and the plaintiff with the actual rents and profits, receiving on the other hand interest at twelve per cent. per annum highest rate which the law, as it then stood, sanctioned. RAJAH SAHEB PERLADH SINGH BAHADOOR v. L.P.D. BROUGHTON, 24 W.R. 275. (6 M. I.A. 393, 18 W.R. 65, F.)

(43)—Mortgagee in possession—Account for profits—Trees planted on mortgagor's land.—It is the duty of a mortgagee in possession to account for profits of trees planted by himself on the mortgagor's land. A mortgagee in personal possession where nothing appears to the contrary was held liable to pay a reasonable occupation rent for buildings personally occupied by him for the purpose of residence or carrying on trade or business; and for land personally occupied or cultivated by him, he ought to pay a fair occupation rent or with the actual net profits realized from the use of the land. Profits with which the mortgagee ought to be credited in reduction of his mortgage debt with interest thereon, include his expenses in obtaining produce from the land and a moderate interest on the amount of such expenses. Method of taking an account from a mortgagee in possession discussed. PRABHAKAR CHINTAMON DIKSHIT v. PANDURANG VINAYAK DIKSHIT, 12 B.H.C. 88. [Appr., 14 B. 113; Cited, 6 N.L.R. 109.]

(44)—Money decree as payment—Calculation of amount due.—A mortgagee assented, under an arrangement with three out of five mortgagors, to take as payment a money-decree against three of them. Held that the amount of the decree must be considered as a sum paid in reduction of the liability of the five. RAM KANTH ROY CHOWDHRY v. now sued to enforce the same, the mortgagors executed another deed to him (plaintiff) by which they assigned to him a debt due to them from a third person. In taking the account of what was due to the plaintiff, the Court had debited him with the amount of the assigned debt. The plaintiff contended that he ought to be debited with the amount, only if and when the amount is actually received by him. It had been found by the High Court that no serious attempt had been made by the plaintiff to recover any portion of the amount. Held, under the circumstances, that the plaintiff had been rightly debited with the amount. SHYAM KUMARI v. RAMESHWAR SINGH, 32 C. 27, P.C. = 31 I.A. 176 = 8 C.W.N. 786 = 6 Bom. L.R. 754 = 8 Sar. 688.

MUSST. KISHNA, 3 Agra 146.

(47)—Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), s. 72—Expenses incurred by mortgagee in legal proceedings, when could be credited on taking mortgage accounts.—Costs incurred by a mortgagee in a suit for rent due by the original mortgagor as his tenant, cannot be charged against the property as those incurred for the due management of the property and the collection of rents within the meaning of s. 72 (a) of the Transfer of Property Act. The mortgagor is not responsible for any expenses incurred by the mortgagee in attempting to recover rents from tenants put into possession by the mortgagee, and the fact that the mortgagor is himself the tenant under the mortgagee can make no difference in principle. Where, however, the mortgagor's title happens to be impeached, the costs incurred by the mortgagee in defending such title would come clearly within the rule in s. 72 (c) of the Act so as to entitle the mortgagee to charge such expenses against the estate. POKREE SAHEB BEARY v. (48)—Stamp duty for mortgage—Clauses in mortgage deeds not creating additional obligations.—So long as the equity of redemption remains with the mortgagor, he is bound to indemnify the estate against expenses incurred in protecting the title. brought against him by the mortgagor's co-sharers, and also any debts charged upon the mortgaged property which the mortgagee may pay, such stipulations not creating any fresh obligation but only tending to maintain, in favour of the mortgagee, the original security which is the purpose of the instrument, they do not impose the necessity of any additional stamp as for an indemnity bond. DAMODAR GANGADAR v. VAMANRAV LAKSHMAN, 9 B. 435.

(49)—Usufructuary mortgage—Redemption—Accounts—Annual rents—Surplus receipts—Government revenue—Wrongful payment by mortgagee—Act IV of 1882 (T.P. Act), s. 76 (c) and (h).—Where, under the express terms of a deed of usufructuary mortgage, the mortgagee is placed in possession with the right of taking the usufruct in lieu of interest, subject to the liability of paying out of such usufruct the amount due as Government revenue on the mortgaged land. The assignee of the equity of redemption suing for redemption is entitled to take into account the amount of annual jama which he has been compelled to pay owing to the mortgagee's failure to pay it. He is entitled to avail himself of annual rents in making up the accounts. He is entitled by such calculation to claim from the mortgagee any sum which may be found due to him as surplus profits. Any payments made on account of Government revenue, by the mortgagee to the mortgagor with notice of the assignment, would be wrongful and would not relieve him of his liability to the assignee who had taken the mortgagor's place. The limitation for a suit for the surplus profits would commence to run from the date of entry by the mortgagor on the mortgaged property. JAIJIT RAI v. But where the mortgagee, under such circumstances, is also entitled to sue the mortgagor on his covenant in the deed of mortgage for the amount paid for the mortgagor, and the mortgagee elects to pursue this remedy, and obtains a decree, he is no longer entitled to the remedy given to him by s. 72 of the Transfer of Property Act, the two remedies not being concurrent. IMDAD HASAN KHAN v. (58)—Mortgage—Dispossession of mortgagee—Satisfaction of mortgage-debt out of usufruct—Accounts.—Where a mortgagee and his sub-mortgagee sue the mortgagor for recovering the mortgage-debt, alleging that they had been unlawfully dispossessed by the latter and it is found that there has been no illegal eviction, but that the property was lawfully in the possession of the defendant, the money advanced to him having all been satisfied out of the proceeds of the land received by the plaintiffs, held that, in such a suit, no account could be demanded from the defendant in order to show that the debt had in fact been paid, the really accounting party being the plaintiffs and not the defendant. The remedy of the sub-mortgagee, if any, in the above suit, who complains that he has not received from the mortgagee his share of the mortgage-money, is only by means of a separate suit properly framed for the purpose. BROJO LOLL SINGH v. (59)—Mortgage-money, premature suit for—Mortgage, question as to correct amount due on, when to arise.—The defendant's predecessors in title executed a mortgage deed in favour of the plaintiff. The deed contained a condition that, if the principal money was not paid within a year, the plaintiff would be competent to take possession of the mortgaged property. The plaintiff sued the defendant for the mortgage-money with interest, and, as an alternative relief, he asked that possession might be given him over the mortgaged property. One of the questions for determination was, as to whether the plaintiff's claim, so far as it related to the settlement of accounts or any declaration of the amount due on the footing of the mortgage, was not premature. Held, that the suit, in so far as it referred to the amount of the mortgage-money, was premature. The question, as to the correct amount due on the footing of the mortgage, could arise only when the mortgagor was ready and willing to redeem the mortgage. MURLI DHAR v. mesne profits, etc., unsatisfactory—Ben. Regs. XV of 1793, s. 12 and I of 1798, s. 3.—The provisions of Ben. Reg. XXVI of 1814, s. 10, cl. 3, directing the Court to record the points at issue, are imperative and must be strictly observed. Where, therefore, in a suit to recover lands in possession, as the plaintiff alleged, of the usufructuary mortgagees under a conditional sale, the substantial question raised by the answer was whether certain foreclosure proceedings under Ben. Reg. XVII of 1806, s. 8, taken by the mortgagees effectually barred the equity of redemption, but the Judge of the Court of first instance did not record that point; upon appeal the case was remitted by the Judicial Committee to India with directions that the question of foreclosure should be tried upon an issue regularly settled. When the account of the mesne profits and expenditure by the mortgagees in possession is unsatisfactory, an account, whether as incidental to the question of foreclosure, or redemption, is to be taken, as provided by Ben. Reg. XV of 1793, s. 11 and I of 1798, s. 3. If the interest of the mortgagor in the mortgaged estate has been sold under a decree, and the sale takes place before the notice of foreclosure was filed, such notice, to be effectual, must be served on the purchaser or decree-holder. MOHUN LOLL SOOKOOL v. (61)—Usufructuary mortgage—Principle of calculating interest.—In the case of a usufructuary mortgage, the principle of calculating interest on the principal sum is this:—The gross collections for each year should be taken, the necessary payments on accounts of revenue, expenses of collection, and zemindar's maintenance, should then be deducted, and the remaining sum should go to reduce, either in whole or in part, the interest; and if there be any sum over, it is to be carried to reduce the principal. MOHUNT CHUTTOORBHOJ DOSS v. DOORGHACHURN PAHAREE, 5 W.R. 200.

(62)—Mortgage—Mortgagee in possession—Payment of interest.—The fact of a mortgagee having been in possession does not necessarily lead to the inference of the mortgage debt having been, in some measure at least, paid off. If under the terms of a mortgage deed under which the mortgagee held possession, the usufruct of the property was to be enjoyed in lieu of interest, the mortgagee's having had possession would not in any way lead to an inference that any portion of the debt, save the interest, was paid off from the usufruct. BAMA SOONDUREE DOSSEE v. and subsequent to, the repeal of the Usury laws, a mortgage, under which the mortgagee was to enjoy mesne profits in lieu of interest, would have constituted a valid and legal contract, and the mortgagee was not bound to account for such profits. But, under the Usury laws, the rate of interest was limited to 12 per cent., and securities might be avoided if they contracted directly or indirectly for higher rate of interest; and there were also provisions for the taking of accounts between mortgagor and mortgagee. There is nothing in Reg. XXXIV of 1803, making it compulsory for the mortgagee to file accounts, whether they are required for the purpose of determining the rights of the parties in the suit or not. Accounts would be necessary, even if there were a stipulation to the contrary, if the contract had been made in evasion of the Regulation, and as a contrivance for giving the mortgagee a higher rate of interest than he is entitled to under the law. They may be also necessary, when the profits received by the mortgagee in possession are fluctuating in amount, to enable the Court to decide on the validity of the contract for interest. Where, therefore, under the terms of a deed of mortgage, the only sum that the mortgagee was to receive, over and above the interest allowed by law, was a fixed amount found to be necessary for costs of collection of the village jama, held, that a clause in the deed, making the rendering of accounts unnecessary, was not improper; and that the mortgage deed was a sufficient answer to a suit based on the supposition (contrary to the terms of the agreement) that, if the accounts be taken the mortgage would be found to have been discharged by debiting the mortgagee with the balance remaining over and above the interest, or so much of the balance as he could not account for. BADRI PRASAD v. MURLIDHAR, 2 A. 593, P.C.=7 I. A. 51=6 C.L.R. 257=4 Sar. 100. [R., 5 A. 419=A.W.N. 1883, 43.]

for Rs. 450, which sum he obtained from the defendant, making it the consideration for the resale by the plaintiff to the defendant on the same day. The document evidenced an out and out sale. On the same day, however, and as a part of the same transaction, another document was executed, whereby it was agreed between the parties that if the plaintiff returned Rs. 450 without interest to the defendant at any time after five years and before ten years from the date of deed the land was to be reconveyed to the plaintiff. At the same time, a rent-note was passed whereby the land was let to the plaintiff for Rs. 108 per year. The plaintiff tendered the amount within the stipulated period, but as the defendant refused to reconvey the land, he brought the present action to redeem and recover the land: Held, that the Rs. 450 being in the nature of a debt, the transaction between the parties amounted in fact to a mortgage, and not to sale with the right of repurchase. Per Ranade, J.—Where the apparent purchaser, treats the consideration money as a continuing debt, or where the deed gives him a right to recover the money with interest, or where the sum paid falls short of the value of the property, there are indications which determine the transaction to be a mortgage, though it may be described as a sale. MARUTI v. MAHANT DAULATPURI, 3 N.L.R. 97.

(5)—Absolute sale—Custom amongst Burman agriculturists—Rule of evidence—S. 110, Evidence Act.—Amongst Burman agriculturists, at least until very recently, absolute sales of arable land were the exceptions, and mortgages by way of conditional sale or transfers as security for debt, made in the form of sales, were the rule, the idea of an absolute sale of land being foreign to the minds and habits of the people, more especially where lands were transferred for debt. Where the evidence is conflicting as to whether a transaction was an absolute sale or a transfer to secure a debt, there is no fixed standard by which evidence can be appraised; each Court in turn must weigh probabilities and be guided in so doing by general rules rather than lean upon decisions given in other cases upon other evidence. In weighing such evidence, due weight should be given to the inference arising from the prevailing usage aforesaid. In case of dispute as to the true nature of an alleged sale, therefore, it cannot be correctly said that there is no evidence at all, to rebut the inference in favour of the title of the party in possession on which s. 110, Evidence Act, is based, if it is admitted or shown that, whilst there is no proof that the transfer was for ready cash, the ostensible vendor was a Burman, and the land ancestral arable land. No hard and fast rule can be laid down as to the exact weight which should be given to the inference arising from such facts where it is contended, on the other side, that the transaction was an absolute sale. The Civil Court should endeavour to ascertain and give effect to the intention of the parties to the contract, lest mortgages made by Burman agriculturists by way of conditional sale because actually made in the form of a sale should be transformed in the majority of cases into absolute sales, without regard to what the intentions of the parties to the contract were, but by mere application of a rule of evidence. *MA IN LUN v. (6)—Mortgage by conditional sale—Equity of redemption—Redemption after specified time.—The doctrine of the English law with respect to the equity of redemption, after default of payment of the mortgage-money, is unknown to the ancient law of India prevailing in Madras, which, in the absence of any Regulation or Act of the Legislature altering such law, determines the interest of mortgagor, in favour of the mortgagee under a conditional sale made absolute by failure of the mortgagor to redeem

XVII of 1806, allowing, in respect of bye-bil-wafa, the mortgagor, or his representatives, to redeem at any time before the foreclosure, have not been extended to Madras. In this case, the suit to redeem was instituted in 1853, and the suit was held not maintainable after the time fixed in the deed. *PATTABHIRAMIER v. agreed that, if the total sum due, principal and interest, was not paid off on the expiry of five years from the date of the deed, the land should be deemed as sold to mortgagee. Before the five years' term expired, the Punjab Alienation of Land Act came to force. The mortgagee applied to the District Court for issue of notice of foreclosure under Reg. XVII of 1806. The Judge referred the matter to the Collector under s. 9 of Act XIII of 1900. The Collector, on the mortgagors' raising objection to the new mortgage proposed by him, decided that nothing further could be done and so returned the paper to the District Judge. The notice of foreclosure and the year of grace having expired, the mortgagee brought a suit for possession as owner. Held, that the Punjab Land Alienation Act had not acted as a bar for the completion of the foreclosure under Reg. XVII of 1806, and the Civil Court was not bound, under s. 9, sub-s. 3 of the Act, to refer the matter, after a suit has been filed, to the Collector, as the mortgagee had become ipso facto owner of the property by purchase, although he had still to sue for possession. When the Collector, acting under s. 9 (2) of the Act declines to interfere, he thereby sanctions the permanent alienation. This is specially so, when, by his non-interference, the proprietary right in the land will shortly pass to a non agriculturist mortgagee. Conditions of sale are only absolutely and necessarily null and void by the operation of the Act, if occurring in mortgages after the commencement of the Act. BICHHA LAL v. GUMANI, 93 P.R. 1907. The proprietors applied for partition of their joint holding, whereupon they entered into an agreement to the effect that, if H's mortgage was finally foreclosed, he was to give up the land and to receive a proportionate amount in respect of the portion which fell to his share. H sued for possession by foreclosure and obtained a decree. The plaintiffs in this suit, ignoring the agreement, sued H, in a Revenue Court, claiming that the mortgage by N was void as against their share of the land, and their suit was dismissed. They now sued H in a Civil Court for possession of their alleged share in the mortgaged-property in accordance with the terms of the agreement. Held, that the suit was one for specific performance of the agreement, and none the less so, because possession of immovable property was involved, and that, as regards limitation, the suit was governed by art. 113 of the Limitation Act (6 A. 231, F.) H, who had foreclosed his mortgage in due course of law, could not be regarded as a trespasser. FAZAL DIN v. AMIR-UD-DIN, 217 P.L.R. 1911 = 138 P.W.R. 1911 = 11 Ind. Cas. 299.

(11)—Mortgage—Conditional sale—Foreclosure—Notice—Adoption by widow.—A widow succeeded to the share of her deceased husband, who died without leaving issue, and caused her mother-in-law's name to be recorded as proprietor of such share. The mother-in-law made a conditional sale of the share to the plaintiff. After her death, the widow caused the name of the defendant, a minor, to be recorded as the proprietor of such share, alleging that she had adopted him. The plaintiff applied for foreclosure of the sale, causing notice of foreclosure to be served on the defendant's father and guardian, and the sale was made absolute. After this the plaintiff sued the widow for possession. Held that the foreclosure proceedings were invalid, as the widow had no notice, and that the widow, if she intended anything, intended to make the defendant her heir and not her adopted son, as a widow could not at all adopt without the consent of her husband which was not proved in this case. *GANGA SINGH v. He did not take foreclosure proceedings under Reg. XVII of 1806 within 12 years of the date fixed in the date of mortgage for payment of mortgage-money. After the expiry of 12 years, he took foreclosure proceedings and then sued for possession as owner. Held, that the suit was barred by limitation either under art. 135, or art. 144, of sch. Tenancy Act (IX of 1883)—Applicability—S. 8, Transfer of Property Act—Applicability to mortgage.*—It is open to a mortgagee who holds two mortgages over the same property to foreclose twice on the same property. It cannot be said that the cultivating or occupancy right in the sir land came into existence on loss of the proprietary right, but the proprietary and cultivating rights are co-existing and component parts of the full sir right. The occupancy right now held by an ex-proprietor is the right which he held as proprietor to cultivate the sir land himself. A mortgagee is entitled to proceed against the cultivating or occupancy right in the sir land even though the proprietary right had already passed to himself or to a stranger. (11 C.P.L.R. 133, F.) S. 42 of the Tenancy Act 1883 applies only to sales of the three specified kinds and not to mortgages whether by conditional sale or of any other kind. (7 C.P.L.R. 25, F.) Though, in India, a mortgage is only a transfer of an interest in property, yet s. 8, Transfer of Property Act, 1882, applies also to mortgages. Therefore, where there is a mortgage of a village, the mortgage includes also the cultivating rights in sir lands of that village, in the absence of an intention to show that those rights were retained or excluded. *SHIOLAL v. I, art. 135.—A mortgage by conditional sale was executed in 1830 with a provision that the mortgagee would be entitled to enter into possession of the property if the mortgage-debt was not paid on a certain date in 1850. The debt was not paid on that date. No application under Reg. VII of 1806 was made for foreclosure of the mortgaged property. On 11th of July 1910, the mortgagee brought a suit for foreclosure: Held, that the suit was barred by limitation. The cause of action arose on the mortgagor's failure to pay the mortgage-money on the due date in 1850, and the mortgagee's right to possession of the property mortgaged was extinguished under s. 1, cl. 12 of Act XIV of 1859 as soon as twelve years had elapsed from the due date, and the subsequent creation of foreclosure suits could not revive the extinct right. S. 31 of the Limitation Act (1908) had, therefore, no application and the suit was barred by art. 135 of the Limitation Act. RAM DAWAR RAI v. BHIRGU RAI, 15 Ind. Cas. 240=9 A.L.J. 538. (15)—Reg. XVII of 1806—Mortgage by conditional sale—Application to foreclose—Suit to redeem—Application to Settlement Court.—The law and procedure in respect of mortgages by conditional sale or bye-bil-wafa, and the foreclosure or redemption thereof explained. The mortgage in this case was executed in 1853 and was of the nature of a conditional sale. It was stipulated that if the loan be not re-paid in four years, the mortgagees should be considered absolute owners and a deed of sale would be executed by the mortgagors. Twelve years after, the mortgagees applied to the Settlement Court to have their names recorded as absolute owners, and on 28th September, 1865, the Court gave the mortgagors one year's grace to redeem the mortgage. This order was confirmed by the appellate Courts. The mortgagors sued for redemption after the expiry of the year of grace. Held that the mortgagors could not maintain the action. The mortgagees must bring a regular suit for declaration of their title as absolute proprietors. In that suit, the mortgagors might raise any plea they could have raised during the year of grace as to the conditional sale or the regularity of the proceedings taken to make it absolute, or on the score of the mortgage debt having been discharged, &c. Held also that the application to the Settlement Court in 1865 by the mortgagees to be recorded as absolute owners, was an application to foreclose, as that Court gave the mortgagors the year's grace required by law, and that, according to the custom and usage of the province in 1865, the Settlement Court was the proper Court in which an applicant for foreclosure had to lodge his petition. *SAINDASS v. (15-a)—Conditional sale—Year of grace runs from date of order of first Court, not of Appellate Court.—In this case the mortgage was by way of conditional sale, and the mortgagee obtained an order of Court that the mortgagor should redeem in one year upon payment of a certain sum or be foreclosed. This order was modified on appeal by reduction of the amount to be paid: Held, that the mortgagor's year of grace ran from the date of the order of the first Court and not from that of the Appellate Court. JEHANGEER v. SAINDASS, 42 P.R. 1870.

(16)—Mortgage by way of conditional sale—Mortgagee's suit to have sale declared absolute—Notice by proper Court necessary—Reg. XVII of 1806.—In order to maintain a suit by the mortgagee under a mortgage by way of conditional sale, to have such sale declared absolute, it must be proved that all legal formalities have been complied with, and amongst other things that notice has been issued by the proper Court, and this must be done, whether the mortgagor pleads that there has been any irregularity or not. Where a Tahsildar having no jurisdiction to issue notice under Reg. XVII of 1806 issued such notice and allowed one year for redemption, it was held that the year of grace had not begun to run, as such notice was not issued by the District Court which alone had jurisdiction to issue it. *JAMATA v. (17)—Mortgage by conditional sale—Stipulation for payment of principal and interest on a fixed day—Post diem interest—Whether mortgagee entitled thereto—Construction of mortgage deeds.—A mortgage by conditional sale was executed on the 18th of August, 1884. The deed commenced with the recital that the mortgagor had received from the mortgagee a loan of Rs. 800 and with a general covenant to pay interest thereon at the rate of 3 annas on the rupee per annum. There was a further covenant that, as a consideration for the loan, the mortgagor undertook to re-pay the principal and interest on April 29th, 1885, and mortgaged by conditional sale certain specified property, with the condition that, in the event of the mortgagor's failure to pay on due date, the deed would take effect as a sale out and out from the abovementioned date of April 29, 1885: Held, that the intention of the parties was that interest at the stipulated rate should continue to run until actual payment was made. (19 A. 39=23 I.A. 138=1 C.W.N. 52, R.) In construing a mortgage-deed, the Court is bound to consider the terms of the contract entered into by the parties as a whole, without laying any undue stress on any particular portion of the contract, and having due regard to the ordinary expectations of persons entering into mortgage transactions. KALIKA PRASAD TEWARI v. In Sind. the old law of India according to which at the expiry of the term the contract executed itself and the transaction closed and became one of sale, continues still to be in force. FRAMJI BYRAMJI MINWALA v. (19)—Bye-bil-wuffa mortgage—Mortgagor's rights, express transfer of—Conditional sale—Suit for possession by mortgagee as proprietor—Conditional decree—Order of foreclosure under Reg. XVII of 1806.—Plaintiff effected a bye-bil-wuffa mortgage of his lands, by which all his rights as mortgagor were, in the event of non-payment of the debt within three years, transferred to the mortgagee as vendee. The mortgagee, after 4½ years, sued for possession as vendee, got a conditional decree to the effect that, if the amount due was not paid within a year, he should be put in possession as proprietor by sale. After a year and a half, he put in a petition for possession. Notice of ejectment was then served on the mortgagor, who did not contest the conditional sale, but brought an action claiming to have reserved to him occupancy rights in the land. Held that the bye-bil-wuffa mortgage (or conditional sale) did not reserve to the mortgagor any part of his rights, as he had, by that deed, transferred his proprietary rights, as well as the right to cultivate his share to the conditional vendee (44 P. R. 1873, F.) Held also that the conditional sale not having been perfected in accordance with the procedure prescribed by Reg. XVII of 1806, the conditional decree passed in the suit was null and void; and that, to make the sale

The mortgagee sued for foreclosure more than 12 years after default had been made by the mortgagor. Held that, as the title of the mortgagee to possession could not become complete until he brings his suit after the performance of the ministerial act of issuing notice under s. 8, Reg. XVII of 1806, limitation did not begin to run from the date of default, and that art. 135, sch. II of the Limitation Act, was not applicable to the case. HURDWARI MAL v. GAMDIN, 75 P.R. 1874.

See MORTGAGE—FORM OF MORTGAGES.

(1)—Intention—Procedure—Presumption.—In the construction of mortgages the intention of the parties should be ascertained and followed. The intention of the parties must be gathered from the document creating the mortgage and from such other indications as may be found on the record. The presumption is in favour of the conservation of the right to redeem; and the intention to extinguish that right should be clearly expressed or should be deducible unmistakably from the words of the deed or the conduct of the parties. MA PO v. MAUNG KYAW DUN, U.B.R. 1897—1901. Vol. II, 509. (U.B.R. 1897—1901, Vol. II, 502, F.) [R., U.B.R. 1907, 2nd Qr., Mortgage, 1.]

(2)—Mortgage instrument—Rule of construction.—A mortgage instrument consisting of two connected parts must be construed as a whole; and the true construction to be put upon it should be that which, being reasonable, would give effect to all the parts of it. It was accordingly held in the case that, where, according to the former part of the mortgage instrument, a power was given to the mortgagee to take absolute possession of the property (and thereby arranging for the gradual repayment of the instalments of the debt), a construction whereby the mortgagee could not take possession, except at the option of the mortgagor, but could only realise the amount of the instalments by sale of the properties, was not maintainable. DEPUTY COMMISSIONER OF RAE BARELLI v. RAMPAL SINGH, 11 C. 237, P.C.=12 I. A. 1=4 Sar. 585.

(3)—Mortgage, Construction of—Operative words in mortgage deed.—In the construction of a mortgage-deed, effect may be given to the operative words in it in their ordinary meaning, if they are uncontrolled by anything in any recital. THE LAND MORTGAGE BANK OF INDIA v. ABDUL KASIM KHAN, 26 C. 395, P.C.

(4)—Mortgage—Ambiguous description in document.—If the description of property in a mortgage document is ambiguous, it must be taken most strongly against the mortgagor, the party who conveyed the property. SHAIK SOOLTAN ALI v. SYED AFTAKUR HOOSAIN, 18 W.R. 63.

(5)—Recitals in mortgage deeds—Effect of.—Recitals in mortgage deeds and in petitions sent to officials that certain property has been transferred, could not effect a transfer of such property. IMMADIPATTAM THIRUGNANA v. PERIYA DORASAMI, 5 C.W.N. 217=28 I.A. 46=24 M. 377, P.C.=7 Sar. 811. [R., 26 M. 339, 2 Ind. Cas. 18.]

(6 & 7)—Question of fact—Direct evidence on each side not wholly convincing—Necessary reliance upon surrounding circumstances.—Where, in a suit in which the substantial question was whether a certain deed of mortgage represented a genuine transaction or a fictitious one, there was some evidence on each side bearing directly on the character of the transaction but on neither side was that evidence wholly convincing and persons whom one might have expected to be prominent witnesses were not called and the evidence that was adduced was open to much adverse criticism, it had been found necessary in India and it was equally necessary for their Lordships to rely largely upon the surrounding circumstances, the position of the parties and their relation to one another, the motives which could govern their actions and their subsequent conduct. DALIP SINGH v. CHAUDHRAINAWAL KUNWAR, 10 Bom. L.R. 600=12 C.W.N. 609=30 A. 258=35 I.A. 104.

(8)—Mortgage-deed—Mortgagee to have possession in lieu of interest—Dispossession—Suit for money.—Suit for recovery of money due on a mortgage bond alleged to have been executed by the defendant's late husband S on taking the principal sum from plaintiff's father. The bond purported to have been executed by the late S as well as by his brother J, but plaintiff relieved J from the debt, stating that J was not present at the time of the execution of the bond. The conditions of the bond were that plaintiff's father should possess the mortgaged property in consideration of interest only accruing upon the principal sum lent, and that the mortgagor should take back the property whenever he should pay the principal sum to the mortgagee. Plaintiff was dispossessed by the shareholders J and A, and hence this suit for recovery of the principal sum. Held, that the money lent was recoverable, notwithstanding that there was no express condition to that effect in the bond; but as the money was borrowed by the defendant's husband on behalf of the family, the plaintiff could recover from the present defendant only her share of the debt. GYARAM CHUCKERBUTTY v. BURODA DABEE, 20 W. R. 484.

(9)—Mortgage, Ijara lease by mortgagor—Mortgagee dispossessed of portion by co-sharer of mortgagor—Rights of mortgagor.—Defendant advanced a certain sum of money to R and T, and they, in order to secure the re-payment of this loan, being themselves mokurruredars of a certain mouzah, granted to him an ijara lease, representing that they were entitled to 16 annas, in which lease a jumma was reserved for the first year, a portion of which was to be paid to the superior proprietors, and another portion was to be applied to the discharge of the interest due to the defendant and a small sum was to go to the mortgagors as huq-i-ijara. After this ijara had been executed, the defendant was unable to obtain the whole 16 annas of the pledged property, or rather dispossessed of 8 annas of it by a person who claimed to be a share-holder of R and T and he was eventually obliged to bring a partition suit in which R and T's share, which was 8 annas, was divided off from the rest; and the defendant retained that as covered by the ijara lease for as much as it was worth as security for his loan. The present plaintiffs bought the mortgagor's share. They now sued upon the footing of the ijara lease claiming to have half the amount of the huq-i-ijara which was originally reserved. Held that the mortgagors could not, under the circumstances, claim any benefit whatever under the ijara lease until all the benefits of which the original ijara lease granted by them pretended to secure to the defendant were realized by him. ACHUMBIT SINGH v. KESHO LALL, 20 W.R. 128.

(10)—Conditions in mortgage—Deed against alienation—Construction—Mortgagee given a right of pre-emption.—A mortgage-deed stipulated that, during the mortgage or until the discharge of the mortgage debt, the mortgagor should not sell the property, or if he did sell it, should sell it to the plaintiff at a fixed price: Held that the provision created merely a right of pre-emption of the property at a fixed price in the event of its sale, but did not absolutely prohibit its alienation. He could not avoid any conveyance by the mortgagor without at the same time offering or asking to be allowed to purchase himself. SHIVA CHARUN DASS v. SHEIKH ROOSTUM AND MUSSUMAT NUKUMON-NISSA, Agra, F.B. 69 = Ed. 1874, 53.

(11)—Sub mortgage—Assignment of mortgage—Rights of sub-mortgagee—Mutual rights.—Where no complete assignment of the rights of a mortgagee had been effected but merely a sub-mortgage, the rights and liabilities of the original mortgagors and mortgagees inter se continued so that the former may redeem the mortgaged lands in spite of the sub-mortgage by paying the mortgage-money to the original mortgagees. RAMAN v. DEWA SINGH, 12 P.R. 1895.

(12)—Suit on mortgage—Paramount title set up—Jurisdiction of Court—Legal position of assignee.—In a suit on a mortgage, an assignee of the equity of redemption, who was made a party, did not ask to redeem, but pleaded that he was the landlord of the holding which formed part of the hypotheca, and that, since the holding was not transferable, the mortgage in respect of it was invalid. The plaintiff did not ask to have that defendant's name struck out and the Court decided the question of title against the plaintiff. Held that, though the Court might have struck out the name of the party raising the question of a paramount title, it had jurisdiction to decide the question as a matter of convenience. (12 C. 414, R.) [R., 5 C.L.J. 95 = 11 C.W.N. 284, 33 C. 425 = 3 C.L.J. 205; F., 1 Ind. Cas. 661.] Even though the landlord was an assignee of a holding which he pleaded was non-transferable and his character as landlord was different from that as assignee, even the assignment was valid since by implication he had consented to a transfer which, but for the consent, would be invalid. HARE KRISHNA BHOWMIK v. ROBERT WATSON AND CO., 8 C.W.N. 365. [F., 1 Ind. Cas. 661.]

(13)—Mortgage — Covenant in, forbidding subsequent encumbrances—Subsequent lease—Rights of mortgagee and lessee—Priority.—After a mortgage, all that remains in the mortgagor is the mere equity of redemption, and every title created by him, subsequent to that date, must cease with the cessation of that right, so far as the mortgagor, or persons deriving their title through him are concerned. So, a covenant in a mortgage bond prohibiting the creation of any new encumbrances by the mortgagor until the mortgage-debt is paid off, was held to prevent the latter from giving a subsequent lease over the property mortgaged assigning the rents in liquidation of a debt. Held further that the mortgage must prevail over the lease. GOSSAIN MUNGUL DOSS v. RAGHOONATH SAHOY, 17 W.R. 560.

(14)—Mortgage of specific portion of joint-holding—Partition—Specific portion not falling to mortgagor's share—Remedy of mortgagee.—Where the defendant mortgaged a specific portion of a joint holding, which, on partition, did not fall to his share, the plaintiff-mortgagee has a right to proceed against the property which actually fell to his mortgagor's share in lieu of the property mortgaged. BELI RAM v. MUSST. SHAHZADA BEGAM, 101 P.R. 1894. (1 I.A. 106, F.; 20 C. 533, R.) [R., 89 P.R. 1903]

(15)—Joint-holding — Mortgage of share—Duty of mortgagor on partition.—Where a co-sharer mortgaged his share, a portion of which he had already sold, he is not bound to make good the deficiency out of another share to which the mortgagor had subsequently succeeded. If a co-sharer alienates a specific share in a joint holding and the others acquiesce, the other co-sharers will be bound by such acquiescence at partition. If at partition the particular plot mortgaged did not fall to his share, the mortgagor is bound to substitute other lands which fell to his share. BABU RAI v. NATHU, 32 P.R. 1900.

(16)—Joint mortgagees—Discharge of debtor by one—Whether binding on co-mortgagee.—One of two joint mortgagees cannot give a good discharge of the entire mortgage debt without the consent of the other mortgagee. RAM CHANDRA v. RAJJAN LAL, 7 A.L.J. 99=5 Ind. Cas. 129=32 A. 164. (25 A. 155, F.)

(17)—Mortgage—Construction—Power of sale—Intention—Reg. V of 1827, s. 15, cl. 3—Personal remedy—Limitation.—A mortgage-bond contained an express stipulation that the mortgagee was to enter into possession of the land and enjoy the rents and profits for ten years in lieu of interest after which period the mortgagor might enter into possession in the year in which he paid the debt. Held that, under cl. 3 of s. 15 of Reg. V of 1827, the mortgagee had no power of sale and that the intention of the parties was that the land mortgaged should not be sold in satisfaction of the mortgage debt. [Expl., 11 Bom. L. R. 1315=34 B. 128=4 Ind. Cas. 595; D., 21 B. 267, 5 Bom. L. R. 119.] When the suit was brought within three years from the expiration of the stipulated period of ten years, the mortgagee's personal remedy against the mortgagor was not time-barred. SHAIK IDRUS v. ABDUL RAHIMAN, 16 B. 303. [R., 8 C.L.J. 196.]

(18)—Mortgage-deed—Construction—Personal liability.—Where a mortgage-deed after providing for payment of principal and interest within a certain time and providing against alienation till such payment ended thus:—"Should it happen that I am unable to effect redemption within the period above specified, then, in that event, I will renew the document held by the mortgagees without any objection." Held that the deed also contemplated the personal liability of the mortgagors. RAM PERSHAD v. CHATAR, 20 P.R. 1888. (88 P. R. 1880, 80 P.R. 1881, R.)

(19)—Mortgage—Money due on accounts—Credit—Consideration.—Where immoveable property is secured for the payment of money due on accounts up to a certain amount, the transaction is a mortgage, though no entry as to the amount may have been made at the time in the account book, because equity regards that as done which ought to have been done. SHEO LAL v. RAM RATTAN, 28 P.R. 1891.

(20)—Construction of document—Sale-deed—Mortgage.—Test as to transaction constituting mortgage.—The question in this case was whether the instrument sued upon was a mortgage or a deed of sale with an option of repurchase after ten years. The solution of the question depended upon the terms of the instrument and the intention of the parties. The Subordinate Judge considered the transaction to be a mortgage by way of conditional sale, and under the provisions of the Dekkhan Agriculturists' Relief Act allowed redemption, though the mortgage term had not expired. The District Judge held it to be a sale outright, with a right of repurchase reserved and dismissed the suit. The High Court however held the transaction to be a mortgage and laid down that the test in such cases was to be whether, after the execution of the instrument purporting to be a sale-deed, there continued to be a debt from the so-called vendors to the vendee, or whether the pre-existing debt became extinguished on the execution of the instrument. In the instrument under consideration there was the undertaking on the part of the so-called vendors to redeem on paying the debt which was recognized to be an existing debt the payment of which was postponed for 10 years. It was, therefore manifest that the parties themselves treated the transaction as a mortgage. BAPU v. BHAVANI, 22 B. 245. [R., 2 Bom. L. R. 1058.]

(21)—Deed—Mortgage or sale—Conditions as regards redemption.—Under the conditions of a deed, the mortgagee was at full liberty to re-build the property at his pleasure; the mortgage was to be redeemed in two years with the mortgagor's own means; after two years, the transaction was to become a sale; the collaterals and heirs were not entitled to redeem; and the mortgagee on redemption was entitled to expenses incurred in rebuilding. Held that such a transaction was a mortgage and not a sale with a condition for re-purchase; the conditions with regard to redemption were an inequitable and onerous character and could not be enforced against the mortgagor or his successors in title. SUKH DIAL v. ANANT RAM, 131 P.R. 1894. (10 C. 30, 14 M. 170, 2 M. 131 and 271; D., 3 A. 359, 7 M. 395, 9 B. 524, R.) [R., 39 P. R. 1907.]

(22)—Mortgage—Sale—Construction whether lands sold or mortgaged.—The grantee of certain waste lands in Burmah mortgaged them for securing advances taken for the part payment of the purchase-money. Subsequently he entered into an arrangement with his creditor for the advance of the whole balance. Then, on the joint application of the grantee and his creditor, an entry was made in the Revenue register to the effect that the ownership had been transferred from the grantee to the creditor, and endorsements in the same terms on the document of grant. In a suit for redemption brought several years after, held, with respect to the question which arose as to whether the transaction was a mortgage or a sale, that, on the true construction of the joint petition and the orders made thereon, the entry and the endorsements were intended only as a record of the arrangement proposed by the parties and sanctioned by the registering officer; that the intention was not to have an absolute sale; and that the transaction was a mortgage which the plaintiff could redeem. KADAR MOIDEEN v. NEPEAN, 21 C. 882, P.C.=21 I.A. 96=6 Sar. 453. [D., 2 Bom. L.R. 1058.]

(23)—Bhagdari lands—Mortgage—Alienation of portion only—Validity—Mortgage deed of Bhagdari lands—Construction—Bombay Bhagdari Act (V of 1862), s. 3.—An alienation of any portion of any bhag other than a recognized division of such bhag or of any homestead, building-site (gabhan) apart or separately from such bhag or recognized sub-division is void under s. 3 of Act V of 1862 (Bombay Bhagdari Act). The suit properties were certain bhagdari lands, to which 4 gabhans (building sites) had been attached. The plaintiff was the mortgagee of the bhag under a mortgage-deed which recited that "all the properties appertaining to the entire bhag" had been mortgaged thereunder. The portion of the mortgage-deed relating to the gabhans mentioned only two by name, one only of which belonged to the bhag and the other did not. There were further recitals in the deed to the following effect:—"According to these particulars, lands, houses, and gabhans together with whatever may appertain to the said bhag, all the properties appertaining to the whole bhag, have been mortgaged and delivered into your possession. There is no other property appertaining to the said bhag of which mention is not made here." Held (1) that, upon a proper construction of the mortgage-deed, the document down to the end of the particulars was in terms a mortgage of certain properties only of the bhag expressly enumerated, supplemented by the description that they appertain to the entire bhag and that the particulars were the "leading description," and the supplementary description of them as constituting the entire bhag together with the houses or gabhans appertaining to it (which was incorrect) must be regarded as "falsa demonstratio," and (2) that the mortgage-deed was void under s. 3 of Act V of 1862, in respect of the property appertaining to the bhag, and that the mortgage could be given effect to in so far as it comprised properties not belonging to the bhag. TRIBHOVANDAS JEKISHANDAS v. KRISHNARAM KUBERRAM, 18 B. 283.

(24)—Mortgage—Construction—Intention.—B gave the appellant a simple mortgage on ten biswansis of a village called Raipur. He at that time possessed shares in two thokes of Raipur. No. 1 thoke was put up for sale and was purchased by the appellant. No 2 thoke was put up for sale and was purchased by the respondent. The appellant sought by the present suit to enforce his mortgage in respect of No. 2 thoke. The respondent objected that it was not included in the mortgage. Held on the construction of the mortgage-deed that the intention was to mortgage all the interest of the mortgagor in Raipur. BHIK CHAND v. NIRPAT SINGH, A.W.N. 1883, 184.

(25)—Per Mahmood J.—(a) The definition of simple mortgage in s. 58 (b) of Act IV of 1882, is only a reproduction of older law and is therefore applicable to a deed executed before the passing of the Act. (b) In the N.W. Provinces, words of hypothecation and simple mortgage have always been understood to import the right of the mortgagee to bring the property to sale for satisfaction of his claim, and no express words conferring such power are insisted upon as necessary to create such power. (9 M. 218, 10 M. 609, 10 B. 519, D.) (c) Where a transaction is described as 'arh' and 'mustagbraq' which means a hypothecation or simple mortgage, it implies a power of bringing the property to sale. KISHAN LAL v. GANGA RAM, 13 A. 28=A.W.N. 1890, 216. [Appr., A.W.N. 1894, 57.]

(26)—Interpretation of document—"Arh"—"Mustagharag"—Suit for sale—Limitation—Act XV of 1877, sch. II, art. 147.—Defendants having borrowed money from plaintiffs executed in their favour a bond, the material portion of which was as follows:—"We have pledged and hypothecated (arh aur mustagharag) our share of the zemindari (rights and interests) in the village Papli Khas, Pargana Meerut, to secure the creditors. Until payment of the aforesaid moneys, we shall not transfer the aforesaid property to any one by mortgage, sale, gift or otherwise; if we should do so, our act would be invalid. We have, therefore, executed these presents in the shape of a bond." Held that these words were equivalent to a simple mortgage as defined in s. 58 of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882, and carried with them power to sell through the intervention of the Court the property named in the bond, if the debt were not repaid according to the terms of the bond. Held also that a suit upon such bond to bring the property covered thereby to sale was governed by art. 147 and not by art. 132, Limitation Act, 1877. TODAR v. AYUB KHAN, A.W.N. 1894, 57. (14 C. 730, Diss.; 13 B. 90, 13 A. 28, Appr.)

(27)—Contract Act (IX of 1872), s. 29—Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), s. 58—Mortgage of "our zemindari property"—Ascertainment of mortgagor's interest at date of mortgage—Mortgage not void for uncertainty.—A deed of simple mortgage, describing the mortgaged property as our "zemindari property" without any further specification, was held not void for uncertainty, the words used being sufficiently certain, or at any rate capable of being made certain by proof of the obligors having, at the date of the deed, owned a specific zemindari interest. SHADILAL v. THAKURDAS, 12 A. 175=A.W.N. 1890, 60. (13 App. Cas. 523, 1 A. 275, 5 A. 11, 8 A. 486, 9 A. 158, 2 N.W.P. 263, R.) [R., 14 A. 162, 11 M.L.J. 27.]

charges the profits of immoveable property with the repayment of the loan, and stipulated that the obligee should take the management of the property and render accounts to the obligor, that if the loan was not paid when due, the latter should remain in possession till the loan was discharged, and also that the obligor should have no power to sell, mortgage or alienate the property till the discharge of the debt; held that the bond created a mortgage of the profits only and not of the property itself and that, therefore, the obligee cannot sue for the sale of the property. If there is a condition, in a bond for payment of money, not to alienate certain lands, it would constitute it a simple mortgage. GANGA PRASAD v. KUSYARI DIN, 1 A. 611.

(29)—Mortgage partly usufructuary and partly simple—Right of mortgagee to decree for sale—Mortgage deed, construction—Intention of parties.—For the purpose of construing a mortgage-deed it will be necessary to examine carefully the wording of the deed, and if its terms are not sufficiently clear and admit of more than one interpretation, it will be necessary further to ascertain in what manner the terms of the deed were understood and acted upon by the parties subsequent to their entering upon the contract. In the case of a mortgage deed the terms of which are of doubtful character, the Court will have to look to all its provisions as a whole, to the other instruments which were executed at the same time and admittedly form parts of the same transaction and to the surrounding circumstances, in order to gather the intention of the contracting parties. In the cases of mortgages of a mixed character and other than those expressly defined in s. 58 of the Transfer of Property Act, the deeds embodying them may be given effect to, as far as possible in accordance with the covenants contained in them; and so where a deed is partly of the nature of a usufructuary mortgage and partly of the nature of a simple mortgage, the mortgagee is entitled to bring the mortgaged property to sale under the conditions set out in the deed, and even where such a deed does not in terms provide for the recovery of the mortgage money by sale of the mortgaged property. JAFAR HUSEN v. RANJIT SINGH, 21 A. 4 = A.W.N. 1898, 167. (2 Agra 150, 2 A. 527, A.W.N. 1886, 212, A.W.N. 1888, 171, 14 M. 232, 17 M. 131, R.) (30)—Mortgage, simple and usufructuary, combined—Construction of document—Limitation Act (XV of 1877), art. 147.—There can be no doubt that one and the same deed may create a simple and a usufructuary mortgage, and confer upon the mortgagee the alternative rights of possession and of bringing the mortgaged property to sale in enforcement of his security. Where a document provides that the property is "mortgaged" for Rs. 3,000 for a period of three years, and it goes on to say in what manner the interest is to be paid from the rent of the shops, and if there is any excess, how much excess is to go to credit of principal, or if there is a deficit, how it is to be made good by the mortgagor, and the document also stated "having paid up in full the principal and interest due, I shall redeem the property: If the amount expressed in the deed be not repaid, the mortgagee is at liberty to recover the same in any way he thinks proper," this instrument is a combination of a simple mortgage and a usufructuary mortgage, and the mortgagee is entitled to maintain a suit to bring the property to sale. Art. 147 of the Limitation Act (XV of 1877) is applicable to suit for sale on a mortgage. JUGAL KISHORE v. RAM SAHA, A.W.N. 1886, 212. (6 A. 551, F.B., F.) [F., 21 A. 4.]

(31)—Construction of document—Mortgage—Covenant for repayment of mortgage money within a time limited—Time not of essence of contract.—A simple mortgage deed contained the following covenant as to repayment of the mortgage money:—"Asl arse panch baras men faq rahn kara lenge." Held that the time fixed for payment was any time within five years. CHATTARBHUI v. RAGHUBAR DIAL, A.W.N. 1901, 36. (23 M. 33, 10 A. 602, R.; 8 A. 95, D.) [R., 17 M.L.J. 83.]

(32)—Mortgage-deed—Interpretation of.—Where the mortgage-deed provided that the mortgagors will redeem the land in one year, paying the principal-debt and interest at the rate of one per cent. per mensem, and, in case of default, the mortgagee may take possession of the land mortgaged in lieu of receiving the principal sum and interest and the mortgagee claimed interest for the period subsequent to the expiration of the period fixed for the redemption of the mortgage and up to the date of the mortgagee's obtaining possession of the land, held, that the correct interpretation of the deed was that the mortgage was to be a simple one for the period of one year, and if not redeemed by that time, was to be converted into a usufructuary mortgage with possession. MOHAN LAL v. MUKIM, 175 P.L.R. 1901 = 114 P.R. 1901. (21 A. 39, P.C., D.)

(33)—Mortgage of zamindari with entire right and income and kattubadis—Construction of mortgage-deed—Zamindar's right in one of the villages as simple mortgagee under the inamdars, whether covered by mortgage.—By the instrument of simple mortgage executed in favour of the plaintiff, in this case, the defendant, a zamindar, mortgaged his entire zamindari as well as his entire right and income and the kattubadis on enfranchised inams. In the case of one of the villages mortgaged, the interests which the zamindar possessed in it at the time were two-fold, one, the right to the payment of the kattubadi, and the other, his right as a simple mortgagee under the inamdars of that village. On plaintiff's suit to enforce the mortgage, the question arose whether the zemindar's right as mortgagee of the village was also mortgaged to the plaintiff along with the kattubadi payable to the zemindar in respect of it. Plaintiff claimed that both the above rights passed to him under the mortgage deed urging that the words "entire right and income" used in the deed showed that not only rights qua zemindar but also all the rights possessed by him, qua zamindar or otherwise, within the entire limits of the zamindari had formed the subject of the mortgage; but it was held that the zamindari's mortgage rights in the village were not covered by the mortgage-deed, that the expression, with our "entire right and income" related only to the estate held on zamindari tenure, as such, and had no reference to the entire zamindari tenure in its geographical sense. The intention of the parties that the mortgage should extend to quit-rents on enfranchised inams had to be given effect to by the express inclusion of such quit-rents in the deed, and that was because the right to such quit-rent was not possessed by the mortgagor qua zamindar. So also the parties would have expressly included the zamindar's simple mortgage right in the village, if their intention had been to include that right also in the mortgage. BHIMARAJU CHETTY v. SRI KUNJA BEHARI GAJENDRA DEVU, 25 M. 42.

(34)—Hypothecation bond—Terms—Construction.—Where a bond speaks of the property as hypothecated and provides that the plaintiff shall have recourse against the persons and the property of the executants in case of non-payment, the words are apt and appropriate for creating good hypothecation-bond. NARAIN SINGH v. MATA PRASAD SINGH, A.W.N. 1887, 52.

(35)—Hypothecation bond, Construction of—Determination of liability.—The first defendant and his deceased brother executed an instrument of hypothecation in favour of A, wife of the seventh defendant, in consideration of A undertaking to pay a creditor of the executants a sum due from them; and the bond provided that the amount of yearly rent payable by A's husband to the executant under a lease-deed executed on the same day should be paid to A by her husband for interest due to her under the hypothecation-bond, and that the principal amount was payable in seventeen years from the date of the bond. The lease-deed executed by A's husband was for a term of 23 years, and it in its turn referred to the hypothecation-bond and provided that the rent should be paid to his wife until the debt was cleared, and that thereafter, the rent should be paid to the lessors. In a suit by the transferee of A's interest in the hypothecation, for interest, held that the simultaneous execution of the hypothecation and the lease, the facts that the term of the latter covered the whole period fixed in the hypothecation for the repayment of the principal, the relationship between the hypothecation creditor and the lessee (which pointed to their interests in the matter being identical) and lastly, the specific reference in each instrument to the appropriation of the rent to the interest, indubitably showed that the transaction between the parties was of a tripartite character intended to relieve the obligors from any responsibility in respect of interest, and to entitle the obligee to look for liquidation of interest solely to the source pointed out. CHENNAPATNAM GOPAL ROW v. (36)—Mortgage—Charge—Simple debt—Limitation Act, 1877, sch. II, arts. 132 and 147.—This was a suit to recover principal and interest due on a mortgage by attachment and sale of the mortgaged property. The deed recited thus:—"The mortgagors shall pay the mortgage money by instalments of Rs. 60 a year, together with interest at the rate of annas 8 per cent, in case of default of payment of an annual instalment of Rs. 60 together with interest at the rate of annas eight per cent. the mortgagors will put Kirpa Ram mortgagee in possession of the mortgaged share of the house; if the mortgagors raise any objection the mortgagee will be at liberty to at once get possession of the mortgaged land by bringing a regular suit. Afterwards, the mortgagors will redeem and get released the mortgaged share on payment of the mortgage money together with the fixed amount of interest." Held, that in construing a document, the Courts must ascertain the intention of the parties, and as far as possible, interpret deeds executed by them accordingly, and that the deed referred to could not be interpreted as conferring on the mortgagee a right to sell the property, so as to make article 147, Second Schedule, Limitation Act, 1877, applicable. Art. 132 governed the case. Held, further, that the intention of the parties was to hypothecate the land in the first instance, giving the mortgagee the power of taking steps for assuming possession and so converting the charge into a usufructuary mortgage, but as the mortgagee failed so to convert it, the transaction remained no more than a promise to pay by the debtor who had hypothecated his land as a collateral security, and, as plaintiff failed to enforce payment within 12 years of the first default by taking possession and so carrying out and developing the contract, he was not entitled to a charge on the land or to be allowed to sell it to satisfy his claim. MILKI RAM v. mortgage-deed provided that "if the hypothecated property was damaged or destroyed by accident, or proved insufficient to satisfy the debt, then the debt should be recoverable from a moiety" of another house belonging to the mortgagor. On the first house being sold in execution of a prior mortgage, the mortgagee sued to recover the amount by the sale of the second house. Held that the contingency referred to in the bond had arisen, and the mortgagee was entitled to enforce hypothecation against the second house. GANESH DAS v. (38)—Construction of document—Usufructuary mortgage—No term specified—Re-entry on the property by the mortgagor.—In ascertaining whether a deed, confessedly ambiguous, amounts to an usufructuary mortgage or to a lease in perpetuity, the Judge should look within the four corners of the instrument before him and ascertain from it what kind of transaction the parties had in view when they entered into it. In the case of an usufructuary mortgage, where no term is specified, the mortgagor is entitled to re-enter on the property when, on taking an account, he is able to show that the principal and interest have been satisfied. LALA DOUL NARAIN v. RUNJIT SINGH, 1 C.L.R. 256.

(39)—Usufructuary mortgage—Reg. V of 1827, s. 15, cl. 3—Sale of mortgaged property.—A mortgage deed provided that the mortgagee was to take possession of the land and enjoy the profits in lieu of interest, and that the mortgagor was to be at liberty to recover possession in any year on payment of the sum of Rs. 750. There was no promise by the mortgagor to pay the money. It was simply provided that until he did pay the amount, the mortgagee was to retain the property. Held that the mortgage was a usufructuary mortgage, and that, under the circumstances of the case, it was not the intention of the parties that the land should be sold, and that the deed contained a special agreement which took the case out of the provisions of cl. (3) of s. 15 of Reg. V of 1827, which was the law in force at the time the mortgage was effected. SADASHIV ABAJI BHAT v. VYANKATRAO RAMRAO SHINDE, 20 B. 296. [D., 21 B. 267, 5 Bom. (40)—Kanom—Suit by kanomdar for sale of mortgaged property—Maintainability.—A kanomdar sued for sale of the mortgaged property in default of payment of the amount due on the kanom. Held that the suit was not maintainable and that the kanomdar had no right to bring the property to sale. In the instrument sued upon, there was no covenant to pay, nor was there any evidence that a promise to pay was one of the incidents of a "kanom" according to usage. A "kanom" in the mortgage aspect of it, is a usufructuary mortgage. SRIDEVI v. VIRARAYAN, 22 M. 350. (15 M. 366, R.)

(41)—Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), ss. 58, 98—Construction of deed—Usufructuary mortgage.—A mortgage deed for four years certain, provided that interest should be paid at a certain rate and that the mortgagee should have possession of the property and credit the profits thereof first in respect of the interest and then, the balance, if any, in respect of the principal, and that the property was redeemable at the expiry of the term on payment of the interest and principal that may then remain due on the mortgage. Held that although the instrument did not strictly fall within s. 58, cl. (d), of Act IV of 1882, because there was no stipulation in terms that the mortgagee was to remain in possession until payment of the mortgage money, still, applying the principles enunciated in s. 98 of the Act, it should be regarded as a usufructuary mortgage, not only during the four years, but after their expiration. HIKMATULLAH KHAN v. IMAM ALI, 12 A. 203=A.W.N. 1890, 87. [R., 10 O.C. 14.]

(42)—Usufructuary mortgage-deed—Clause allowing mortgagor to redeem within three years and in default in a particular month in subsequent years, construction of—Suit for redemption brought within said three years, whether premature.—Under the terms of a usufructuary mortgage-deed, the mortgagor was to pay back the mortgage-money and redeem the mortgage within three years and, in default, the mortgagee was to receive the money in any Ani month subsequently and restore the properties to the mortgagor. In accordance with the decision in Rose Ammal v. Rajaratnam Ammal (23 M. 33, R.), held, that, under the deed in question, the mortgagor had the right to redeem at any time on or before the expiry of the three years. All that the further clause in the document to the effect that on failure to redeem by the mortgagor within the three years he can pay the mortgage amount to the mortgagee in any month of Ani and recover the property, can be held to mean, is that he cannot recover in any subsequent year at a date earlier than Ani (June—July) as, if he did so, he would deprive the mortgagee of crops grown on the land. CHINNASAMY REDDIAR v. (44)—Usufructuary mortgage—Suit by mortgagee in possession for mortgage amount and arrears of rent—Mortgagee when entitled to such rent—Intention of parties.—The deed of mortgage in this case was redeemable at the end of its term by payment of the principal and the arrears of rent due from the mortgagors and the tenants, and the mortgagee who had obtained possession of the property sued for the mortgage debt with the arrears of rent due from the mortgagors and tenants of the property. Reversing the decree of the lower appellate Court and restoring that of the first Court, the High Court expressed its opinion that it was the intention of the parties that only arrears reasonably due were to be paid, and not such as arose from the negligence of the mortgagees, and, in the present case, it not having been shown that the arrears could not have been realised by due diligence of the mortgagees in possession, it was not competent to them to claim to recover such arrears. CHOTILAL V. KALKA PERSHAD, 7 N.W.P. 100.

(45)—Usufructuary mortgage—Suit for enhanced Government revenue paid by mortgagee—Cause of action.—Where, by the terms of a deed of usufructuary mortgage, the mortgagor accepts the liability for any enhanced revenue that may be paid by the mortgagee over and above the amount of such revenue entered in the mortgage-deed, and there is no provision or reservation for the adjustment of any such payments by the mortgagee to be made at the termination of the mortgage-tenure, the mortgagee may sue during the currency of the mortgage for excess revenue paid by him. NIKKA MAL V. GARDNER, 2 A. 193. [R., 13 A. 195 = A.W.N. 1890, 228.]

(46)—Usufructuary mortgage—Condition for reconveyance of property.—In a usufructuary mortgage, it was stipulated that the property was to be reconveyed on repayment of the principal sum lent, but nothing was said as to interest. Held that the condition implied that the usufruct was intended to be received by the mortgagee in lieu of interest, and, therefore, the mere fact that the amount of the principal had been received from usufruct was no ground for the mortgagor being entitled to re-possession of the property. *BUNWAREELAL V. It was provided in the mortgage-bond that, if the mortgagor should die within the fixed period, then "after me the whole share of zamindari.....hypothecated as above shall be considered as a complete sale" to the mortgagee. On the 4th January, 1881, immediately after the death of the mortgagor, the defendant, the representative of the original mortgagee, without any foreclosure or other legal proceedings procured mutation of names for the mortgaged property in his own favour and shortly afterwards entered into possession. Held, that the mortgage of 1871 was in substance, what it describes itself as being a mortgage by way of conditional sale. The mortgagee or his representative has, therefore, under Reg. XVII of 1806, the right to take legal proceedings with a view to foreclosure, and that foreclosure he could have obtained if, after the proper steps had been taken, the representatives of the mortgagor had failed to redeem within the time limited for that purpose by the terms of the Regulation. But there was no right to take possession of the property prescribed by law. In entering, as he did, therefore, the representative of the mortgagee was a mere trespasser, and the heirs of the mortgagor were entitled to sue him in ejectment as such. HUB ALI V. WAZIR-UN-NISSA, 3 C.L.J. 601, P.C. = 10 C. W.N. 778 = 28 A. 496 = 3 A.L.J. 712 = 1 M.L.T. 297 = 33 I.A. 107.

(48)—Mortgage-deed—Period of redemption not stipulated for—Covenant as to mortgage becoming sale on default of payment of the agreed interest, whether amounts to a conditional sale—Reg. XVII of 1806, if applicable.—The land in suit had been mortgaged with possession to the plaintiff by one D. No special period was fixed for redemption, but there was a condition that after six years' default in payment of the interest agreed upon by D, the land was to be considered as sold to the plaintiffs outright for the amount of principal and interest outstandings. Proceedings were taken by the plaintiffs against D's sons, under Regulations XVII of 1806, and the lower appellate Court, differing from the first Court, gave plaintiffs a decree for possession as owners by conditional sale. Held, following the Privy Council ruling in Kishori Mohan Roy v. Ganga Bahu Debi (23 C. 228, P.C., F.) that the agreement in question is not liable to the incidents applicable to such cases under the Regulation, the mortgage-deed in the present case containing no stipulated period of redemption such as is required by para. 8 of the Regulation and, in the absence of such a stipulation, the full period of sixty years allowed for redemption by the Limitation Act will hold good and such period of limitation cannot be affected by any covenant accelerating, for other purposes, the time at which the principal may become due. Held, further, on a mere oral contract binding the mortgagor to repay the borrowed amount within stated time, a conditional sale cannot be set up such as might confer the status of an owner on the mortgagee with respect to the property mortgaged to

(50) — Sale — Stipulation for re-delivery of land conveyed on payment of sale amount with interest within certain time—Default—Effect.—Plaintiff executed to defendant a document containing the following terms:—“The Muddata Kriyam executed on the 10th April, 1835 by the Madugula Zemindar to the Zemindar of Bobbili. As I have conveyed to you as sale for Rs. 6,000 the Papuchetti Seri adjoining the land of Kasbah Jagganathapuram in the Zamindari of Madugula, they are given you for absolute sale: so the said sale money has been received at the time of the sale. In the event of my paying you the principal Rs. 6,000 within six months from this date, you must give back the said land Papuchetti Seri to me. In the event of our not being able to pay according to the said stipulation, you should hereditarily from son to grandson enjoy the produce of the said land, yourself paying to government the assessment fixed on a subdivision reckoning this sale money to be a pure sale. This Muddata Kriyam has been executed with my consent.” Held that this document was a sale with a condition of re-purchase. The decisions of the late Sadar Court of Madras have carried the doctrine of relief after the time named in the conveyance so far as to say that wherever the security for money is an object of the transaction, no sale can become absolute. The High Court have followed the English rule and have held the question to be one of construction, admitting, however, for the purpose of the construction, other documents and oral evidence. RAJAH LAKSHMI CHELLIAH GARU v. KRISHNA BHUPATI DEVU, 7 M.H.C. 6. [R., 1 M. 1, P.C., 3 M. 26.]

(51) — Mortgage by conditional sale—Time for redemption.—Heirs of the mortgagor—Right to redeem a portion.—In a mortgage by conditional sale, the time fixed in the document is not of the essence of the contract. The time for redemption is 60 years. (1 M. 17, F.) In a mortgage by conditional sale containing a stipulation to account, if any part of the debt remained to be satisfied after accounts were taken, any one of the heirs of the mortgagor is entitled to redeem; but if nothing remains to be paid, one of the heirs can only redeem his share of the property. *AMIRUDIN v. (53) — Mortgage decree — Interest—“Date of payment,” meaning of — Construction.—The ordinary meaning of the words “date of payment” is the date on which payment is made, and ought not to be construed as meaning the date on which payment ought to be, but is not made. Therefore, where a mortgage decree directed that interest should be paid at the bond rate up to “the date of payment.” Held, that the interest up to the date of actual payment must be paid and not up to the date of preliminary decree only. RADHIKA MOHEM GHOSE v. BROJENEDRA KUMAR SAHA, 14 C.W.N. 125 = 5 Ind. Cas. 61. (9 C.L.J. 288, 4 Ind. Cas. 56, 23 A. 181, 28 I.A. 35, 33 C. 846, R.)

(54) — Interest provided for from date of decree to payment — Construction.—Where a mortgage decree provides for interest to be recovered from the date of the decree till the date of payment, the words “date of payment” mean, the date of actual payment, and not the last day fixed for payment in the decree. *MANOO LAL v. On appeal, the Judicial Committee held that the High Court had not rightly construed the terms of the deed and the effect of the several conditions in it. It was clear from the entire deed that the intention of the parties was that interest was to be continued to be paid at the stipulated rate subsequent to the due date and up to actual payment. The payability of such post diem interest was also established by inferences from the agreements accompanying the mortgage, viz., that the debtor was not to transfer the mortgaged property till payment

(56)—Usufructuary mortgage—Right of sale—Covenant to pay principal—Claim for interest.—A mere usufructuary mortgage would confer no right to have the property sold. But where there is a distinct covenant to pay the principal, and the land is security for the same, the inference is that it is the intention of the parties that the property should be sold; it is a simple usufructuary mortgage carrying with it the right to have the property sold in default of payment of the principal sum. Where the mortgagee is entitled to possession in lieu of interest and he never takes the trouble to obtain possession, he loses his right to interest. The land is security only for the principal sum and the mortgagee in such a case is not entitled to ask that the property may be sold in default of payment of interest. MAHADAJI v. JOTI, 17 B. 425. amount by bringing the mortgaged property to sale and, holding the former personally liable for any deficiency, the recital as to delivery of possession was held to be apparently a mere form of words and the mortgage was held nothing but a simple mortgage. There was also a covenant in the deed that a certain commission was to be paid for every year that the debt to the plaintiff remained outstanding. It was argued for the defendant, however, that the payment of the commission was subject to the clause about the keeping of a gumasta by the plaintiff, but it was held, that the stipulation for commission was clearly unconditional, as it did not appear from any of the wordings in the deed that the defendant's liability for commission had any connection with the undertaking by plaintiff to maintain a gumasta. Held, further, that on the construction of the clauses as to the payment interest even though they contained no express provision for post diem interest, the plaintiff was entitled, on default, to recover interest technically as damages, at the stipulated rate, up to the date of the decree, and at a reasonable rate, thence forward and up to realization. *GANGARAIN BIHARI LAL v. (58)—Mortgage—Construction—Compound interest—Additional interest.—Where a mortgage-deed provided that interest should be paid at stated times failing which compound interest and principal should be paid on a fixed day, and that, if that amount was not paid on such fixed day, a higher rate of interest should be paid, held in a suit on the mortgage where it appeared that the amount was not paid on the fixed day, that, on a true construction of the document, compound interest to be paid by the mortgagor to the mortgagee could not be held to be confined to the period allowed for the repayment of the mortgage-money, but should be taken to extend to the subsequent period also during which the debt remained undischarged. (23 M. 534, R.) Also held that the compound interest was payable only up to the date of the decree, and subsequent interest should be paid up to the date of realization at 6 per cent. on the aggregate amount. *RAMANATHAN CHETTY v. the net profits. . . . in lieu of interest and during the time of such possession the interest and profits would be equal" (b); "that if the net profits should not cover the amount of interest, the mortgagor would make good the deficiency out of his own pocket"—the deficiency, if not so made good being made payable "with interest at the rate mentioned above at the time of redemption. Held, that although cl. (a), standing alone, might possibly be construed as constituting an ordinary usufructuary mortgage, its prima facie meaning was qualified by cl. (b); the two clauses were not inconsistent with each other and read together made the principal money payable with compound interest. That the concluding portion of cl. (b) made the unpaid interest payable with compound interest. JAWA-HIR SINGH v. SOMESHAH DAT, 10 C.W.N. 266 = 1 M.L.T. 66, P.C. = 3 C.L.J. 354 = 28 A. 225 = 33 I.A. 42.

(60)—Mortgage bond — Construction of — Simple mortgage—Mortgage with possession—Personal liability of mortgagor — Interest—Penalty — Reasonable compensation.—Under the mortgage bond in dispute, the mortgagor stipulated that the house mortgaged was hypothecated as collateral security, and its possession was to be retained by the mortgagor who undertook to pay the mortgage debt, with interest at annas 12 per cent. per mensem, the interest being payable monthly and the principal within six years, that, in case the monthly payment of interest or the repayment of principal within six years failed, the rate of interest in either case was to rise to one per cent: held, that the deed disclosed a distinct promise to pay and the mortgage contemplated was clearly not of an usufructuary nature. Without deciding whether the enhanced rate of interest was or was not penal, the Chief Court considered the enhanced rate agreed to in the deed as a reasonable compensation to which the mortgagee was entitled. *BABU HARI SINGH v. cognizable by the Court. The mortgage shall be redeemed whenever the mortgage money shall be paid in a lump sum to the mortgagee. If the mortgagee relinquishes or vacates the mortgaged shop of his own accord, he shall, from the date of doing so, be entitled to receive from me interest at one per cent. per mensem." The plaintiff in the suit was the representative of the mortgagee. The defendant was the purchaser of the equity of redemption. It appeared that the plaintiff gave up possession of the mortgaged property in August, 1882. Plaintiff sued the defendant for recovery of the principal and interest at one per cent. per mensem from August, 1882, by enforcement of his lien against the mortgaged property. It was contended in defence (1) that the mortgage was usufructuary and that the mortgaged property was therefore not liable to sale, (2) that the interest payable under the deed was not charged upon the property and the deed created a personal liability to pay the interest only on the part of the original mortgagor and that the defendant who was the purchaser of the equity of redemption was not therefore liable, and (3) that the interest was recoverable, if at all, only upon the redemption of the mortgage. Held overruling all these pleas that the plaintiff was entitled to a decree against the mortgaged property for the principal and interest. CHANDAR KUAR v. SUBHKARAN DAS, A.W.N. 1887, 119. (A.W.N. 1886, 212, R.)

(62)—Mortgage-bond — Arrears of interest, suit for, before the principal was due.—In a mortgage-bond, the interest was payable every year, failing which interest on the interest and also enhanced interest on the principal were provided for. Held, that the mortgagee was precluded, by the terms of the bond, from suing for interest or for sale of the mortgaged property, before the principal became due. KANNU v. NATESA, 14 M. 477. [R., 15 C.P. L.R. 78.]

(63)—Mortgage-deed—Provision as to interest.—A deed of mortgage, fixing a certain rate of interest without any specific condition that such interest will cease on the happening of a contingency and fixing also a date for redemption with the condition that on default it is to become a sale, does not intend that interest should cease from the date when the principal becomes due. *SARDAR UMRAO SINGH v. (64)—Mortgage — Suit for redemption — Interest, whether charged on land—Construction of mortgage-deed.—A deed of conditional sale of immoveable property, which was to become absolute at the end of seven years, provided that interest on its amount should be payable annually, that, in default of such payment, interest on such interest, at a certain rate, may be recoverable, and that the sale may be recovered by suit from the person and other property of the mortgagor, and that the property might be redeemed on payment of the principal and the last year's interest. Interest for four years was recovered by suits against the mortgagor. At the end of the period, the mortgagor sued for redemption by depositing the principal and the interest for one year only, contending that the interest for the remaining years was not charged on the property. Held, on a construction of the deed, that notwithstanding the provision that the mortgagee might recover the annual interest from the person and other property of the mortgagor, the legal effect of the structure of the deed was to charge the interest also on the land, and that the stipulations, as to payment of interest, were framed on the assumption that it would be punctually paid at the periods mentioned in the deed, and that being so, the provision as to the last year's interest was only then to operate, and that it was not intended that the last year's interest should be on a different footing from the other interest, the true intention being that all the interest having been paid together with the principal sum, the transaction would be closed, and the conditional vendor might then, and only then, redeem the land, and that, therefore, the suit for redemption should be dismissed. SURJU PRASAD v. MANSUR ALI KHAN, 5 A. 463. [Affirmed on appeal, 9 A. 20, P.C.=13 I.A. 113.]

(65)—Stipulation for payment of principal in default in paying interest—Construction.—

Where by a deed of mortgage, a mortgagor covenanted to re-pay the principal within one year and the interest, every month, and, in default in paying interest, to pay both at once, held, on default being made in the payment of interest, that the suit for both the principal and interest which accrued due, may be instituted within the year. *YEO HTEAN SEW v. (66)—Mortgage of a taluka as hastobudi—Subsequent mortgage of sarbarakari rights in two garhs of taluka—Ascertainment of mortgagor's sarbarakari right in the garhs was only subsequent to plaintiff's mortgage—Nature of security for plaintiff's loan—Evidence Act, ss. 92 (6) & 98—Admissibility of evidence—Transfer of Property Act, s. 8—Judgment nunc pro tunc.—A suit was instituted on a mortgage-bond executed by the 1st defendant in favour of the plaintiff. The loan had been secured by the mortgage of a taluka belonging to the 1st defendant. Subsequent to the plaintiff's mortgage, the sarbarakari rights of the 1st defendant in two garhs of the taluka were mortgaged to defendants Nos. 2 & 3. The question for decision was whether the sarbarakari rights of defendant No. 1 in the two garhs were also mortgaged to the plaintiff. Held:— Per Pargiter, J.—Evidence was admissible under ss. 92 (6) and 98 of the Evidence Act, because it showed how the plaint document was related to existing facts and because the nature of the landed tenures was a special matter which could not be stated off-hand but required to be elucidated by a reference to the particular facts. The villages composing the garhs were definitely ascertained and recorded as sarbarakari, only after the date of the mortgage to the plaintiff. In the negotiations, that preceded the plaintiff's mortgage, a list of all the villages comprised in the taluk was given by the manager of defendant No. 1 and in that, it was definitely stated that all the villages were hastobudi. As defendant No. 1 could not dispute that he mortgaged the villages in the two garhs as hastobudi, defendants Nos. 2 & 3, who derived their title from him, could not be in a better position. The result was that defendants Nos. 2 & 3 became puisne mortgagees of the sarbarakari rights in the two garhs. Per Woodroffe, J.—No books or papers were produced to show that the Zemindari and sarbarakari rights in the villages were kept existing separately by defendant No. 1. From the terms of the mortgage to the plaintiff, it was clear that defendant No. 1, intended to mortgage all the rights which he then possessed. In the list, it was expressly stated that the villages comprising the garhs were hastobudi and not sarbarakari villages. Under s. 8 of the Transfer of Property Act, a transfer of property passes to the transferee all the interest which the transferor is then capable of passing in the property and in the legal incidents thereof, unless a different intention is expressed or necessarily implied. In this case, both the superior and the subordinate rights were vested in one and the same person as Zemindar and the words in the plaint-bond being general, in the absence of reservation of either, all the rights in the mortgagor stood as security for the loan. After the appeal was argued, the appellant died, and hence the High Court entered its judgment nunc pro tunc and dated the judgment as on the date on which it was reserved, and not on that it was pronounced. *RAJA GOUR CHANDRA GAJAPATHI NARAYAN DEB v. (67)—Construction of terms of—Waiver of right to cancel arrangement for payment by instalments.—Where a mortgagee had not, on the mortgagor's failure to make regular payment, proceeded to cancel the arrangement for payment by instalments but had accepted irregular payments, and then the mortgagor made further default: Held, the mortgagee could not, on such further default, sue to set aside the whole arrangement ab initio but was only entitled to the balance of the principal together with interest from the date of the last instalment held to be satisfied. SAIYID SAKHAWAT HUSAIN v. GAJADHAR PERSHAD, A.W.N. 1906, 139. (5 A. 289, Appr.)

(68)—Construction—Remedy by sale or possession—Special provision—Limitation.—A deed of mortgage provided, among other things, that on the mortgagor's making default of payment, the mortgagee should take possession of the land mortgaged, and hold possession until he might pay the principal and interest that remain unpaid, when the mortgagee took possession. The lower Court, upon a construction of this clause, came to the conclusion that the mortgaged property could not be brought to sale; and that the mortgagee's only remedy was a suit for possession, but that was time barred. Held, that the mortgagee was entitled to enforce his security by sale. KRISHNAPA v. BABAJI, 1 Bom. L.R. 461=23 B. 781.

(69)—Priority of mortgage—Intention to preserve prior security.—Where a person mortgaged his property first to A, then to another and thirdly to A again, in which last mortgage there was a recital of the first mortgage, and a statement as to the liquidation of the first debt, held, on a construction of the third mortgage deed, that the transaction did not amount to payment of the original debt, but it was in reality a fresh advance upon fresh security being given for both the old debt and the fresh advance and upon a fresh arrangement being made as to interest and that the old security for the old debt remained untouched. Held, also that even if this were not so, and the old debt was paid by the new transaction, that would not necessarily destroy the security; and if there was nothing to show a contrary intention, the creditor must be presumed to have intended to keep the security alive for his own protection. GOPAL CHUNDER SREEMONY v. HEREMBO CHUNDAR HOLDAR, 16 C. 523. (10 C. 1035, F.) [Appr., 23 C. 790; R., 12 C.P.L.R. 70, 5 C.L.J. 611=36 C. 193.]

(70)—Mortgage deed, construction—Security for payment of debts previous to mortgage—Clog on right of redemption.—Where it is clear from a mortgage-deed that the mortgaged property sought to be redeemed was given as security not only for the mortgage amount but also of previous debts, the mortgagor can redeem only on payment of all the moneys secured. But, if it does not appear on the mortgage-bond that such was intended, equity will not allow the right to redeem to be clogged by any such bye-agreement to postpone the redemption to the payment of all the debts due and payable by the mortgagor. RAMA v. MARTAND, 9 B. 236, Note. [D., 12 B. 231, 28 B. 349=6 Bom. L.R. 313.]

(71)—Zuripeshgee lease—Construction.—A Zuripeshgee lease contained the following provision, viz., "After the expiry of the term, it will be competent to me (lessor) in the month of Jeith of any year I can to pay the Zuripeshgee and cancel the lease." Held that the words barred re-entry in the middle of any year in the event of the lessee's occupation continuing after the expiry of the lease owing to the lessor's default to pay off the loan, and that they did not contain any undertaking by the lessee to hold on until it suited the lessor to pay him off. ROY GOUREE SUNKUR v. BHOLEE PERSHAD, 17 W.R. 211.

(72)—Mortgage—Redemption—Construction of mortgage bond.—The appellants who borrowed a further amount from the mortgagee M who was in possession of the land under his previous mortgage, executed in his favour an instrument containing the following among other provisions:—"We make a trust of our 8 anna share in favour of M for a term of 11 years; he shall remain in possession, shall be entrusted with the profits and leases of the property.....should we after the expiration of 11 years pay the principal and interest at one per cent. in one lump sum, the share shall be redeemed in the month of Jaith." The appellants sued for possession eight years after the period fixed, on the ground that the principal and interest had been satisfied out of the profits. They contended that after the expiry of the 11 years, the respondent became a mortgagee and accountable as such. Held that the respondent's possession of the 8 anna share continued after the expiration of the 11 years upon the same terms and under the same obligations as he had occupied it before, and that, so far as the appellants were concerned, they could not release it except in Jaith of any year upon payment of the lump amount of principal and interest. GHASI v. BALLABH RAM, A.W.N. 1882, 137.

(73)—Mortgage—Construction—Mortgagee empowered to proceed against mortgagor's other properties in certain events.—Where a mortgage deed contained the words "that in the event of a sale in execution of decree or in consequence of some other claim, the property mortgaged be sold at auction or otherwise alienated, the mortgagee shall recover the money lent by him from any other property in the possession of the mortgagor, and the mortgagor's person and property shall also be held liable for the debt," held, these words were thereby intended to give some supposed further security to the mortgagee by allowing him the power, in case of the property going out of the mortgagor's hands in some unforeseen manner, to recoup himself from any other property the mortgagor might be possessed of, but not to take away from the mortgagee the right that every holder of a deed of conditional sale has to issue the usual notice of foreclosure, and at the expiry of the year of grace to obtain by suit possession of the property. ACHUMBIT MISSER v. LALLA NUND RAM, 11 W.R. 544.

(74)—Mortgage-deed—Construction—Mortgagee in possession.—Held, on the construction of a mortgage-deed, that the mortgagee in possession was not responsible for the amount of the gross rental as shown in the jamabandi, but only for such sums as were actually received by him or on his behalf, and such sums, if any, as might have been received by him but for his own neglect or fault. BANARSI PARSAD v. RAM NARAIN, 25 A. 287, P.C.=7 C.W.N. 514=30 I.A. 66=8 Sar. 447. [R., 8 O.C. 193.]

(75)—Destruction of mortgaged property by vis major—Stipulation in mortgage-deed for payment to mortgagee of cost of restoring.—The deed of mortgage in this case, itself provided for the mortgagee rebuilding the mortgaged house if it should be destroyed by 'asmani' or 'sultani' and this provision was construed to imply that the repayment of the amount, if any, expended by the mortgagee for such purpose was a condition precedent of redemption by the mortgagor. The mortgaged house was destroyed by fire originating in another part of the village and spreading ultimately to the house in question, and such destruction was held to be in the nature of a calamity from heaven within the meaning of the term 'asmani' used in the mortgage deed. Also the cost of rebuilding the house under such circumstances, should, even on general principles, be allowed to the mortgagee. SAKHARAM SHET v. AMTHA DEVJI GANDHI, 14 B. 28.

(76)—Putnee — Contract — Consideration — Equitable relief.—The defendants executed a deed to the plaintiffs, stipulating that the amount borrowed thereunder without interest should be re-paid on a given date, and that, in case of default, they (the defendants) should execute a putnee lease of certain properties to the plaintiffs, original sum borrowed being considered as a bonus for the lease. The deed also recited that, if the defendants did not execute the lease, the deed should be counted as a putnee patta. The defendants neither repaid the debt on the stipulated date nor executed the lease. The plaintiffs sued for possession. Held that the transaction was not a conditional sale, but a contract to create a putnee in favour of the plaintiffs on a certain date and for a certain consideration, unless that sum is paid without interest on a particular date and that the plaintiffs were entitled to possession of the properties recited in the deed on the footing of a putnee, such possession commencing from date of suit. Held further that plaintiff was entitled to relief even though he might have asked for something to which he was not strictly entitled, and that the Court could in equity, relieve the defendants upon payment of the original sum with interest from the date of advance, even if the bonus claimed be deemed inadequate. JUSSEE-MOODDEEN BISWAS v. HURO SOONDUREE DOSSEE, 19 W. R. 274.

(6)—Decree dealing with different interests of mortgages as between themselves—Mortgagor not to be vexed again in respect of same mortgage.—As an ordinary rule, a foreclosure suit must be a suit applicable to the whole property mortgaged and a mortgagor is not to be held liable to a variety of suits and proceedings in respect of the different interests which the mortgagees may as between themselves possess. As the rights of all parties under a mortgage might be fully and finally dealt with in a suit properly framed a decree in such a suit concludes the whole matter and the mortgagor cannot be further vexed in respect of the mortgage. DHIRAJ SINGH v. (9)—Right of mortgagor to collect rent due up to date of decree being made absolute.—So long as a decree for foreclosure is not made absolute, the ownership of the mortgaged property continues to be vested in the mortgagor and he is entitled to exercise all rights appertaining to such ownership, provided he does no act which would render the security insufficient. He is therefore entitled to all rents which have accrued due up to the date of the decree being made absolute. SINGAI GOPAL SAO v. MEHTAB BI, 9 C.P.L.R. 130.

(10)—Lands taken in execution of decree for possession after foreclosure, suit not sustainable for the recovery of.—The lands in dispute were included within the lands claimed by the defendant B.P. as given in the plaint filed by him for possession after foreclosure of two mortgages by certain Mahomedans, all whose lands were claimed by the plaintiff as purchased subsequent to the said mortgages by the plaintiff's ancestor. The then claim of the defendant B.P. was decreed without an exception on the ground of the boundaries exceeding the lands mortgaged or encroaching upon the lands of the said ancestor of the plaintiff. The High Court held that the evidence in the present suit established that it was certain that in the execution case brought by the defendant under his decree, the lands in dispute were respectively claimed and denied, to be included in his decree, and were, after the passing of Act VIII of 1859, made over to the decree-holder as part of the decree. Whatever, therefore, might be the merits of the claim of the plaintiff the present suit would not lie as for the recovery of possession of the lands in dispute, because, it was not established that, in prior execution proceedings, besides the lands which the plaintiff allowed were the decreed lands, his ancestor, as he alleged, lost only the lakheraj portion, so that the lands in dispute had not been formally made over in execution but were otherwise taken possession of by the defendant. The lands in suit having thus passed in execution of the decree for possession after the foreclosure of the mortgage, the present suit was not maintainable for the recovery of possession of such lands. CHUNDER COOMAR ROY v. before the mortgage T and M had entered into an agreement sanctioned by a Court's decree to the effect that the property in suit should not be sold by M to any one other than T. Both the lower Courts held that the plaintiff's mortgage was bona fide and there was no evidence of his having had notice of T's alleged agreement with M, and decreed that T may obtain possession on paying the plaintiff what was due on his mortgage. The contention advanced on second appeal that plaintiff, as bona fide mortgagee without notice who had foreclosed, was not affected by any arrangement made between defendant M, and other parties, but that the mortgage must stand, was held by the High Court to be sound and valid. In the absence of any evidence of plaintiff having entered into the mortgage with notice of the prior arrangement with T, plaintiff would be entitled to a decree. Also, if the agreement with T invalidated the mortgage to M, the latter took nothing by his mortgage, and T was under no legal obligation to satisfy. If, on the other hand, the mortgage was, under the circumstances, not affected by the prior alleged agreement with T, the plaintiff was entitled to the possession he sought. RAMDOOLUB DAY v. (12)—Effect of—Interest of vendee by conditional sale—Obiter.—Up to the time of the foreclosure becoming absolute, the interest of the vendee by conditional sale amounts only to securing his money and he holds the land simply as security. (13)—Mortgage — Foreclosure — Mortgaged property, purchaser of share.—Certain property was mortgaged to S, who disposed of a portion to R. After foreclosure-proceedings by S, both S and R sued to recover possession. The lower appellate Court dismissed the claim as regards R's portion, because R had not been a party to the foreclosure-proceedings. Held that, as the foreclosure was duly carried by "the receiver" of the deed of mortgage (s. 8, Reg. XVII of 1806), that is, the original mortgagee, it was good as regards the whole property, and conferred an absolute title on the mortgagee or anybody claiming under him. RAJCHANDRA PODDAR v. It was held however that there had been no foreclosure of the mortgaged property as required by law, there being no authority that any one of the several parties interested in a mortgage is at liberty to foreclose in respect of his fractional share. No valid foreclosure having thus taken place, plaintiff was not entitled to sue for possession. Moreover, it was incumbent on the plaintiff to show that the mortgagor had notice of plaintiff's interest and there was no evidence to that effect. BHORA ROY v. ABILACK ROY, 10 W.R. 476. be followed in foreclosure proceedings under Reg. XVII of 1806 are not merely directory. Strict compliance with the conditions prescribed therein is a necessary precedent to the right of the conditional vendee to claim the forfeiture of the conditional vendor's right. The various requirements of the Regulation have to be strictly observed in order to entitle a mortgagee to come into Court and assert an absolute title to the property of the mortgagor. (3 C. 397 = 5 I.A. 18, 11 C. 111 = 11 I.A. 186, F.) In the present case the provisions of the Regulation had not been strictly observed and the plaintiff failed to establish that he had strictly followed them. It was also held that this suit could not be treated as one instituted under the Transfer of Property Act so as to grant the plaintiff the relief he would be entitled to by that Act, since, that would be countenancing an entire change in the nature and character of the suit from the shape in which it was originally instituted. SITLA BAKSH v. (24)—*Mortgage, foreclosure of—Reg. The prescribed procedure must be strictly followed. (3 C. 397 = 5 I.A. 18, F.) It was therefore held in the case that, though the mortgagor, at the hearing of the foreclosure suit in the first Court, had not insisted on the insufficiency of the notification of the mortgagee's application for foreclosure, but had relied on another defence, it could not be construed as a binding admission that notice had been duly given; and that the mortgagor was not precluded from questioning the regularity of the proceedings in his subsequent appeal. MADHO PERSAD v. the stipulated time, his title to the mortgaged property had become absolute by virtue of proceedings taken by him under Regulation XVII of 1806. The Court of first instance dismissed the claim holding that there was no evidence that the mortgage money was paid, and that, until that was proved, the foreclosure proceedings were void. The lower Appellate Court set aside the decree of the first Court on the ground that the defendant had admitted the receipt of the mortgage money and that the foreclosure proceedings had been properly conducted. In second appeal to the High Court, it was contended for the defendants that the case was governed, not by the provisions of Regulation XVII of 1806, but by those of the Transfer of Property Act, IV of 1882. Held, dismissing the appeal, that Regulation XVII of 1806 was rightly applicable to the case. The plaintiff took proceedings under the Regulation before the Transfer of Property Act came into force. Under s. 6 of the General Clauses Act (I of 1868), the repeal of the Regulation by the Act did not affect proceedings commenced under the Regulation, nor could the Act affect the right to the property which the plaintiff had obtained under the Regulation before the Act came into force. GOKUL SINGH v. (37)—Reg. XVII of 1806, ss. 7 & 8—Construction—"Application," meaning of—"Date of notification," meaning of—Issuing of perwannah, meaning of.—S. 7 of Reg. XVII of 1806 means that the mortgagor shall, before the mortgage is foreclosed, in the manner provided by the s. 8 of the Regulation, be entitled to the redemption of his property if (among other things) the amount due be deposited by him in the Zillah Court within one year (according to the era current where the mortgage may take place) from and after the application of the mortgagee to the Zillah Court for foreclosure in conformity with s. 8. A "mortgagee's application" in s. 7 of the Regulation means the whole transaction contemplated in s. 8, ending with the notification to the mortgagor. Thus, the year of grace for payment and the year necessary for completion of foreclosure commence to run from the date of the notification. "Date of notification" means the date when the perwannah or document of notification is issued by the Court, and not the date when it is served on the mortgagor nor the date when it is signed and sealed. No time should be counted against the mortgagor during which the perwannah, although it may be complete in all respects, is lying idle in the Sherishtah of the Court, and whatever might be the actual date when the Court put its hand to the document, still it is not to be treated as a notification within s. 8 until it has become an active order of Court. A perwannah is first issued when it is handed to the peon for delivery. SUROOP CHUNDER NAG v. BONOMALEE PUNDIT, 9 W.R. 116.

(39)—Notice—Reg. XVII of 1806, s. 8.—The notification under s. 8, Reg. XVII of 1806 is not merely a preliminary proceeding leading up to a judgment of foreclosure to be subsequently pronounced in Court. The service of the notice must be evidenced by the clearest proof, and must in all cases, be if not personal, at least such as to leave no doubt on

The plaintiff attached the land in execution of a decree against the vendor. The vendees objected claiming the land as their own, and this objection was allowed. The vendor did not deposit the money within three years from the date of the decree. The plaintiff sued the vendees to establish her right to bring the land to sale as belonging to the vendor. Held that, as the vendor had no subsisting rights, when the defendants objected to the attachment, in the land attached, the plaintiff could never assert with success any title to the land. ABDUL KADIR v. years not having elapsed since the last recognition of the mortgage by the mortgagee, the mortgagor or his representatives can claim to redeem it. The question for the Court to decide in such a case is therefore simply this, whether or not the original mortgage relied on by the plaintiffs had come to an end. Where a person who has been originally a mortgagee out of possession has been put into possession by the act and permission of the mortgagor, inasmuch as a parol contract is treated as enough in India to pass immoveable property, he should be taken to have really obtained a new title altogether different from that which he possessed before and having its foundation in the act of the parties themselves when they put him into possession. The proceedings in this case were those held before the issue of the Circular Order of 22nd July 1813. The mortgagor had an opportunity in a Court competent to decide the matter, to contest, as against the mortgagees, all questions of fact necessary to give a good and absolute title to them. He had such opportunity and was, in fact, called upon, if he could, to show that the mortgagees were paid off or that the mortgage was a bad one or that the year of grace had not elapsed. This he did not do, but on the other hand, admitted that the money was not paid and that the extension of the year of grace had elapsed without his having performed any conditions which would have saved the property from being foreclosed. It was held that, under the circumstances, whether the proceedings amounted to a regular suit or not, they were in themselves sufficient to effect a valid foreclosure. RUNJEET NARAIN SINGH v. MUSSUMMAT SHUREEFOONISSA, 10 W.R. 478.

(52)—Mortgage—Profits to be taken in lieu of interest—Suit by mortgagee after term to recover mortgage-money maintainable—Demand and refusal—Cause of action.—A mortgage of a village had been effected for seven years, under the terms of which the mortgagee was to remain in possession of the village and was to take the profits in lieu of interest, until redemption. When the mortgagee sued to recover the mortgage-money, after the expiry of the term, the mortgagor contended that the mortgagee was not entitled to recover his money, so long as his possession was not interfered with, and that he must wait for the recovery of the principal until he (the mortgagor) chose to redeem. Held that the mortgage was security for the repayment of the debt after the fixed term had expired, and that, during the currency of the term the mortgagor could not redeem, nor could the mortgagee recover his money, but that when the term had expired, either party could bring the transaction to a close. (5 N.W.P. App. 2, F.) [Not F., 11 A. 367 = A. W.N. 1889, 140.] Where there is a covenant on the part of the mortgagor to repay the money on the expiry of the term, which covenant he has failed to perform, no demand of

(53)—Usufructuary mortgage—Interest not stipulated for—Construction—Covenant to pay at specified time—Effect.—Where there is no stipulation for interest in a usufructuary mortgage-deed, the mortgagee is not entitled to interest, but the usufruct goes in lieu of interest. The effect of a stipulation as to re-payment of the mortgage amount at a specified time is, that the mortgagee would be entitled to foreclose his mortgage at such time if the amount is not re-paid. GUNGA PERSHAD ROY v. (54)—Reg. I of 1798, s. 2 — Reg. XXXIV of 1803, s. 12 — Mortgage — Foreclosure.—The "stipulated period" referred to in s. 2, Reg. I of 1798, and s. 12, Reg. XXXIV of 1803, is the whole period prescribed by the mortgage contract for the performance of conditions upon the fulfilment of which the mortgagor is entitled to a re-conveyance; and whether the mortgagor performs all those conditions or not, the application for foreclosure cannot be made before the expiration of such period. SRIMATI SARASIBALA DEBI v. (55)—Hindu Law—Mortgage of husband's property by widow without legal necessity—Previous gift of same property—Suit by mortgagee against widow and son of donee for recovery of debt by sale of hypotheca—Gift found to be inoperative—Remand for determining nearest reversioner improper.—A Hindu widow who had made a gift of her husband's property to a reversioner, mortgaged it to one J without any legal necessity. When the mortgagee applied to the Collector for mutation of names, it was not allowed owing to the objection of B, the son of the donee, who claimed to have been in possession of the property from his father's time. Thereupon the mortgagee sued to recover the mortgage-debt by sale of the hypotheca. The Court of first instance, holding that B had fully proved his own and his father's possession under the deed of gift, exempted the property from sale, but decreed the claim against the widow personally. The lower appellate Court in appeal, after finding that the widow had full possession of the property mortgaged, that the gift in favour of B's father never operated, and that the widow had not borrowed money for any cause allowable by Hindu law, remanded the case to determine who was the nearest reversioner. On special appeal to the High Court, held that the lower appellate Court was in error in remanding the case under s. 351, Act VIII of 1859, to try the above issue, for, whoever was the reversioner, his rights could not be prejudiced, as the hypothecation of the property was for a debt not sanctioned by the Hindu Law, and the property could not be sold in satisfaction of that debt, her interest in it being only limited. In the result, the claim of the plaintiff as brought was decreed with costs. BULAKI SINGH v. JAI KISHEN DAS, 7 N.W.P. 203.

(56)—Promise to re-pay mortgage money in instalments—Agreement to treat mortgage as sale in default of paying instalments—Application of Reg. XVII of 1806—Meaning of the term "stipulated period" in s. 8 of the regulation.—Reg. XVII of 1806, does not apply to the case of a mortgage, in which there is no stipulated period for redemption, but there is a condition that the mortgage debt is to be repaid in annual instalments, and that on default the land should be deemed to have been sold for the balance due at the time of default. (50 P.R. 1906, F.) The term "stipulated period" in s. 8 of the regulation means stipulated period for redemption, i.e., the full term, on the expiry of which the mortgage money is payable, although the mortgagee may, on a default being made, sue to foreclose at an earlier period under the terms of the deed. A foreclosure notice issued before the expiry of the stipulated period is premature and useless. HAR GOPAL v. BHAGWAN SAHAI, 70 P.R. 1907=38 P.L.R. 1908. (23 C. 228, P.C., F.)

(57)—Reg. XVII of 1806, s. 8—Omission of service of notice of foreclosure.—The omission to serve, on the mortgagor, a copy of the mortgage's application to foreclose, together with the Judge's Parwana, is fatal to the plaintiff's suit to recover possession of the mortgaged property after the expiry of the year of grace. The mortgagor should also be precisely informed as to the property or properties respecting which the mortgagee is desirous to foreclose. THE BANK OF HINDUSTAN, CHINA AND JAPAN, LD. v. XVII of 1806, it is essential for the plaintiff to satisfy the Court that the conditions of foreclosure required by that section, that the mortgagor should be furnished with a copy of the petition referred to therein and should have a notification from the Judge, in order that he may, within a year from the time of such

The functions of the Judge under the section are purely ministerial. (vide 10 M.I.A. 340—350.) The year, during which the mortgagor may redeem his property, runs, not from the date of the notice or the issuing of it by the Judge, but from the time of service of the notice. (61)—Notice of foreclosure before period for re-payment, whether valid and effective—Regulation XVII of 1806, s. 8, demand by mortgage under, when should be made.—The question for consideration in this case was whether the notice of foreclosure issued to the mortgagor before the period for redemption with the year of grace actually expired was a valid notice so as to effect the foreclosure at the expiry of the year of grace. Held, the mortgage, not being redeemable, and the mortgagee not entitled to payment until after the expiry of the year of grace, any notice before such period could have on effect towards foreclosure. Also the demand by the mortgagee provided for by s. 8, by Regulation XVII of 1806, can be made only after the mortgage money falls due. The further contention in the case, that the regulation cannot extend the stipulated period for payment, was held untenable in view of s. 7 which refers to the year of grace as the "extended period." *SANT SINGH v. (62)—Mortgage—Foreclosure—Notice under Reg. XVII of 1806.—The year allowed to a mortgagor, by s. 8 of Reg. XVII of 1806, to deposit the amount of the mortgage-debt before the mortgage can be finally foreclosed, is to be reckoned from the date of the service of the notice under that section, and not from the date of the issue of such notice. *MAHESH CHANDRA SEN v. (63)—Reg. XVII of 1806—Foreclosure of mortgage—Proof of observance of conditions of Regulation—Effect of absence of notice of foreclosure.—In order that a mortgagor, who has mortgaged certain land, by way of conditional sale, may be deprived of his right of redemption, by reason of the mortgage having been foreclosed under the Regulation, the mortgagee, who relies on foreclosure proceedings having worked a forfeiture of the estate of the mortgagor, must prove affirmatively the due performance of every condition necessary to be established under the Regulation, before the foreclosure can attach upon such estate. (16 P.R. 1888, 106 P.R. 1889, 24 P.R. 1895, 29 P.R. 1898, 48 P.R. 1902, 71 P.R. 1903, R.) Where, therefore, the notice of foreclosure prescribed by the Regulation, which was alleged to have been issued to the mortgagor, was not on the record of the foreclosure proceedings, the non-existence of the notice is a fatal defect and the Court could not, on the strength of the order of the District Judge which showed that the mortgagor appeared in person before him, and was warned that he would be precluded from raising any objection, if he did not redeem within one year, presume that notice has been issued to the mortgagor, and that it was accompanied by a copy of the mortgagee's petition for foreclosure and bore the seal and the official signature of the District Judge—a defect in any of these vitiating the foreclosure proceedings. *SOCHET SINGH v. from the date of service of notice. A mistake in impressing the seal in a notice to foreclose is not fatal to the validity of the notice. A notice of foreclosure which does not correctly and sufficiently describe the various courses open to a mortgagor under s. 7, Reg. XVII of 1806, is a defective notice, vitiating the foreclosure proceedings. TARA CHAND v. CHIMAN, 3 P.L.R. 1912=12 Ind. Cas. 530.

(66)—Reg. XVII of 1806, s. 7—Notice of foreclosure not signed by Judge—Invalidity of foreclosure proceedings.—A notice of foreclosure under Reg. the validity of the notice, vitiating the foreclosure proceedings and preventing the mortgagee from maintaining his suit based on such proceedings. In order to entitle a mortgagee to avail himself of the foreclosure proceedings so as to defeat the mortgagor's right of redemption, it is necessary for him to show that the requirements of the law have been strictly complied with. In the present case the requirements of the law not having been duly observed, although the mortgagee may not have been in fault or responsible in one sense for the omissions noticed above, he would be responsible in a legal sense and must stand the consequence of any defects which vitiate the validity of proceedings that are essential, before he can debar the mortgagor from asserting his right of redemption or claim to make his own till absolute. MEHORO v. SUJA, 84 P.R. 1882. [R., 16 P.R. 1888, 21 P.R. 1901=57 P.L.R. 1901, 134 P.L.R. 1910=8 Ind. Cas. 555; D, 75 P.R. 1883.]

(70)—S. 8, Reg. XVII of 1806—Compliance with formalities in foreclosure proceedings—Non-compliance, a fatal defect—'Initials,' no 'official signature.'—Absence of proof of any previous demand before issue of notice of foreclosure under s. 8, Reg. XVII of 1806, is a defect fatal to a suit for possession after the close of foreclosure proceedings. All the formalities laid down in the said Regulation must be complied with and it lies upon the plaintiff to prove that it had been so done. The mere affixing of "initials" of a Judge to the above notice is not sufficient and would not amount to official signature. MUSST. LACHMI v. TOTA, 16 P.R. 1888. [R., 71 P.R. 1903=162 P.L.R. 1903, 46 P.R. 1907, 105 P.R. 1907.]

(71)—Notice signed as 'Deputy Commissioner and District Judge'—Validity.—A notice under s. 8, Reg. XVII of 1806, is not invalid, merely because the words "Deputy Commissioner" is added to the signature as "District Judge" where both offices are held by one; it being a mere surplusage which can lead to no mistake. HIRA CHAND v. CHATRU, 133 P.R. 1894. (185 P.R. 1889, F.B., D.) [F., 42 P.R. 1887.]

(72)—Mortgage—Notice of foreclosure—Validity—Reg. XVII of 1806.—A notice of foreclosure signed by the Sheristadar of a Court and bearing the Court seal, (but not the Judge's signature), is not (on the principle in 4 A. 276) a valid notice under Reg. XVII of 1806, s. 8. In 4 A. 276 there was only the Court seal and not even the Sheristadar's signature. DOMA SAHU v. NATHAI KHAN, 13 C. 50.

(74)—Bengal Reg. XVII of 1806, s. 8—Foreclosure proceedings—Prior demand for payment when provable—Initials—Official signature—Stipulated period.—Though previous demand for payment is a necessary preliminary for success in foreclosure proceedings under s. 8 of the Regulation, there is nothing in the section requiring that the fact of the demand having been previously made must appear on the face of the proceedings. It is open to the plaintiff to show, in the course of his suit for possession, that payment had been demanded before the petition for foreclosure was presented. (11 C. 111, R.) The mere initials of the Judge attached to the parwanah cannot amount to the 'official signature' of the Judge as required by s. 8 of the Regulation. The 'stipulated period' of redemption in this section means the whole period prescribed by the mortgage-contract for the performance of the conditions upon the fulfilment of which the mortgagor is entitled to a re-conveyance, irrespective of the fact that under the strict terms of the deed, the mortgagee was, under certain circumstances, entitled to foreclosure at an earlier date. KUBRA BIBI v. XVII of 1806, s. 8.—A foreclosure notice is bad in law and the proceedings thereunder are null and void, if it is issued in respect of two mortgage-debts, only one of which is in the form of a conditional sale. An appellate Court has no jurisdiction to make a reference under s. 9 (3) of Act XIII of 1900, and the Deputy Commissioner has no power to proceed under its sub-section (2), if the foreclosure notice is effectual, but if it is not, the appellate Court is bound to act upon the said section and can only dismiss the suit if the mortgagee refuses to accept a mortgage in one of the authorized forms. *JIWAN RAM v. The suit was dismissed on the ground that the foreclosure clause was a contravention of the

(79)—Mortgagor's legal representative—Notice of foreclosure.—The legal representative of a mortgagor is entitled to redeem the mortgaged property, and as such, is entitled to notice of foreclosure. The mortgagor's legal representative is the person who, either by law or by contract between the parties, succeeds the mortgagor in the position which he holds relatively to the mortgagee in respect of the property; and a succession of this kind may occur either by the death of the mortgagor or by assignment of the equity of redemption. *SHEO GOLAM SINGH v. (80)—Mortgage—Notice of foreclosure—Regulation XVII of 1806.—The words "legal representative" in Reg. XVII of 1806 are not used in the sense of a universal legal representative, such as an heir; a purchaser of mortgaged property is included within the meaning of the term, and, as such, is entitled to notice of foreclosure whether he be a purchaser of the whole property or of a distinct and definite portion only, and whether the mortgagee has or has not consented to the assignment. GANGA GOBIND MANDAL v. (81)—"Mortgagor's legal representative"—Reg. XVII of 1806, s. 8.—Subsequent mortgagee entitled to notice of foreclosure.*—The term "mortgagor's legal representative" used in the Regulation was intended to apply to all or any persons who, at the date of the notice of foreclosure, possesses a title to the equity of redemption, whether absolute or defeasible, of the mortgage. [F., 2 N.L.R. 113.] Accordingly, where land, the subject of a conditional sale, was mortgaged to a second mortgagee, held that the latter is entitled to notice of foreclosure; and foreclosure proceedings taken without notice to him are invalid as against him. (83)—Foreclosure-proceedings—Omission to give notice—Hindu Law—Widow—Maintenance—Charge.—Omission on the part of a mortgagee to serve the mortgagor or his representative with notice of foreclosure, is sufficient to vitiate the whole of the foreclosure proceedings. (84)—Reg. XVII of 1806—Service on minor—Sufficiency of—Act XL of 1858.—Reg. XVII of 1806 does not give any special direction as to the person on whom service of the notice of foreclosure is to be made where the person for the time being entitled to the equity of redemption is a minor and it is not shown that a guardian has been appointed under Act XL of 1858. In such a case, service on the minor and on his mother would be sufficient. DABEE PERSHAD v. MAN KHAN, 2 N.W.P. 444. [F., 94 P.R. 1892.]

(94)—Mortgage—Foreclosure—Right of purchaser from mortgagor to notice of foreclosure—Reg. XVII of 1806, s. 8—Construction—Mortgagee empowered to proceed against mortgagor's other properties in certain events.—The purchaser from a mortgagor is his legal representative, and where the mortgagee proceeds to foreclose, the purchaser is entitled to notice of foreclosure under s. 8, Reg. XVII of 1806, if the purchase was made before such notice had been served upon the mortgagor. If, however, the purchase was made after notice served upon the mortgagor, fresh notice to the purchaser is unnecessary. Where a mortgage deed contained the words "that in the event of a sale in execution of decree or in consequence of some other claim, the property mortgaged be sold at auction or otherwise alienated, the mortgagee shall recover the money lent by him from any other property in the possession of the mortgagor, and the mortgagor's person and property shall also be held liable for the debt," held, these words were thereby intended to give some supposed further security to the mortgagee by allowing him the power, in case of the property going out of the mortgagor's hands in some unforeseen manner, to recoup himself from any other property the mortgagor might be possessed of, but not to take away from the mortgagee the right that every holder of a deed of conditional sale has to issue the usual notice of foreclosure, and at the expiry of the year of grace to obtain by suit possession of the property. ACHUMBIT MISSER v. LALLA NUND RAM, 11 W.R. 544.

(95)—Suit for possession of mortgaged property by mortgagee—Notice of foreclosure to purchaser and legal representative.—A mortgagee is bound to give notice to a purchaser from the mortgagor of his intention to foreclose, and a person who succeeds as heir to a mortgagor is also entitled to such notice as his legal representative. By the subsequent sale in execution of a money-decree against his vendor, the rights and interests of the vendor were alone sold. But as the vendor had ceased to have any interest, nothing passed by that sale to the execution purchaser, and those proceedings could not have any effect on the rights previously acquired by the plaintiff under his purchase. [R., 10 W.R. 86, 1 A. 499.] In this case, the High Court observed that, though it cannot be laid down that, in foreclosure proceedings, and suits to establish the lien of a mortgagee and to bring the property to sale in satisfaction of the mortgage, which are somewhat in the nature of proceedings in rem, it is, in all cases, necessary to serve subsequent incumbrancers not in actual possession of the property, with notice or to make them parties, yet, it is the duty of the Court to give sufficient consideration to their rights. BISSONATH SINGH v. (97-a)—Mortgage—Notice of foreclosure—Extension of period for redemption after expiry of year of grace—Second notice of foreclosure—Reg. XVII of 1806, s. 8—Foreclosure proceedings—Irregularities capable of waiver.—A mortgagee having caused notice under s. 8 of Reg. XVII of 1806, to be served upon the mortgagor, brought a suit for possession after the expiry of the year of grace. The mortgagor then applied for an extension of time to redeem, and the Court passed an ex parte order granting the extension, and the suit was dismissed as premature. After the expiry of the extended period, the mortgagee's suit having been renewed, the defendant contended that the period of grace having been extended, a second notice under the Regulation was necessary, and such notice not having been given, the suit was not maintainable. Held that the order granting extension of time to the mortgagor was made without any legal authority, and that therefore a second notice under the Regulation was unnecessary. Omission on the part of the mortgagee to demand payment from the mortgagor before applying for issue of notice under s. 8 of Reg. XVII of 1806, and omission to serve a copy of the application, are irregularities capable of waiver, and not fatal defects in the procedure, so as necessarily to vitiate all subsequent proceedings. Thus, where a mortgagor, after receipt of notice of foreclosure, applied and got an order for an extension of time for redemption, but failed to redeem, and in a suit for foreclosure then brought, omitted both in the first Court and in the lower Appellate Court to take exception to the foreclosure proceedings on the ground that no demand was made; he was held to have waived any defence open to him on this ground, and not to be

(98)—Mortgage—Foreclosure—Sale of equity of redemption after proceedings taken—Notice by mortgagee—Fresh notice on purchaser, necessity for—Conditional mortgage—Agreement between mortgagor and mortgagee after sale of equity of redemption—Effect of agreement on purchaser.—Where a mortgagor sold his right of equity of redemption after foreclosure proceedings had been applied for and notices duly served on him, it was not necessary for the mortgagee to issue fresh notice on the purchaser, and the requirements of the Regulation were satisfied by the service of the notice on the person who, at the time of service, was entitled to redeem. Where a mortgagor, before the expiry of the year of grace and after the sale of the equity of redemption, agreed with the mortgagee that of the two villages conditionally mortgaged, one should be given to him and decree for foreclosure should be obtained by the mortgagee in respect of the other, such agreement did not bind the purchaser and he could not be prejudiced thereby, inasmuch as, notwithstanding such arrangement he was at liberty to deposit the money in Court, or to tender it to the mortgagees, and the foreclosure proceedings could not be rendered invalid for such agreement having been made. *MUHUNT JYRAMGIR v. If, in a suit for foreclosure, before the issue of notice, the equity of redemption was duly and completely assigned in such a way as to bind the mortgagee, then notice must issue to the assignee. The defendants had served notice of foreclosure upon the lumbardar who represented the plaintiffs, and obtained a declaration that the sale had become absolute and they also sued and obtained a decree against the lumbardar for possession. The plaintiffs brought this suit claiming to recover possession of their own share in the puttee on the ground that the mortgage was made without their authority and was not binding on them and claiming pre-emption of the share of the lumbardar. Held that the plaintiffs must be taken to have been parties through their agent the lumbardar to the mortgage-deed, for if they were not they should have repudiated the judgment of the Court of first instance which decreed them their shares conditionally on their paying their quota of the mortgage debt; moreover inasmuch as the mortgage was made to obtain the sum necessary to discharge the arrears of Government revenue the plaintiff must be held to have been acquainted with the act of their lumbardar and content to be bound by it. Therefore as parties to the mortgage through their lumbardar, they could not repudiate the consequences of the deed to which they were parties. Where a mortgage was made by a lumbardar for himself and as agent for other sharers it is necessary to issue notice of foreclosure both to the lumbardar and to his co-sharers and in a suit for possession the co-sharers also should be made parties. PUNCHAM SINGH v. II of 1803, s. 3—Limitation—Service of notice.—A Bye-bil-wufa, or Kutkobala (mortgage or conditional sale), is redeemable like an ordinary mortgage, and is liable to foreclosure. When a mortgagee seeks to foreclose, he must proceed under Ben. Regs. III of 1793, s. 14; II of 1803, s. 3; and XVII of 1806, ss. 7 and 8. The pendency of litigation as to the ownership of the equity of redemption, between the heirs of the mortgagor and a party claiming as purchaser, is a "good and sufficient cause" within the exception to the operation of the Ben. Reg. of Limitation III of 1793, s. 14, why a mortgagee should not have instituted proceedings for foreclosure within twelve years, the time prescribed by that Regulation. The service of notice of foreclosure on the occupant of the mortgaged property (a party who claimed as purchaser from the mortgagor, but who had not established his title) does not estop the mortgagee from disputing the occupant's title to redeem the mortgaged premises. PRANNATH ROY CHOWDRY v. (111)—*Mortgagor and mortgagee—Subsequent mortgage, prior foreclosure of, prior mortgagee's lien not affected by—Notice of foreclosure, service of, on mortgagor.—The main objection taken, on this second appeal to the lower Court's judgment awarding possession to the first mortgagee, was with reference to the mode in which the lower Court had disposed of the question as to the respective rights of a prior and subsequent mortgagee. The High Court held that, though the point whether a second mortgagee is the mortgagor's legal representative for the purpose of the notice under s. 8, Reg. XVII of 1806, has not been completely settled; yet, where, as in the present case, the first mortgagee has had no knowledge or cognizance of the second mortgage, or of the foreclosure proceedings taken under it, the objection is not valid that he ought to have served the notice on the subsequent mortgagee or his representative. The service on the mortgagor was sufficient according to law. The defendant had no ground to complain of the loss of his lien on the property as subsequent mortgagee, which loss was brought upon by himself. He should have known of the prior mortgage, and he should have kept himself informed if anything was done to foreclose the mortgage. KALEE KISHORE CHATTERJEE v. TARA PERSHAD ROY, 4 W.R. 1.

VII of 1806, s. 8, application of, to mortgages not created by deed.*—In this suit for redemption, the main point for determination was that of the effect of a previous decision inter partes passed by the settlement Superintendent in 1859. That Court while declaring the relation of mortgagor and mortgagee to subsist between the then plaintiff and defendant, attempted to abridge the right of redemption by declaring that failure to redeem within 12 years would extinguish the rights of the owner. Held that such decision could not have greater force than a contract of mortgage by way of conditional sale voluntarily entered into by the parties themselves would have had, and that there was no ground for holding that Reg. XVII could not apply to a mortgage by way of conditional sale created by decree of a Civil Court and not by deed between the parties. AHMED KHAN v. MAHLA KHAN, 132 P. R. 1882. (124)—Notice of foreclosure served on mortgagor—Subsequent transfer of property—Fresh notice served on purchaser.—Where the notice of foreclosure was duly served on the mortgagor, no subsequent transfer of the property whether made voluntarily by him as by private sale, or caused involuntarily as by seizure and sale of his right and interest in execution of a decree, could affect the validity of the notice or could impose on the mortgagee any new obligation in the way of causing a fresh notice to be served on the purchaser. Thus, where the mortgagee caused a second notice to be served on the purchaser (the mortgagor's right having been taken in execution of a decree and sold) and the foreclosure took place more than a year after the service of the first notice but within one year from the service of the second notice, and the application by the mortgagee to issue the second notice to the purchaser specially asked that the notice thus to issue was to run from the date of the first notice and the notice issued was in accordance with this request. Held that the foreclosure proceedings were regular and the suit for possession was maintainable, inasmuch as the second notice was not so much a fresh notice issued superseding or revoking the first, but it was merely in effect a re-service of the first notice on the purchaser which could not render inoperative its first service. The second notice was not meant to be issued as an original notice in substitution of the former one, but merely for greater caution to bring to the knowledge of the purchaser that a notice had already been issued. MOULIVE ZAMIN ALI v. (127)—Nature of proceedings between decree nisi and order absolute — Res judicata—Necessity for notice before passing order absolute—Setting aside ex parte order absolute—Extending time for payment — Burden of proof—Civ. Pro. Code, ss. 108, 622, 647—Transfer of Property Act, s. 87.—The proceedings between a decree nisi in a mortgage case and the order absolute are neither a continuation of a pending mortgage suit, nor are they proceedings in execution of a decree under the Civ. Pro. Code. The decree nisi in a mortgage suit is undoubtedly a decree which decides the suit as such, and it is, as regards the Court making it, a final adjudication upon all the issues raised in the suit, which it is necessary to decide for the purpose of determining the controversy between the parties, and those issues become res judicata, whether or not an order absolute is subsequently passed. Such proceedings are taken in accordance with the special provisions of the Transfer of Property Act and are absolutely independent of Chap. XIX. Civ. Pro. Code. (2 N.L.R. 172, Diss.; 11 C.W.N. 156, F.) When the holder of a decree nisi makes an application for an order under s. 87, Transfer of Property Act, the Court is bound by s. 647, Civ. Pro. Code, to issue a notice to the opposite party, informing him of the fact that such an application has been made, and the date fixed for hearing the non-applicant against it. A notice is necessary, because, (1) s. 647 of the Code is a statutory provision, which, on an application under s. 87 of the Transfer of Property Act, requires procedure analogous to that prescribed for suits, as far as possible, and necessarily implies the issue of notice to the non-applicant; (2) in view of the above statutory provisions, no analogy can be drawn from the practice of the English Courts; (3) the decree nisi gives the judgment-debtor no notice of the date when an application is made for an order absolute on an allegation of non-payment. Such an application may not be made for months after expiry of the date fixed for payment, and it may be made notwithstanding payment, or in spite of some compromise. The judgment-debtor is, therefore, clearly entitled to appear and be heard in response to it. (9 C.P.L.R. 5, 29 C. 644, Diss.) If an order absolute is made ex-parte, the Court may, on grounds analogous to those stated in s. 108 of the Code, set it aside and resume the proceedings inter partes. It is also open to review and revision in the same way; and at least one appeal is generally allowed in respect of it. Notice of proceedings for an order absolute is not, however, an invitation to redeem, nor is it a second decree nisi calling for redemption. The provisions of the law as to foreclosure absolute, following upon non-payment within the time limited, are imperative and can only be delayed, upon good cause shown by the party, who was given the right to redeem. Unless an extension of time is made upon good cause, the Court has no jurisdiction to refuse or even to delay the order absolute, and it equally has no jurisdiction to allow redemption after due date, without so extending the period originally fixed by it (2 N.L.R. 137, F.) and if the Court does so, it acts ultra vires, so as to justify interference under s. 622 of the Code. The onus is on the judgment-debtor to show good cause for the extension of time. SETH BAGWANDAS v. SHRIDHAR, 3 N.L.R. 55. [R., 3 N.L.R. 146; Rel. on, 4 N.L.R. 54; Not F., 4 N.L.R. 158.]

XVII of 1806, s. 8—Foreclosure—Notice—Mode of service—Proof of service—Evidence.*—The Regulation which requires notice of foreclosure to be served on the mortgagor or his legal representative does not provide for any mode of service in substitution for personal service. However, in some cases it has been held that personal service is not absolutely necessary. But to justify resort to any other mode of service it must be shown that, in spite of efforts made for that purpose, the notice could not for some reason be personally served. A copy of the report of the Nazir of the Civil Court, a copy of the deposition of a witness not taken in the presence of the parties, and a copy of the final foreclosure proceeding are not legal evidence to prove the service of notice of foreclosure. (129)—Foreclosure of mortgage—Notice, how to be served—Execution sale.—The notice, which the law requires to be served previous to foreclosure, is to be served on the mortgagor or his legal representative. Where the mortgaged property is partly sold in execution of a decree, and the decree-holders had a priority of right over the mortgagee, the balance, if any, of the sale proceeds would go in diminution of the mortgagee's claim. (130)—Foreclosure of mortgage—Notice—How served.—It is not necessary that the notice of foreclosure should be served on the mortgagor personally. It is sufficient if the service is effected by affixing the notice on the door of the mortgagor's house, if the mortgagor is not at home at the time when the serving officer goes there with the process. In a suit for possession by the plaintiff against the auction-purchaser's widow, who impugned the genuineness of the conditional sale-deed and pleaded ignorance of the foreclosure proceedings, it was held that the plaintiff was bound to show by evidence independently of the mere copy of the foreclosure proceedings that the notice was served on the auction-purchaser. (134)—Mortgage by conditional sale—Suit for possession—Notice of foreclosure—Onus of proving notice and delivery of copy of foreclosure petition.—In this suit for possession of land mortgaged by way of conditional sale to the plaintiff by the father of the defendant, it was alleged that notice of foreclosure had been served on the father, but such service of notice on which the plaintiff's title depended was denied by the defendant. The Chief Court was of opinion that the lower Appellate Court should not have proceeded as it did presuming due service of the notice. The burden of proving due service of the notice was held to rest on the mortgagee and further, it was essential for the plaintiff to prove that a copy of the petition for foreclosure was delivered to the mortgagor. (145-b)—Bond containing stipulation to pay later advance at time of redemption of earlier mortgage—No property made security in the later bond for further advance.—The ancestor of the defendants executed two bonds, dated respectively July 19, 1864, and September 1, 1865, in favour of the ancestors to the plaintiffs. The former was a mortgage by way of conditional sale. The latter bond contained a promise to pay a definite sum with interest by the last day of Baisakh, and provided that, in the event of default, the obligees might recover the money from the obligors personally and their moveable and immoveable property (none being specified). After making reference to the earlier deed, the obligor said: "When we offer to pay the amount on the deed of conditional sale, we will first pay the amount with interest of the present deed of conditional sale..... therefore we have written this bond (tamassuk) in order that it may be of use." (146)—Sub-mortgage — Purchaser of mortgagee's interest at sale in execution of sub-mortgagee's decree—Mortgage by mortgagee, of properties after sub-mortgage—Foreclosure suit and decree against mortgagee alone treated as owner—Priorities.—A R, claiming title as mortgagee under a mortgage-deed executed on 26th July, 1890, deposited the title-deeds of the mortgaged property (being the mortgage-deed itself and a deed of assignment of the same) by way of equitable mortgage with the plaintiff in October, 1895. In March, 1895, A R purported to execute a mortgage as owner in fee of some of the properties in favour of A G who, in July 1902, brought a foreclosure suit which was decreed in the same month. The plaintiff was not made a party to this suit. A G's case that the mortgage of 26th July, 1890 was satisfied previous to the execution of the mortgage in his favour, by the mortgagors making over to A R all the mortgaged properties, was disbelieved. Meanwhile in 1901, plaintiff had sued on his mortgage and had, on 28th August, 1902, purchased the right, title and interest of his mortgagor A R in execution of the decree obtained by him. The plaintiff instituted the present suit to enforce the mortgage of 26th July, 1890 against the original mortgagors, as also A R and A G. Held, that the plaintiff, not having been made a party to A G's suit, could not be barred or affected by the decree in that suit, and an enquiry as to the priority between the plaintiff and A R was necessary

(147)—Mortgage by unregistered deed—Subsequent mortgage by registered deed of conditional sale—Foreclosure by second mortgagee—Suit by prior mortgagee to realize his mortgage debt.—A piece of land was mortgaged to a certain person, by an unregistered deed, and possession given to him. Subsequently, by a registered deed a whole village, including the land previously mortgaged, was mortgaged to a third person by a deed of conditional sale. The second mortgagee foreclosed his mortgage and ejected the prior mortgagee. The latter sued to have it declared that he was entitled to realize his mortgage-debt from the property mortgaged to him. Held that a registered mortgage was entitled to priority over an unregistered one under Act XIX of 1843, and that, as the power of foreclosure was incidental to a mortgage in the form of conditional sale, the second mortgagee by availing himself of that power did not forfeit the priority he possessed. BHIROOGEE MISR v. (155)—Mortgage by conditional sale—Foreclosure—Reg. XVII of 1806, s. 8—Title of mortgage—Pre-emption—Purchase-money—Burden of proof.—A proceeding under Reg. XVII of 1806, foreclosing a mortgage by conditional sale, being purely ministerial, cannot bind the mortgagor on whom notice of foreclosure is served, much less can it bind third parties. It is not, therefore, conclusive as regards the amount of the purchase-money where it is in issue in a suit for pre-emption in respect of such conditional sale. (10 M.I.A. 340, R.) Nor, on general principles, can a decree in a suit for foreclosure be conclusive on the question of such amount, against the plaintiff in the pre-emption suit who was not a party to the suit in which it was passed. The pre-emptor, in the case of such a mortgage which has become absolute, is bound to pay, as the price of the property, the entire amount due on such mortgage at the time it became absolute; and the property becomes the absolute property of the mortgagee at the termination of the year of grace, even though he may not have obtained a decree establishing or declaring his proprietary right. TAWAKKUL RAI v. LUCHMAN RAI, 6 A. 344 = A.W.N. 1884, 110. (10 M.I.A. 340, R.; 5 A. 187, 22 W.R. 539, 8 W.R. 476, 3 Agra 103, 358, F.) [Appr., 14 A. 405, F.B.; R., 6 A. 551, 121 P.R. 1894, D., 11 A. 164.]

(156)—Suit for foreclosure—Minority of defendant—Burden of proof—Admissibility of previous judgments—Evidence Act (I of 1872), s. 13 (b).—In a suit for foreclosure, one of the defendants contended that he was a minor at the date of executing the mortgage, and so not competent to enter into a contract; held, that the burden of proving the validity of the contract lay on the plaintiffs in the first instance. Where certain judgments were admitted in evidence of proof of the defendant's minority under s. 13, cl. (b), held, the judgments were not admissible, the cases in which they had been passed not being instances in which any right asserted by the defendant was recognized or exercised or in which its exercise was asserted, disputed or departed from. Those judgments were admissible to prove only the denial by the defendant of his competency to execute the contracts and the Court's decision thereon, but they were not admissible to prove, as against the plaintiffs, the fact of the defendant's minority. GAYA DIN v. They took no deed of conveyance from the vendor, the mortgage-deed reciting that the conveyance was to be executed later on. In a suit by the plaintiff to foreclose the mortgage; Held, dismissing the suit, that, the defendants having acquired no title, and having nothing to mortgage, the mortgage in favour of the true owner was meaningless even where the mortgagor was in physical possession, and that the mortgage was not enforceable at law. Where both the parties to a transaction know the truth as to matters therein stated, no question of estoppel by a false statement can arise. SITARAM v. MT. HARKU BAI, 4 N. L. R. 28. (159)—Mortgage by conditional sale payable by instalments—Provision for foreclosure in default—Right of mortgagee to sue for instalment due.—Where a mortgage by conditional sale provided for payment of the mortgage money by instalments and foreclosure in default of payment of instalments, mortgagee was bound to follow the conditions of the mortgage and had no right to sue separately for an instalment. The estate was liable for the debt and if the debt was not paid otherwise, it was discharged by the foreclosure. (162)—Mortgage—Law of foreclosure in Bengal as established by Regulations and practice—Benamsee lease—Error in plaint, no bar to relief really sought—Conditional sale—Foreclosure—Suit for possession and mesne profits—Necessity for mortgagee in possession to produce account books in Court—Reg. XV of 1793, s. 11.—Up to the year 1806, the rights of the holder of a bye-bill-wufa (conditional sale) were enforceable according to the strict terms of the contract. It was then necessary for the mortgagee, if he wished to save his estate from forfeiture, to tender the amount due, or to pay it into Court, pursuant to the provisions of Regulation I of 1798, within the period stipulated for the re-payment of the loan. Regulation XVII of 1806 first introduced a modification of the strict rights given by the contract. S. 7 of that Regulation gives the mortgagor a right of redemption within one year after an application, by the mortgagee to the Court under s. 8 of that Regulation. After such an application, the mortgagor must either pay or tender the money lent, or the balance then due, if any part of the principal sum has been discharged, and if the mortgagee has not been in possession, any interest that may be due, or he must make a deposit pursuant to s. 2 of Regulation I of 1798. The general effect of these Regulations is, that if anything be due on the mortgage and the mortgagor makes no deposit or an insufficient deposit, the right of redemption is gone at the expiration of the year of grace. The title of the mortgagee, however, is not even then complete. A mortgagee after having done all that Regulation XVII of 1806 requires to be done in order to foreclose the mortgage and make the conditional sale absolute, must bring a regular suit to recover possession if he is out of possession, or to obtain a declaration of his absolute title if he is in possession. In that suit the mortgagor may contest the validity of the conditional sale, or the regularity of the proceedings taken under Regulation XVII of 1806 in order to make it absolute. He may also allege and prove that nothing is due or that the deposit which he has made is sufficient to cover what is due, but the issue, in so far as the right of redemption is concerned, will be whether anything, at the end of the year of grace, remained due to the mortgagee, and if so, whether the necessary deposit had been then made. If that is found against the mortgagor, the right of redemption is gone. [Appr., 15 W. R. P. C., 35=7 B. L. R. 136=13 M. I. A. 560; Expl., 3 Agra 358; R., 13 W. R. 44, 17 W. R. 197, 3 A. 610=A. W. an instrument which purported to be an absolute bill of sale of certain lands in consideration of a certain sum advanced. On the same day, the plaintiff executed to the defendant's husband an ikrar importing that on payment of the said sum with interest on a specified date, the sale should be void; but that in the event of the seller not paying the principal and interest according to his engagement, the ikrar was to be null and void, and the purchaser was to become the absolute proprietor of the property. On the day before the date of the bill of sale, the defendant's husband had granted a lease of the mortgaged premises benames to the plaintiff's son, but really to plaintiff who, under color of it, obtained possession of the mortgaged premises. Plaintiff commenced this suit in order to complete his title under the foreclosure. Treating the lease to his son as a subsisting lease to that person, and himself as out of possession, plaintiff asked to have possession decreed to him together with mesne profits. Held (a) that, as the real object of the suit was to perfect plaintiff's title as absolute owner of the property, he was not debarred from that relief, if he was otherwise entitled to it, because, under an erroneous view of the lease, he had asked for it by his plaint in a somewhat different form and with something to which he was not entitled. (b) That the lease did not save the plaintiff from the liabilities whilst it gave him the advantages of a mortgagee in possession, still less could it be taken to modify the terms of the conditional sale. (c) That the plaintiff was entitled to possession of the mortgaged premises as absolute owner by virtue of the conditional sale which had been duly made absolute, but was not entitled to a decree for any mesne profits. [Cons., 6 C. 564=7 C.L.R. 583.] Under s. 11, Regulation XV of 1793, the production of accounts by a mortgagee in possession seeking to foreclose, cannot be called for when there is neither plea nor proof that the usufruct had liquidated the principal and interest, and where no deposit had been made to cover the balance admitted to be due. The necessity for a mortgagee in possession to produce his accounts arises:—First, when the mortgagor has deposited the principal money, leaving the question of interest to be settled by an adjustment of the account; secondly, when the mortgagor has deposited all that he admits or alleges to be due; and thirdly, when he pleads and undertakes to prove that the whole of the principal and interest had been liquidated by the usufruct of the mortgaged premises. FORBES v. Mortgage—continued.—5.—Foreclosure—continued.

A mortgage-decree directed, that, in the event of the decree amount not being paid within a certain time, the defendant should be absolutely debarred of all right to redeem the mortgaged property. A puisne mortgagee, who was a party to the suit, paid the decretal amount in Court and the amount was taken out by the decree-holders. Thereupon, the puisne mortgagee made an application to the Court that a decree for absolute foreclosure of the mortgaged property might be prepared in his favour. The Court did not allow the application, on the ground that the puisne mortgagee had become the representative of the prior mortgagee under s. 74 of the Transfer of Property Act and was entitled to bring a suit for foreclosure, but that he had not acquired the status of a decree-holder, and that, while he was defendant, he could not execute the decree as decree-holder. Hence, the present suit by the puisne mortgagee. The plaint contained a statement of all the material circumstances but the prayer of it was inartistically framed. The Court of first instance gave a decree in plaintiff's favour but the High Court reversed it on the ground that the suit was barred by the provisions of s. 244, Civ. Pro. Code. Held, though the prayer of the plaint is inartistically framed, it is sufficient, with the aid of the prayer for further relief, to enable the Court to give the plaintiff the appropriate relief, if he is otherwise entitled to it. Held, also, that, on payment by the puisne mortgagee of the sum into Court within the time allowed and acceptance of that sum by the then plaintiffs, the decree was spent and became discharged and satisfied. There was, therefore, nothing left to be done in the execution department. It is true that the present plaintiff, having made that payment acquired, under s. 74 of the Transfer of Property Act, all the rights and powers of the first mortgagees as such. But this would not have the effect of reviving or giving vitality to a decree which by the terms of it had become discharged. A new decree is required to work out the respective rights of the parties under the other peculiar circumstances of the case. S. 244, Civ. Pro. Code, is not therefore a bar to the present suit. Further, their Lordships expressed an opinion that the form of order given in s. 86 of the Transfer of Property Act contemplates a suit between one mortgagee and the mortgagor only and should not be treated as a common form to be literally followed in every suit for foreclosure, but to be adapted to the particular circumstances of each case. To regulate the rights of puisne mortgagees, in mortgage decrees, to redeem a prior mortgage, a form of order known in the Chancery Division of the High Court in England might be adopted in India. GOPI NARAIN KHANNA v. Decree for foreclosure in respect of part of mortgaged property subsequent to order absolute in respect of the remaining part—Transfer of Property Act, s. 87—Execution of decree—Code of Civil Procedure, s. 244—Mortgage.—The defendant and his father who were living in union owned between them a 6 p. share which the father in 1892 mortgaged to the plaintiff by way of conditional sale. The plaintiff sued for foreclosure and obtained a decree nisi in February, 1897. To that suit the defendant was not made a party. Before the decree could be made absolute, his father died and the plaintiff's application for an order absolute was made against the defendant who objected that his interest in the property should be excluded from the operation of the decree and the objection was allowed by the Munsiff and an order was passed making the foreclosure absolute in respect of the father's share only. The plaintiff then sued for a declaration that the defendant was bound by the foreclosure decree passed against his father and that that decree should be made absolute as regards the defendant's interest. That suit was finally dismissed. The plaintiff brought the present suit for half the amount due upon the mortgage at the date of the previous decree and, in default of payment, foreclosure of the defendant's right to redeem his interest in the property. Held, that the suit was not barred by s. 244, Civ. Pro. Code so far as regards the questions whether the mortgage made by his father was binding upon the defendant and whether the defendant was bound to pay his father's debt out of any family property which had passed to him by survivorship; but that having regard to the provisions of s. 87 of the Transfer of Property Act, the foreclosure of the father's interest having been made absolute on account of the non-payment of the whole debt, the suit was not maintainable. RAJA RAM V. The mere pendency of a suit in the Supreme Court is no bar to the prosecution of a suit in the Zilla Court intended to be simply in furtherance of, and supplemental to the suit in the Supreme Court. In the present case, however, the Judges differing in opinion on points of law having omitted to state the particular points upon which they differed, there cannot be taken to have been any determination of the appeal, and where such a case is referred to other Judges for final determination such other Judges have jurisdiction to go into the whole case. —6.—Form of Mortgages.

See CONSTRUCTION OF MORTGAGE DEEDS.

(1)—Suit on mortgage—Defendant's plea that he was vendee and not mortgagee, onus of proof.—In a suit for possession wherein the plaintiff alleges that the defendant is his mortgagee, but the defendant answers that the deed is one of sale to him and not of mortgage, the form of the instrument is not by itself conclusive, but the question will have to be considered whether or not there continued to be a debt from the plaintiff to the defendant. Where it appears, aliunde, as, for instance, by the conduct of the alleged vendee, the defendant, and, by the entries in his accounts treating the consideration money in the alleged deed of sale as a continuing debt due to him, that the deed was intended as a mere security for money and that he so treated it, the Court will have to regard it as such accordingly. GOVINDA v. JESHA PREMAJI, 7 B. 73. [F., 13 M. 494; R., 22 B. 245, 2 Bom. L.R. 1058, 72 P.R. 1901=114 P.L.R. 1901.]

(2)—Agreement compromising pending suit—Creditors to be in possession of debtor's property for certain time in satisfaction of debt—Right of debtor to claim redemption.—By the terms of an agreement entered into by the plaintiff and defendants, a pending suit was compromised and payment of an ascertained balance found due by plaintiff was secured by the creditors (defendants) being placed in possession of plaintiff's land for a certain number of years, with the right of enjoying all the rents and profits thereof, subject to the payment of a fixed rent part of which was to be paid to the plaintiff and the remainder to be retained by the creditor towards payment of the debt. Held that the agreement was a mortgage, and, as such, redeemable on the usual terms. MASHOOK AMEEN SUZZADA v. MAREM REDDY, 8 M.H. C. 31. [Appr., 2 M. 45; R., 2 M. 314, 4 M. 113, 20 B. 677; D., 16 M. 486.]

(3)—Mortgage—Intention—Construction.—For creating a mortgage, it is sufficient, if it appears from the deed, that it was the intention of the parties to create a charge upon the land. If the intention can be collected from the instrument, the form of expression is not material. The particular instrument in this case construed (Markby J., dubitante) to indicate an intention of creating a mortgage. RAJKUMAR RAMGOPAL NARAYAN SINGH v. RAM DUTT CHOWDHRY, 5 B.L.R. 264, F.B. = 13 W.R. (4)—Loan of money—Lender put in possession of rents and profits of land—License—Mortgage.—Where the lender of money is put in possession of the rents and profits of land for payment of interest on the loan, this is not a mere license or permission which can be revoked by the borrower at his pleasure, but is in the nature of a mortgage transaction in respect of which a suit for redemption can be brought. KHOOSHAL RAE v. JANKEE DOSS, 2 N.W. P. 9.

(5)—Transfer of land in consideration of debt—Mutation of names—Agreement to re-transfer—Document creating no right in immovable property, not compulsorily registrable under s. 17 of Act III of 1877.—In consideration of debts due to defendant-appellant, transfer of revenue khata was effected in his name by the plaintiff-respondent. Some years later, appellant agreed on certain conditions to effect the change of the khata again into the plaintiff's name after the debt due by the latter was satisfied, and executed an instrument intended to serve as evidence of such agreement. On the question as to the necessity or otherwise of the registration of the above instrument, held that it created no rights in land, but only amounted to a personal covenant to effect a mutation of names in the Government books when the debt was satisfied and as such did not require registration. With respect to the true character of the previous transfer which was recited in the said agreement, the High Court was of opinion that no sale had been made to the appellant but only a mortgage. As was held by both the lower Courts, when the khata of the land was previously transferred, the parties intended not to effect a sale of the property, but only a mortgage for the security of debts due by the transferor to the transferee. PATEL RANCHOD v. BHIKHABHAI, 21 B. 704. [R., 2 Bom. L.R. 1058; D., A.W.N. 1906, 180.]

(6)—Advance on zur-i-peshgi lease.—A lease was granted on a zur-i-peshgi advance for seven years at an annual jumma of Rs. 214-4-0, from which a deduction of Rs. 111-15-0 was to be made on account of interest; and it was also stipulated that if, after the expiration of the lease, the loan was not repaid, the lease should continue. Held that, under the circumstances as stated above, the transaction between the parties was a mortgage. KISHTO COOMAR SINGH v. CHOWDREE BEERAJ SINGH, 2 Hay 159.

(7)—Usufructuary mortgage—Right to possession till discharge of debt.—Where a person, by paying off a mortgage debt, becomes a usufructuary mortgagee in place of the original zuripeshgidar, he has a right to remain in possession of the property until the discharge of the debt by the usufruct. It is not necessary that he should sue for the amount due to him under the mortgage. SHAIKH FYEZULLAH v. SYUD KAZIM HOSSEIN, 14 W. R. 29.

(8)—Construction of deed—Transaction whether mortgage or lease—Name given in deed not material—Essentials for mortgage.—In this case, the plaintiff's father who owed the defendant a sum of money gave him certain land for twenty years in consideration thereof. It was also agreed that if the defendant shall plant vines, he should be at liberty to retain the land so planted even after the twenty years at a moderate annual rent. Plaintiff sought to redeem the land as if it were subject to a mortgage. He contended that the transaction was essentially a mortgage, and it being a mortgage, the agreement for a tenancy of undefined duration after the lapse of the twenty years was void, as fettering the right of redemption necessarily incident to a mortgage. It had therefore to be decided whether the transaction amounted to a mortgage or not, and, applying the usual test of mutuality of remedy, it was held that it was not a mortgage. Not only was there no stipulation for interest, but there was no undertaking for the payment even of the principal in any case. The land had been granted for a term instead of the money and the grant extinguished the debt. There was no debt and therefore no mortgage. The only objection to the operation of the clause of tenancy in the deed being thus removed, the defendant was held to have the right to retain occupation at least of the vine-yard planted and maintained by him on payment of the agreed annual rent. ABDUL-BHAI v. KASHI, 11 B. 462. [R., 12 C.P.L.R. 96, 6 N.L.R. 65 = 6 Ind. Cas. 817; D., 21 B. 704, 6 Bom. L.R. 630.]

(9)—A mortgage, what is not.—A mere covenant that the debtor will not part with any of his property until payment of the debt, will not constitute a mortgage. GUROO SINGH v. LATAFUT HOSSAIN, 3 C. 336 = 1 C.L.R. 91. [F., 8 C.L.R. 454; R., 12 A. 175.]

(10)—Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), ss. 68, 98—Mortgagee given possession of part of property under anomalous mortgage, rights of— A mortgage-deed with the stipulations that, on the expiry of the term fixed therein, the mortgagor should be allowed to redeem the properties without paying back the principal amount borrowed by him or the interest thereon, and that, on the expiry of the above term, the mortgagee should deliver possession of the properties to the mortgagor without raising any objection, would be an anomalous mortgage under s. 98 of the Transfer of Property Act. Where, on such a mortgage, the mortgagor fails to deliver possession of part of the property mortgaged, it is not open to the mortgagee to sue as under s. 68 of the Act, since that section cannot apply to a case where the mortgagee has been given no right to claim repayment. Nor can the mortgagee continue, beyond the fixed term, in possession of the part of the property delivered to him. The only right the mortgagee could claim would be to remain in possession of the part for the stipulated period and to recover damages for the breach of contract by the mortgagor in not having delivered possession of the whole land mortgaged. VISWALINGA PILLAI v. PALANI-APPA CHETTI, 21 M. 1.

(11)—Advance taken by landlord—Security for payment of rent, lease not turned into mortgage.—A landlord on giving a lease ordinarily takes an advance of moneys which are to be credited to the lessee in his accounts as rent. The sums so taken are considered as security for the payment of the rent, and the fact that the money is always credited to the last year's rent shows the meaning of the custom, which is that, in case of a tenant's absconding during the term of his lease, the landlord may have this sum at least to fall back upon, and it has been never contended in any case of this description that such an advance might change the lease into a mortgage. BABOO GRIDHAREE SINGH v. MR. COLLIS, 8 W.R. 497.

(12)—Devise of immoveable property subject to its being mortgaged in a particular manner by the devisee—Property mortgaged in a different manner—Enforceability of mortgage.—Where by a will, certain immoveable property was devised subject to the condition that the devisee, who was also an executor, should, for the purpose of securing the payment of a legacy, execute a mortgage of the property in favour of the Official Trustee of Bengal, and the executor, instead, mortgaged it to one of his co-executors; held in a suit by the co-executor to enforce the mortgage, that the suit was not maintainable, as the mortgage, not being in accordance with the terms of the will, was invalid, and conveyed no rights to the plaintiff. VAUGHAN v. HESELTINE, 1 A. 753. [R., 1 A. 762.]

(13)—Agreement to sell referring to existing mortgage—Stipulation as to re-purchase, whether makes transaction a mortgage.—Plaintiffs sued to redeem an alleged mortgage passed by an ancestor of theirs. The document put forward by them did not purport to be a mortgage at all but a sale deed. It recited a previous mortgage under which the mortgagee was already in possession, and stated that though a sale had been contemplated it had not been effected, because the parties could not agree as to the exact price of the lands, and that the price of the lands having been afterwards settled the arrangement was come to under the instrument that, if within 5 years from its date, plaintiffs should pay the price so fixed with interest, they should have back the lands, the mortgagee accounting for the profits and that, in default of such payment by the plaintiffs, the lands should be the absolute property of the mortgagee. The question had to be determined whether plaintiffs had a right to redeem i.e., whether there was a mortgage still subsisting. The document sued on was held to put an end to the mortgage that was subsisting at its date and substituted for it the agreement embodied therein which was not only not a mortgage but extinguished even the previous mortgage-debt so that the mortgagee could no longer enforce the payment of such debt to him. The mere stipulation for reconveyance and re-purchase could not by itself make the transaction a mortgage. To make a mortgage there must be a debt and in this case there was no debt and no transfer of the property as security for such debt. VASUDEO v. BHAU, 21 B. 528. [R., 2 Bom. L.R. 1058; D., 6 Bom. L.R. 630.]

(14)—Vendor and purchaser—Agreement to reconvey, whether amounts to mortgage.—An agreement between the vendor and purchaser of certain immoveable property that, on payment of a certain sum by the vendor, within a specified time, the property would be restored to him, and that, on failure of such payment, it should become the absolute property of the purchaser, does not create the relation of mortgagor and mortgagee; on the expiry of the period specified without any payment having been made, the property would vest in the purchaser absolutely. BHUP KUAR v. MUHAMMADI BEGAM, 6 A. 37 = A.W.N. 1883, 211. [R., 2 Bom. L.R. 1058; D., 19 A. 434.]

(15)—Construction of documents—Sale of perpetual lease with condition of re-purchase—No mortgage.—Where a purchaser of land granted a mukurari potta (perpetual lease) of it, to the person, who advanced the purchase-money for him, not as a security for the debt, but as an absolute acquittance of it, and it was also stipulated that, on payment of the debt without interest to the grantee or his heirs by the grantor or his heirs, the potta should be cancelled without any claim to mesne profits by the grantor, held, the transaction was not a mortgage, but evidence of a sale and acquittance of a debt, with power to re-purchase, under certain conditions personal to the vendor (grantor). SITUL PURSHAD v. LUCHMI PURSHAD, 10 C. 30, P.C. = 10 I.A. 129 = 13 C.L.R. 382 = 4 Sar. 470. [F., 29 M. 307 = 16 M.L.J. 106; R., 8 A. 452; D., 1 L.B.R. 257.]

(16)—Conveyance and counterpart—Mortgage by conditional sale.—A mortgagor executed a deed of conveyance for an inadequate price to the mortgagee, who executed in his turn a "counter-part" on the same date agreeing to reconvey the same if the sum without interest be repaid in a certain time. No payment was made in time, but after a long time, the property was sought to be redeemed. Held that, there was no evidence to show that the parties intended to enter into a transaction different from what appears on the face of the documents and that the plaintiff could not redeem. AYYAVAYER v. RAHIMANSA, 14 M. 170. [R., 131 P. R. 1894, 28 B. 153; D., 21 B. 706.]

(17)—Charge on immoveable property not specifically named—Ambiguous document.—An instrument charging a certain annual allowance on the mortgagors "granted villages" (where certain villages had been granted by Government) was not void for uncertainty, as, though the villages were not named in it, there was no doubt as to the particular villages which had been granted. KANHIA LAL v. MUHAMMAD HUSAIN KHAN. 5 A. 11 = A.W.N. 1882, 159. (1 A. 275, D.; 2 N.W.P. 263, F.) [R., 12 A. 175 = A.W.N. 1890, 60, 7 O.C. 108.]

(18)—Transfer of Property Act, ss. 98, 100—Bond purporting to create charge on all property of obligor—Maxim "certum est quod certum reddi potest"—Suit for money due under bond.—A registered bond contained the following: "To secure this money, I pledge voluntarily and willingly my wealth and property in favour of the said banker. Whatever property, &c., belonging to me be found by the said banker, that all should be available to the said banker. If, without discharging the debt due to this banker, I should sell, mortgage, or dispose of the property to another banker, such transfer shall be void." The creditor sued to recover the amount due under the bond by sale of certain immoveable property belonging to the debtor. Held, that the words used in the bond as indicating the property which was intended to be subject to the charge were sufficiently specific and certain to include, and were intended to include, all the property of the debtor. This being the construction of the bond, the maxim "certum est quod certum reddi potest" applied, and the bond did create a charge upon the immoveable property of the debtor in respect of the monies due under it. RAMSIDH PANDE v. BALGOBIND, 9 A. 158 = A.W.N. 1887, 15. (7 C. 196, R.) [D., 12 A. 175; R., 14 A. 162, 18 M. 364, 8 O.C. 227.]

(19)—Mortgage—Redemption—Co-sharers—Construction.—Where several share-holders in an estate have executed a joint mortgage of it, and have all subsequently executed deeds of further charge to which one or more have been parties, a purchaser of a portion of the estate from all the co-sharers, suing for redemption of the whole estate, must discharge all the debts which they jointly or severally charged on the property, for he represents all the co sharers. A mere agreement in a bond executed by a mortgagor subsequently to a mortgage, to the effect that "after the expiry of the mortgage, when the time comes for payment of the mortgage money, first I will pay this bond with interest and after that I will pay the amount of the mortgage," is sufficient to create a charge on the mortgaged estate. BHUGWAN DASS v. MAHOMED JAFER, 4 N.W.P. 161.

(20)—Mortgage of chattels—Possession—Bona fides—Fraud.—Mortgages of chattels may be made by parol. It is not essential to the validity of such a mortgage that there should be delivery of possession to the mortgagee. A mortgage may be supported if proved to have been made bona fide, although the property mortgaged may have been left in the possession of the mortgagor. SHYAMSOONDAR v. CHEITA, 3 N.W.P. 71. [R., 9 C.W.N. 14.]

(21)—Mortgage of future crops, validity of.—Future indigo crops that may be grown upon a certain plot of land may be validly mortgaged. (2 B.L.R. A. C. 230, R.) Such a transaction is neither governed by the Transfer of Property Act nor by the Contract Act; it is in the nature of an agreement to mortgage moveable property that may come into existence in future. MISRI LAL v. MOZHAR HOSSAIN, 13 C. 262. [R., 10 A. 133, 2 C.P.L.R. 193, 5 C.P.L.R. 6, 16 M. 429, 13 C.P.L.R. 43, 31 C. 667, 11 O.C. 301, 5 N.L.R. 21.]

(22) — Mortgagee — Construction—Money-decree.—The material part of a mortgage deed was as follows:—"If I do not pay off the money within the above term, then you will, after the expiration of the term, sell the above share of the land, and recover your money. If, by sale of the above land, the money receivable by you be not satisfied with charges, then you will realize the proper amount by selling my other landed properties, to which I will make no objection or excuse." The plaintiff, mortgagee, sued to recover a sum of money with interest due on the above bond, but he prayed only for a simple money-decree against the defendant and he did not ask for any sale of the property secured by the mortgage. Held that the plaintiff was entitled to a simple money-decree but it must be restricted to property of the defendant other than his landed property, and so it would be available against his moveable property only. JOGESWAR DUTT v. NITACHAND CHUCKERBUTTY, 4 B.L.R. App. 48.

(23)—Attachment—Claim—Investigation—Mortgage, if legal or equitable—Courts in India—Mortgage of goods by debtor—Attachment—Possession with owner—Inference—Bona fides.—The Courts in India are Courts both of law and equity. Therefore, for the determination of claims to attached property it is not material whether a mortgage is an equitable or a legal mortgage. Where goods are mortgaged and left in the possession of the original owner, the circumstance that they are so left is not to be held as a fraud per se rendering the mortgage liable to be defeated as between the mortgagee and third parties, such as bona fide purchaser or judgment-creditors. But, when possession is left with the mortgagors, the Court must take that circumstance into consideration in determining whether or not the mortgage was fraudulent and colourable. The circumstances of each case should be closely scanned, and where it is shewn that the original dealing is bona fide, it should be supported, notwithstanding there has been no delivery. DEANS, MANAGER, ALLAHABAD BANK v. RICHARDSON, 3 N.W.P. 54. [R., 9 C.W.N. 14.]

(24)—Mortgage—Part payment of mortgage-amount—Suit by mortgagee for possession of proportionate part of mortgagor's land—Intention of parties—Irregularities in procedure, objections to whether could be raised for first time in special appeal.—It is not an absolute rule of law, that a mortgagor who has received only a portion of the principal money, is bound nevertheless to complete, as to such portion, the mortgage security, by giving land in proportion, to the person making such advance; the Court would not be justified without some further evidence, upon such an inchoate and incomplete transaction, in giving to the mortgagee part of the land in mortgage, though the parties may by their subsequent act and conduct, raise the inference that it was so intended. When objections to irregularities or illegalities in the procedure, which should have been raised and discussed in the lower Court, are for the first time raised in special appeal, the High Court under the circumstances will make every reasonable presumption in favour of the regularity or legality of such proceedings. ACHUMBHEET TEWAREE v. BHUGWANT PANDEY, 1 N.W.P. 161.

(25)—Delivery by vendor to purchaser of the title deeds of lands as security for his delivering the title-deeds—Equitable mortgage created by deposit of title-deeds.—The vendee of a Muttah of an estate paid part of the consideration money. When the parties came to complete, the vendors had not the title-deeds but they promised to deliver them in a few days, and agreed that the remaining part of the purchase-money should be retained by the vendee, and they handed over to him the title-deeds of another Muttah, called T., to be held as security for their delivering to such vendee the title-deeds of the sold Muttah in order to perfect his title. The purchaser, on the faith of this, advanced large sums, and paid off a mortgage on Muttah T. This latter Muttah having been sold, the vendee brought a suit to recover the amount advanced by him on account of that Muttah, claiming to be equitable mortgagee, and to have a charge on that estate for the advances made by him in respect thereof. Held, that the transaction created a lien, and bound the Muttah

T for the advances made by the vendee. VARDEN SETH SAM v. LUCKPATHY RAYJEE LALLAH, 9 M.I.A. 303.

(26)—Mortgage—Equitable mortgage—Payment of original mortgage—A person is not entitled to claim as equitable mortgagee merely on showing that he paid off the original mortgage; he must also show that it was his own money that was paid and that he was to stand in the situation of the original mortgagee. PANDOORUNG BULLAL PUNDIT v. BALKRISHN HURBAJEE MAHAJUN, 5 W.R. P.C. 124=2 M.I.A. 60. [F., 17 W.R. 480; R., 8 M. 246.]

(27)—Equitable mortgage—Deposit of title-deeds—Conflicting evidence—Privileged communication.—In Lower Burma both oral agreements to mortgage and mortgages by deposit of title-deeds are valid. If the parties contracting did in fact enter into the contract known as an equitable mortgage, knowing the nature of it and intending by the deposit of the title-deeds to create a lien upon the property covered by the title-deeds as collateral security for the repayment of money, the Court, in the absence of any express direction of the law to the contrary, are bound to give effect to such an agreement. Where the evidence is conflicting, the true test is to see what facts are put beyond doubt and to apply those ascertained facts as a guide in dealing with the oral evidence. S 126, Evidence Act, deals with professional communications. Where one defendant had written a letter to a co-defendant and the document came into the hands of the plaintiff, it was held that there was no rule relating to privileged communications preventing its production in evidence. PARCHEAPPA CHETTY v. MA U, L.B.R. 1872—1892, 412.

(28)—Mortgage by deposit of title-deeds.—A lien or charge upon property equivalent in most respects to a mortgage may be made by simply depositing title-deeds with a creditor as security for a debt without writing and without registration. Foreclosure is the best form of decree to adopt when after a mortgage by simple deposit of title-deeds the interest of the mortgagor has been transferred to a third person, though not in ordinary cases where the depositor of the deeds remains owner of the land. HAJI ABDUL RAHIMAN v. MI PU AND ASHAH BI, L B.R. 1872—1892, 1. (2 M.H.C. 289, R.) [R., L.B.R. 1872—1892, 555.]

(29)—Hypothecation—Covenant not to alienate—Intention to pledge—Formal words of hypothecation—Specification of property.—Even without some formal words of hypothecation there can be valid hypothecation, if the intention of the parties is sufficiently express. Where a bond commences by a statement that R and H are zemindars of a Mouzah, the position of which is then described and it then states that they have borrowed the money, that they promised to pay with interest and that they bind themselves, and not to transfer their rights and interests (hukceat) by means of sale or mortgage until the debt has been paid, held that the reference to the Mouzah and the statement that they are zemindars, followed by the subsequent words prohibiting alienation of their rights, sufficiently indicate their intention to pledge their property. MARTIN v. PURSRAM, 2 Agra 124. [F., 13 A. 28 = A.W.N. 1890, 216; Appl., 5 B.L.R. 264, F.B.; R., 6 A. 551, F.B. = A.W.N. 1884, 188; D., 1 A. 274.]

(30) — Mortgage—Hypothecation.—An instrument, which recites that the obligor has received a certain amount of money and has mortgaged his house to the obligee, that the latter has been put in possession of the mortgaged property, that he promises to pay the sum to the mortgagee, within two years and redeem the mortgaged property, and that, if he fails to pay the mortgage-money within that time, the mortgagee shall be at liberty to recover the amount in any manner he pleases, creates a simple mortgage of the house, which can be enforced by sale. PHUL KUAR v. MURLI DHAR, 2 A. 527. (7 N.W.P. 55, D.) [F., A.W.N. 1888, 171; R., 21 A. 4 = A.W.N. 1893, 167.]

(33) — Hypothecation-bond, terms in, taken sufficient to create charge.—The terms of the bond, by which the property was hypothecated in this case, were objected to be of so general a character that they did not constitute a legal hypothecation, but it was held that the clause in the bond, viz.—“our rights and property in the aforesaid Taluqa shall remain pledged and hypothecated for this debt,” was sufficiently clear and explicit to constitute and create a charge upon the shares and interests of which, it was recited, in the opening of the instrument, that the obligors were the owners. *BISHEN DAYAL v. (35) — Bond—Stipulation not to alienate property—Subsequent alienation—Right of stranger to defeat it.—A debtor executed a bond to G and stipulated that he would make no transfer of his property until the debt to G had been paid up. Subsequently the debtor hypothecated his property to the plaintiff contrary to the terms contained in the bond in favour of G. Held that the stipulation could not be used by a stranger who is not a party to it to defeat the later incumbrance to the plaintiff. *KOONDUN LAL v. (36) — Mortgage—Hypothecation of their “respective zemindaree shares” —Construction of such deed.—In an instrument, the mortgagors describing themselves as zemindars and shareholders of a particular village, declared that for the consideration therein expressed, they mortgaged their “respective zemindaree shares,” and all other moveable and immoveable property owned and possessed by them, in satisfaction of the debt secured by the bond. Held that it was such an hypothecation of specific property as to entitle the person in whose favour it has been made to priority over a subsequent bona fide purchaser for value, and that it was beyond question that the parties intended to mortgage the shares of which they described themselves to be in possession. *RAE MANICK CHUND v. He having failed to fulfil that contract, it was held to be competent to the creditors to sue to enforce the contract or to recover the money due to them within the time allowed by law. It was, however, not competent to them to claim the sale of the property as if the deed were one not of usufructuary mortgage but of hypothecation, inasmuch as there was nothing in the deed purporting to hypothecate the property to secure the debt. *DULLI v. (40)—Mortgage by conditional sale—Equity of redemption.—The contract of mortgage by conditional sale is a form of security, known under various names throughout India and, by the ancient Law of India, enforceable according to its letter. This law must be taken to prevail in every part of India where it is not modified by Legislation or by established practice. The essential characteristic of a mortgage by conditional sale was that, on the breach of the condition, the contract executed itself, and the transaction was closed and became one of absolute sale. (13 M.I.A. 560, Cons. & Appr.) From 1858, in the Madras Presidency, and from 1864 in Bombay, the Courts have, erroneously and in contravention of the law of India, adopted, with regard to this class of securities, doctrines which the

In such a case, if it was the intention of the parties at the time the agreement was made that, on failure of payment within the prescribed period, the mortgaged property should become the property of the mortgagee, and the forfeiture clause was not inserted merely by way of penalty to enforce payment, effect must be given to their intention, and the parties must be bound by the terms of their agreement. *MAUNG SHWE MAUNG v. (44)—Sale convertible into mortgage on contingency—Sale absolute if contingency fails—Right of redemption barred—Indicia whether transaction is sale or mortgage—Rule as to mortgages convertible into sales.—Where the relation of mortgagor and mortgagee had once existed and the mortgagor, in consideration of the mortgage-debt, and of a further sum paid, executed a deed of sale of the mortgage lands to the mortgagee, and at the same time the mortgagee signed an agreement to re-convey the lands upon payment of the two sums within a specified time, held that such a transaction amounted to a sale convertible into a mortgage and not a mortgage convertible into a sale, and that the mortgagor was not entitled to redeem the lands after the expiry of the specified period. The usual indicia which might lead a Court to the opinion that such a transaction was a mortgage and not a sale are—(1) insufficient consideration for the sale of the land, (2) a stipulation that the grantee should account for the rents and profits during his possession or for payment of interest by the grantors either before, at, or, after the period named for the re-purchase, (3) the lands remaining in the possession of the grantors after execution of the deeds, (4) any subsequent advance made by the grantee on the security of the lands, (5) any right on the part of the grantee to recover from the grantors the sum or any part of it, either before, at, or after the period named for the re-purchase. determining whether the intention of the parties to the transaction was to effect a complete sale with a condition of re-purchase, or to create a mortgage by conditional sale or bai-bil-wafa, such intention having to be gathered from the terms of the deed, or from the surrounding circumstances or from both. In this case, on a consideration of the terms of the second deed, the ikrarnamah, the surrounding circumstances and the oral evidence, the High Court held, in concurrence with the Court below, that the contracting parties intended the transaction to be one of mortgage by conditional sale, and not an absolute sale with a right to re-purchase. *BALKRISHAN DAS v. (47)—Mortgage by conditional bill of sale—Joint property held benami in name of co-sharers—Interest of mortgagee.—An estate was bought benami in the name of A by the father of A. After the father's death, a sum of money was raised by conditional bill of sale signed by A as proprietor and by his brother B as motullah. Afterwards, and after the death of B, and after B's heirs had separated from A, A raised a further sum by a bill of sale, reciting the former conditional bill of sale, and stating that the additional sum was raised to discharge the same. Held that, if the grantee took with notice that he was entitled to a half share only of the estate, the additional charge would operate as a mortgage of such half share only; but that portion of the money for which the original bill of sale was given was a charge on B's share as well as on the possession of his heirs. *KISHEN CHUNDER GHOSE v. not, by reason of having done so, ceased to be a share-holder in the village, and the bai-bil-wafa or conditional sale by the plaintiff not having become absolute at the time of the accrual of his right to pre-empt, plaintiff was entitled to maintain his suit for pre-emption. *ALI AHMAD v. The decree-holder may sue for damages on the breach of contract by the judgment-debtor, but he cannot sue to enforce his lien on the property against a purchaser. CHOONEE LALL v. PUHULWAN SINGH, 3 Agra 270.

(51)—Covenant in mortgage-bond not to lease, effect of, on subsequent lease—Proper course to be adopted by mortgagee in such a case.—A covenant by a mortgagor not to lease or mortgage the property is purely a personal one so as not to render a subsequent lease invalid or to put an end to it on the mortgagee purchasing the property himself in execution of his mortgage-decree. (14 B.L.R. 408 = 23 W.R. 187, 24 W.R. 210, 25 W.R. 216, R.) [R., 29 A. 679 = 4 A.L.J. 703 = A.W.N. 1907, 227.] The proper course for such mortgagee is to sue such lessee to have his right declared to sell the property to satisfy his mortgage-debt, thereby giving him an opportunity of redeeming. (52)—Condition in mortgage deed not to alienate—Equities in favour of the mortgagees.—An alienation of mortgaged property in violation of a condition in the mortgage not to alienate, is not absolutely void, but voidable in so far as it is against the mortgagee's rights. In such a case, the mortgagee will have obtained all that in equity he is entitled to, if it is declared that the alienation against the terms of the mortgage shall not bind the auction-purchaser, unless he desires its continuance. *CHUNNI v. (55)—Bond—Vague covenant against alienation—Effect.—A vague covenant in a bond not to alienate property of the covenantor, till the loan secured by the bond is paid, does not give the covenantee any lien upon any specific property. (3 C. 363, F.; 5 B.L.R. 264, D.) [R., L.B.R. 1893—1900, 340.] In this case, it was held that the fact that the bond containing the general covenant against alienation of any property of the debtor was registered in book "four," and not in book "one," which related to immoveable property, negatived any intention of the parties to specifically charge the property. *NAJIBULLA MULLA v. Before the expiration of the term, the villages were taken in execution, and sold under a decree at the suit of a third party, and the lessee turned out of possession. Held that the lessee had no claim against the villages for the principal money and that the sum of Rs. 1,000 was forfeited. NUNDLALL v. (2)—Property hypothecated for bond—Rights of subsequent purchaser—Money-decree on bond, liability of the property to satisfy—Marshalling.—Plaintiffs sued to confirm a deed of sale under which he purchased certain land. Defendant denied the genuineness of the plaintiff's deed of sale and pleaded that the land purchased by the plaintiff had been pledged as a security for a bond on which it appeared a suit had been brought and a decree given on confession of judgment. Both the lower Courts found the purchase of the plaintiff to be a valid purchase, but the Principal Sudder Ameen held that the property so purchased was hypothecated for the bond on which execution had been taken out, and he directed that the same be held liable to satisfy such part of that decree on the bond as could not be satisfied from any other source. The case was sent back for finding whether, when hypothecated property has passed to a bona fide purchaser, the same can be declared liable to satisfy such part of a money-decree on the bond as could not be satisfied from any other source. If A has mortgage upon two different estates for the same debt, and B has a mortgage upon one only of the estates for another debt, B has a right to throw A in the first instance for satisfaction upon the security which he, B cannot touch, at least where it will not prejudice

A's rights or improperly control his remedies. A subsequent purchaser of one of the estates has just as great an equity as an incumbrancer—Per Norman, J. BISHONATH MOOKERJEE v. KISTO MOHUN MOOKERJEE, 7 W.R. 483. [R., 7 A. 711.]

(3)—Sale of mortgaged property—True value of property—Enquiry in to—Government assessment.—Property to subject of a mortgage may be sold in satisfaction but it must be sold as a whole and cannot be disposed of piecemeal at the pleasure of the mortgagee. An enquiry should be made into the relative value of the properties included in the mortgage and each of them must be proportionately burthened with its share of the debt. In calculating the value of the properties the Judge ought not to assume that the Government assessment represents the true value. Many circumstances might make that assessment a very unsafe guide as to what the real value of the lands was. MAHARAJAH KISHEN PERTAB SAHEE BAHADOOR v. LALLA NUND COOMAR SINGH PARRAY, 25 W.R. 388. (14 W. R. 17, P.C., F.)

(4)—Mortgage—Subsequent mortgage of part of mortgaged property—Marshalling.—A mortgage upon three different estates had been made in favour of plaintiff. The defendant subsequently got a mortgage extending to one of them only. In a suit by the former to establish his claim upon the three estates, the defendant for the first time in the High Court contended that the plaintiff should, in the first instance resort to the two other estates for the satisfaction of his demand before he could touch the third which was the only property available to him. Held, that the contention could not be allowed, as the objection was not urged in the Court below and as the appellant had not given any evidence that he was a bona fide subsequent mortgagee without notice. The introduction into India of the doctrine of marshalling of securities is of doubtful propriety as it will interfere with the legal rights of parties by prejudicing the rights of the plaintiff or by improperly controlling his remedies. KHETOOSSEE CHEROORIA v. BANEE MADHUB DOSS, 12 W.R. 114. [R., 7 A. 711=A.W.N. 1885, 191, 18 B. 160.]

(5)—Mortgage—Subsequent purchaser of part of mortgaged property without notice—Suit for sale of whole property on mortgage—Marshalling—Apportionment.—The equities which apply to a puisne incumbrancer in the marshalling of securities apply also to a bona fide purchaser for value of a portion of property the whole of which is subject to a prior mortgage. and a subsequent bona fide purchaser of a portion of the property mortgaged were both impleaded as defendants, although the purchaser could claim contribution from the mortgagor in respect of any sum he may be compelled to pay over and above the share of the debt apportioned on his property, such apportionment could not be made in second appeal. RODH MAL v. RAM HARAKH, 7 A. 711 = A.W. N. 1885, 198.

(6)—Mortgage of two properties—Subsequent mortgage of one of them to another with notice of first mortgage—Right of second mortgagee to marshal securities—Applicability of doctrine of marshalling to mortgages in the mofussil.—Before the provisions of the Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882) were made applicable to the Presidency of Bombay, where two properties had been mortgaged to one person, and one of them is subsequently mortgaged to another person with notice of the former mortgage, the second mortgagee was held to have an equity to call for a marshalling of the securities in his favour so as to require the first mortgagee to proceed to realize his security in the first instance out of the property not mortgaged to the second mortgagee. The doctrine of marshalling of securities, as obtaining in England, is applicable to mortgages in the mofussil. CHUNILAL VITHALDAS v. FULCHAND, 18 B. 160. [F., 22 B. 304.]

(7)—Purchaser at execution-sale under second mortgage—Right of marshalling not destroyed by notice given subsequent to mortgage.—A purchaser at a Court-sale under a second mortgage, whether he be the original mortgagee or not, purchases not only the rights of the mortgagor but all the rights of the mortgagee acquired up to the sale, including a right to insist on the plaintiff (first mortgagee) marshalling his securities. There is nothing in s. 81, or elsewhere, to destroy one right of marshalling by a notice given subsequent to the mortgage. INDERDAWAN PERSHAD v. GOBIND LALL CHOWDHRY, 23 C. 790.

(8)—Mortgage money, suit for—Execution sale—Low price paid for mortgaged property—Satisfaction of mortgage.—Suit to recover principal and interest on a mortgage bond hypothecating the obligee's share in three villages, K, S and P. The plea was that plaintiff had paid himself by becoming the purchaser at an execution sale of another decree of the obligee's rights in K for a low price. At the sale in question, the bids were made on the understanding that the property was burdened with the plaintiff's bond-debt. Held that, as plaintiff chose to give out that he intended to burden the village K with the payment of the whole sum due to him, and took advantage of the lowness of the bids to buy the property himself, he cannot now be allowed to proceed against the other properties. BYJONATH SAHOY v. (10)—Tr. P. Act, s. 81—Notice—Prejudice to third parties.—The principle of marshalling cannot be exercised to the prejudice of third parties (1 Y. and C.C.C. 401 and 2 Y. and C.C.C. 377, F.) The principle applies only when the second mortgagee has no notice of the prior mortgage. SATIS CHUNDER MUKHERJI v. GOPAL CHUNDER CHUCKERBUTTI, 2 C.W.N. 397.

(11)—Sale of part of mortgaged property—Right of mortgagee to proceed against entire property.—The general doctrine that, where one creditor has a demand against two estates, and another creditor has a demand against one only, the latter is entitled to throw the former on the fund that is not common to them both, is a narrow one, and cannot generally be enforced against an incumbrancer, who is a mortgagee; and a mortgagee is not bound to proceed first against that portion of the mortgaged property that had not been sold to a purchaser for value. LALA DILAWAR SAHAI v. DEWAN BOLAKIRAM, 11 C. 258. [F., 17 A. 434 = A.W.N. 1895, 83, 24 C. 746; Cons., 29 M. 217; D., 2 C.L.J. 288; R., 31 C. 95 = 8 C. W.N. 30, 31 M. 419, F.B. = 18 M.L.J. 229 = 3 M. L.T. 287.]

(12)—Mortgagee and attaching creditors under money decrees—Marshalling.—As between a mortgagee and the mortgagor's attaching creditors holding mere money-decrees, the doctrine of marshalling has no application. KRISTODOSS KUNDU v. RAMKANT ROY CHOWDHRY, 6 C. 142 = 7 C.L.R. 396.

(13)—Rights of mortgagee.—Where a person purchases a portion of mortgaged property, he cannot compel the mortgagee to realise the mortgage amount from the other portion of the mortgaged property, either on the ground that the purchase money which he paid went to discharge a prior incumbrance or that such portion is sufficient to satisfy his debt. RAMA RAJU v. (14)—Right of mortgagee to recover from portion of mortgaged property the whole debt.—Where there was a money decree, and a mortgage decree against the same person, and in execution of the former, part of the mortgaged property was brought to sale and purchased by the holder of the money decree, he was not entitled to insist on redeeming his share by paying a proportionate amount of the debt due to the mortgagee who has the right to realise his debt from the whole or any portion of the mortgaged property. TIMMAPPA v. LAKSHMAMMA, 5 M. 385. [R., 21 M. 369, 29 M. 217.]

(15)—Mortgage—Subsequent mortgage of some of the properties to another person—Right to marshalling and apportionment.—The second mortgage which the first and second defendants executed subsequent to the original mortgage to the plaintiff-respondent did not include the house described in the plaint nor the field survey No. 122, which were both included in plaintiff's mortgage. The field was still with the original mortgagors, plaintiff himself having purchased the equity of redemption in the house at a prior auction-sale. In the present suit, plaintiff sought to enforce his mortgage to its full extent against all the properties included in his mortgage with the exception of the house. At a sale in execution of a decree obtained against the first and second defendants under the said second mortgage, third defendant, the appellant, purchased the mortgaged properties and became the owner thereof, subject to the plaintiff-respondent's mortgage thereon. Appellant contended that plaintiff must enforce his claim against the above-mentioned house and field before he could proceed against the lands included in the mortgage under which he claimed. The question of marshalling had to be considered and also of apportionment. First, as to the appellant's claim to have the securities marshalled, it was objected that he had not that right, being merely a purchaser at the Court sale, but it was held that the right to have the securities marshalled extends to a purchaser and is not to be confined to a puisne incumbrancer. The appellant in his capacity as purchaser was clearly entitled to require the respondent to seek satisfaction first out of the property not covered by the purchase before holding the property in his (appellant's) possession liable to make the debt good. With regard to the apportionment, it was clear that the plaintiff when he purchased the equity of redemption in the house purchased it subject to its due proportion of the mortgage-debt. That proportion of the mortgage debt thus ceased to exist and the plaintiff's right as mortgagee to recover the money secured by his mortgage was reduced to that extent. What proportion of the mortgage-debt was thus wiped out would depend upon the proportion of the value of the house to the value of the rest of the mortgaged properties, which proportion was to be left to be settled by the Court executing the decree. LAKHMIDAS v. JAMNADAS, 22 B. 304, F.B. [F., 26 B. 88=3 Bom. L.R. 628; R., 24 M. 96=12 M.L.J. 383, 22 A. 284, F.B., 26 B. 538, 6 Bom. be apportioned between all the properties, and the mortgagee was not allowed to proceed against the property which had passed out of the mortgagor, except for the proportionate amount, without satisfying the Court of every possible effort having been made to execute the remainder of the decree against the other properties in the mortgagor's possession. RAM DHUN DHUR v. MOHESH CHUNDER CHOWDHRY, 9 C. 406=11 C.L.R. 565. [Appr., 13 B. 45; R., 6 O.C. 197, 10 C.L.J. 150; D., 29 M. 217.]

(17)—Mortgage—Apportionment—Priority—Form of decree.—A held an eight annas share, B and C each a four annas share in a certain estate. A mortgaged his share to G; the respondent took a mortgage of the whole estate; and afterwards the appellant took a mortgage of B's share and half of A's share. Subsequently, he purchased the equity of redemption in the whole estate. It was held that the appellant was entitled both to have an apportionment made and to have an eight annas share of the estate put up for sale, unless the respondent was willing to pay off the appellant's mortgage-debt. Rules as to form of decree set out. GUNGA NARAIN SEN v. HURISH CHUNDER CHANGDASS, 6 C.L.R. 336. [R., 2 C.W.N. 397.]

On the 24th January, 1878, S and V jointly mortgaged to the plaintiff for a consideration of Rs. 199 a portion of the undivided property. On the 28th July, of the same year, S alone, for a further advance of Rs. 200, gave a further mortgage to the plaintiff of a part of the same lands already mortgaged to him. Subsequently, the three brothers partitioned the whole undivided property among themselves, and the property comprised in the mortgage of 24th January 1878 fell to the shares of V and N. In 1881, the plaintiff sues upon the second of the above mortgages. He obtained a decree, and, at a sale in execution of that decree himself purchased the property included in the mortgage. In the meantime, on the 27th January, 1882, and 6th December, 1883, V and N respectively mortgaged, with possession, to the defendant R, some of the lands which had been comprised in the first mortgage of the 24th January, 1878, and which had come to them on partition. In 1883, the plaintiff filed the present suit against the defendants and upon his first mortgage of the 24th January, 1878, claiming to recover Rs. 316-14-0 from the mortgaged property and from S and V personally as mortgagors. He also prayed that the defendant R, who was in possession, should not be allowed to obstruct him in selling the mortgaged property. S and V remained ex parte. The defendant R contended that the plaintiff, having sued upon the second mortgage without including the earlier one was now barred from suing on the latter by ss. 13 and 43 of the Civ. Pro. Code. He also urged that the plaintiff, having purchased part of the lands comprised in the mortgage now sued upon, in execution of the decree obtained by him upon his second mortgage, could not now seek to burden the remaining lands included in the mortgage with the whole of the mortgage-debt, but that a proportionate part of the debt must be deemed to have been satisfied. Held that the previous suit on the second mortgage formed no bar to the plaintiff's present suit, under ss. 13 and 43, Civ. Pro. Code and that the plaintiff could not recover his debt due under the first mortgage from the remaining lands without deducting a proportionate part of that debt. Held also that a mortgagee will not be allowed, without special reason, deliberately to execute his decree exclusively against one of the owners of the equity of redemption for the whole debt. MORO RAGHUNATH v. Act), s. 68 (b) and (c).*—When a usufructuary mortgage deed contained a stipulation that "if, on the part of the mortgagor or other person, any kind of dispute or any interference or obstruction took place in obtaining of possession by the mortgagee, of the mortgaged property, the mortgagee might sue for the mortgage-money," but there was no covenant against alienation, the mortgagee could not, after possession once obtained and secured, sue for the money, on the ground that he had been subsequently deprived of a portion of the property, by a person to whom the mortgagor had sold it; there being no covenant against alienation, the sale by the mortgagor could not be a wrongful act, and cannot be considered wrongful under any rule of law, and the wrongful act of the purchaser, though committed, under colour of the purchase, cannot be said to be a consequence of the wrongful act of the mortgagor. JHABBU RAM v. GIRDHARI SINGH, 6 A. 298 = A.W.N. 1884, 97. [R., 11 A. 367, A.W.N. 1892, 66, 6 Bom.L.R. 288; D., 16 A. 318, F.B., A.W.N. 1901, 52.]

(7)—Terms in mortgage binding mortgagee to pay assessment of mortgaged lands—Mortgagee not bound to save property from paramount title—Failure of security—Suit to recover debt from mortgagor personally—Limitation.—In this case, the mortgagee was only under an obligation, by the terms of the mortgage, to pay the assessment due in respect of the mortgaged lands, and this obligation he duly discharged. When, therefore, by the default of the mortgagor in paying the assessment on other lands standing in his brother's name, the mortgaged lands were sold at a Revenue sale, the mortgagee's security came to an end, there being no rule of law which requires the mortgagee to incur expenses to save the mortgaged property from a paramount title. The mortgage consideration for the loan having failed, it became at once recoverable, by the plaintiff personally from the mortgagor. A suit for the purpose would be barred in three years unless the mortgage-deed was a registered one and contained an undertaking by the mortgagor to pay the loan. SAMABA KHANDAPA v. of the mortgaged lands. BAPUSA SADASHIV v. RAMJI GOPALJI, 2 B.H.C. 220. [F., 9 B.H.C. 69.]

(10)—Mortgagee in possession—Cultivation.—A mortgagee in possession is bound to cultivate the ordinary crops which the land is capable of yielding. GIRJOJI BHIKAJI v. KESHAVERAV N. HINGE, 2 B.H.C. 211.

(11)—Mortgage—Purchaser.—If a person mortgages property of which he has no present ownership, and subsequently becomes the owner of the mortgaged property, the lien created by the mortgage attaches to such ownership, and subsequent purchasers from the mortgagor take subject to the equities which affected the property in the hands of the mortgagor. MAHOMED ASSUD-OOLLAH KHAN v. KARAMUT-OOLLAH, 4 N.W.P. 11.

(12)—Bom. Act V of 1864—Hindu Law—Mortgagee without possession—Suit to recover land—Mamlatdar's order against mortgagor—Judgment not inter partes.—For a Hindu mortgagee to successfully maintain an action of ejectment against third persons wrongfully in possession of the mortgaged property, it is not necessary that such mortgagee should have been put in possession by his mortgagor. If the mortgagor had been in possession within 12 years, and the mortgagor gave the mortgagee the right to be put into possession, the mortgagee would be entitled to bring his action based upon the title of his mortgagor. A mortgagee is not affected by a Mamlatdar's order, made under Bombay Act V of 1864, on the application of the mortgagor for possession subsequent to the date of the mortgage. KRISHNAJI NARAYAN v. GOVIND BHASKAR, 9 B.H.C. 275. [R., 2 B. 299, 6 B. 168, F.B.]

(13)—Mortgagee in possession—Sale for arrears of revenue.—A mortgagee in possession has no right to recover any share of the sale proceeds of the mortgaged property sold for arrears of revenue, except to the extent that he shows that the usufruct of the property while he held the mortgage was insufficient to pay him back his original loan. HUR DEO NARAIN SINGH v. FUZLA HOSSEIN, 1 W.R. 270.

(14)—Mortgage—Payment of mortgage by third person—Right of such person.—Where a mortgage was paid off by a third person, with his money, such person could enforce his lien as assignee of the mortgage, but cannot obtain possession of the mortgaged property in the capacity of an absolute owner. BABOO DUT JHA v. PEAREE KAUNT, 18 W.R. 404. [R., 1 C.L.R. 152.]

(15)—Usufructuary lease—Diluvion.—Where a mortgagee is deprived by diluvion of land over which he holds an usufructuary lease, he has a right, unless the terms of the lease are very special, to call upon the lessor for the unpaid balance of the loan. SHEO GOLAM SINGH v. ROY DINKER DYAL, 21 W.R. 226.

Mortgage—continued.—8.—Possession under Mortgage—contd.

(16)—Mortgage in English form—Right of entry—Validity of covenant.—When an express right of entry is covenanted for, the mortgagee would be entitled to enter into possession, although it might be that such right of entry ought to be enforced through the intervention of the Court. The mortgagee, when he enters into possession, would be in possession as mortgagor; and there is nothing in the law of this country to prohibit such a covenant being enforced. Where the mortgagee does not seek to enforce his lien as against any portion of the property, and has no necessity to do so, but it is the mortgagor who seeks to destroy the lien upon the ground that it has come to an end, the right of the mortgagee cannot in any sense be said to be extinguished by efflux of time, although 12 years have run out from the date of the default, if he is rightfully in possession as mortgagee under the covenant. [F., 7 C. W. N. 11.] It is one thing to hold that a creditor or a mortgagee is not entitled to enforce his remedy by a suit in Court, but it may be quite a different thing when the question is whether the debtor or the mortgagor is entitled to a specific relief as against the creditor or the mortgagee. LUTCHMIPUT SINGH BAHADUR v. THE LAND MORTGAGE BANK OF INDIA, LTD. 14 C. 464.

(17)—Mortgagee by conditional sale, suit by—Possession—Subsequent wrongful dispossession—Right of redemption.—A mortgagee by conditional sale, who was put in possession, but was subsequently wrongfully dispossessed of the mortgaged property, can successfully maintain a suit, if brought within time, to recover possession of the same, though his claim for foreclosure may be barred by limitation. Such subsequent possession is, of course, possession as mortgage is subject to the right of redemption. AMAN ALI v. AZGAR ALI MIA, 27 C. 185. [F., 7 C. W. N. 11.]

(18)—First mortgagee in possession—Right of second mortgagee to oust first mortgagee—Remedy of second mortgagee—Suit for redemption.—A mortgagee, who has been placed in possession in execution of a decree for possession, cannot be ousted at the instance of a subsequent mortgagee and the remedy of the latter is a suit for redemption. The second mortgagee cannot, by merely alleging that no money is due on the first mortgage, require the latter mortgagee to prove that the mortgage money has not been paid. NARAYEN SETH v. MUKUND RAM, 2 C. P. L. R. 173. [R., 7 C. P. L. R. 3.]

(19)—Mortgage by conditional sale—Subsequent lease by mortgagor—Right of mortgagee to retain possession—Effect of subsequent sale to mortgagee.—The owner of a property first mortgaged it by conditional sale to one person, then while the mortgage was in existence he leased it to the plaintiff for sixty years and finally sold it to the mortgagee as a continuation of the conditional sale. Held that the mortgagor had no right to grant a lease which would have the effect of keeping the mortgagee out of the property for sixty years. After the purchase of the equity of redemption, the mortgagee was entitled to protect himself by his mortgage against the lease. When a mortgagee is in possession by virtue of his mortgage, the lessee of the mortgagor cannot oust him, CHAINSUKHDAS v. MT. MUNYA, 4 C. P. L. R. 193.

(20)—Conditional mortgage—Subsequent registered deed of sale—Priority.—A person claiming under a registered deed of sale executed in 1867 was held not to have a better title than a conditional mortgagee in possession under an unregistered deed of 1853, i.e., executed before the new Registration Acts (XVI of 1864 and XX of 1866). SHEODYAL AHEER v. GOOL MAHOMED KHAN, 2 N. W. P. 296. [R., 7 C. 753 = 10 C. L. R. 129.]

(21)—Mortgage—Possession—Priority—Lis pendens—Civ. Pro. Code, 1859, ss. 223, 230.—A mortgagee in possession is entitled to have his claim satisfied in preference to a mortgagee of a prior date but unaccompanied by possession. When a suit for possession brought by a prior mortgagee was being contested, a subsequent mortgagee brought a suit for possession and obtained possession before the decree in the other suit. Held that possession so obtained pending the earlier suit, would not avail to give the subsequent mortgage priority over the first mortgage. The effect of the two sections taken together would seem to be that an alienation of property pendente lite is prima facie fraudulent, but that, if the alienee could show that he was a bona fide purchaser for valuable consideration without notice, or that, in any other way, he had an equity superior to that of the plaintiff in the suit, he might recover the property from which he had been in the first instance summarily removed. *KRISHNAPPA MAHADAPPA v. (22)—Two mortgages on same property—Purchaser under second mortgage—Claim to possession—Duty to discharge prior lien.—If a property has been twice mortgaged, the purchaser under the second mortgage can only obtain possession after discharging the lien created by the first mortgage, CHEIT NARAIN SINGH v. GUNGA PERSHAD, 25 W. R. 216. [F., 6 C. 317, 31 C. 737.]

(23)—Possession—Conditional sale—Prior lien—Liability to discharge.—Where a prior lien did subsist upon the land at the time of the conditional sale of the same to the plaintiff, the plaintiff is bound to pay off that lien before he can obtain possession of the property. BROJENDRO COOMAR ROY CHOWDHRY v. MR. J. P. WISE, 18 W. R. 329. [Appr., 19 W. R. 130.]

Mortgage—continued.—8.—Possession under Mortgage—contd.

(24)—Mortgage—Transfer of mortgaged property by mortgagee in exchange—Right of mortgagor to property obtained in exchange.—Where a mortgagee transfers mortgaged property in exchange for a number of similar properties, the mortgagor cannot claim possession by redemption of a particular property among those obtained in exchange, unless there was a binding agreement, between him and the mortgagee, at the time of the exchange, that such property was to take the place of the property mortgaged. NIDHI LAL v. MAZHAR HUSAIN, 7 A. 436 = A.W.N. 1885, 68.

(25)—Sale of mortgage after foreclosure—Intermediate title created by mortgagor—Issue—Possession—Right of mortgagee.—When a contract between the parties at the time of the mortgage was either that the mortgagor should pay off the mortgage within a certain time and thus redeem the property, or else that he should give up the property in the same state in which it stood at the time of the mortgage, it follows that if, subsequent to the mortgage, the mortgagor has created any encumbrance which was not in existence at the time of the mortgage, it is upon him to show that such encumbrance has not injured the outturn of the property. A mortgage of certain property which had been made in favour of a Bank, was sold to K (by S who had purchased it from the Bank) and he got a decree for possession after foreclosing the mortgage. The original mortgagor had granted a miras pottah to G, subsequent to the mortgage. W who bought the foreclosure decree intervened unsuccessfully in a suit instituted by G for arrears of rent setting up an intermediate title between proprietor and ryot. W subsequently sued G to have his right declared to a certain share of the rent payable by a ryot. The Court of first instance dismissed his suit on certain issues framed by it. The lower Appellate Court decreed his suit, on the determination of the single issue that the miras pottah was granted subsequent to the mortgage. Held (1) that the issue on which the lower Appellate Court allowed the plaintiff to rest his case was one which legitimately arose upon the facts on which either side relied, and that that Court had no doubt a discretion to allow the issue, which was one of law only, to be heard, and had jurisdiction to determine it; (2) that it was not necessary for plaintiff to prove his possession, as his cause of action was his being prevented by the defendant from enjoying the usufruct of the property by receipt of rents from ryots, etc; (3) that the plaintiff was entitled to get the property free from the miras lease as the mortgagee taking possession of the property under the terms of the mortgage was entitled to have that property in the condition in which it stood when it was mortgaged to him. GOVIND CHUNDER BANERJEE v. J. P. WISE, 12 W.R. 19.

assignee of mortgagor to oust mortgagee except by suit for redemption.—Where a mortgagee has been placed in possession under a decree passed on the mortgage, he cannot be ousted by any order of the Collector at the instance of any person deriving title from the mortgagor, so long as the decree, under which he has been placed in possession, is in force, and he cannot be ejected except under a decree for redemption passed by a competent Court. GANESHDASS v. KHUMANSINGH, 7 C.P.L.R. 3. (2 C.P.L.R. 173, R.)

(27)—Suit by mortgagee for possession—No interest in mortgagor at time of suit—Person in possession not made party—Right of latter to recover possession from mortgagee—A mortgagee had instituted a suit for possession under a mortgage and obtained possession in execution. But, at the time the suit was instituted, the mortgagor had no interest in the mortgaged property, all his interest including his right of redemption having passed to another, the present plaintiff, and the latter was not made a party to that suit, though he was in possession at the time. Now he sued to recover possession and contended that, as he was not a party to that suit, he could not be deprived of possession in execution. Held that any question of priority of mortgage between the plaintiff and the mortgagee could only be decided in the course of a suit under the mortgage and consequently he was entitled to recover possession until the mortgagee established his claim against him. BATTU LAL KHEMCHAND v. SHUJAYAT BEG, 5 C.P.L.R. 74.

(28)—Suit for possession by usufructuary mortgagee or in the alternative for mortgage amount—Sons of mortgagor, whether necessary parties—Transfer of Property Act, 1882, s. 85.—An usufructuary mortgagee brought a suit for possession of the mortgaged property, and in the alternative for the mortgage-money, joining as defendants in the suit the mortgagor and a purchaser from the mortgagor of the property in execution of a simple money decree, but without joining the two sons of the mortgagor as defendants. The lower Appellate Court dismissed the suit for non-joinder of the mortgagor's sons as defendants. Held that, as the property was not the ancestral property of the mortgagor and as s. 85, Transfer of Property Act, was not applicable to this suit, it being not a suit under Chap. IV of the Act, the mortgagor's sons were not necessary parties to the suit. RAM NARAIN RAM v. PALO PATAK, 1 A.L.J. 367.

(29)—Possession—Limitation—Alienation pending sale under a decree.—In 1871 defendant 1 mortgaged his land by a san mortgage to the plaintiff and the equity of redemption which remained with him was sold in 1872 in execution of a money decree, and was purchased by defendant 2 who was placed in possession in 1876. In 1877 the plaintiff sued the defendants 1 and 2 on his mortgage and obtained a decree for his money and an order that he could recover it from the defendant 1 by the sale of the property. On the 6th June 1880, defendant 2 mortgaged it with possession to defendants 9 and 10. On the 19th November, 1883, the property was sold and was purchased by R from whom the plaintiff bought. On the 19th November, 1895, the plaintiff brought this suit for possession. The Court of first instance rejected the plaintiff's claim as time-barred and the lower appellate Court confirmed its decree: Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to a decree against the defendants 1 and 2. His title as purchaser was complete and his suit even if it fell under art. 138 of the Limitation Act was within time. In 1880 the decree which the plaintiff had obtained for sale was pending over the property and so no alienation was possible that could in any way derogate from the plaintiff's right to bring the property to sale, but as defendants 9 and 10 (mortgagees) had been allowed to remain on in possession for more than twelve years after the mortgage, the mortgage must be held to be a valid charge upon the land, and the plaintiff must redeem them before he could obtain possession of the land. PREMANAND v. (1)—Mortgage—Butwarra among mortgagees—Right of Redemption.—A butwarra entered into between the mortgagees of an estate cannot bind the mortgagors, or change the nature of the security given by them. The mortgagors' right to redeem what they had mortgaged is indefeasible, and cannot be interfered with by the unauthorized acts of their mortgagees. SHAIKH MUZUHUR HOSSEIN v. HUR PERSHAD ROY, 15 W.R. 353.

(2)—Right to redeem not variable by agreement.—Where a document is, on its face, a mortgage, the right to redeem is so much an essential as not to be variable by agreement. The question of intention extra the document does not, therefore, arise. SAMATHAL v. HER H. M. M. KAMATCHI AMMA BOYI SAIB, 7 M. H.C. 395. [R., 1 M. 1, P.C., 4 M. 179, F.B.]

(3)—Conditions of redemption as between mortgagor and mortgagee.—The terms on which a mortgagor is entitled to redeem must be the same whether they are to be ascertained in a suit for redemption or for foreclosure. In determining what equity the mortgagor is bound to do, the question is what are the duties and liabilities which his situation imposes at the time of the institution of the suit and not whether he is plaintiff or defendant on the record. THAYAR AMMAL v. LAKSHMI AMMAL, 18 M. 331.

(4)—Who is entitled to redeem—Person having an interest in mortgage property, repudiating the mortgage as unauthorised and as not binding on him, whether entitled to redeem.—Redemption is primarily an incident of the contract of mortgage, and, as such, the right to it can only exist in such persons as are reached and bound by the contract. No person who is not affected by the contract of mortgage can sue to redeem such mortgage. Thus, where a person having an interest in the mortgaged property repudiates the mortgage as unauthorised and as not binding on him such a person has no right to redeem. If he has any interest in the property covered by the mortgage, his suit would be one, not to enforce, but to avoid the contract. GHANYA v. UKUND RAO, 4 N.L.R. 9. [F., 5 N.L.R. 103; R., 5 N.L.R. 117; Rel. on, 5 N.L.R. 172.]

(5)—Redemption—Terms of mortgage precluding possibility of redemption and unjust and unfair not to be enforced.—Where the terms of a mortgage instrument preclude from all possibility of redeeming the mortgage and where the terms of the deed are most unfair and unjust and such as no man with his eyes open would consent to, the terms would not be enforced by the Court. SHANKER RAMDUTT v. HARDASS, 3 C.P.L.R. 115.

(6)—Parties, non-joinder of—Effect of, in mortgage suit—Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), s. 85—Registration Act (III of 1877), s. 60—Signature—Handwriting—Test of genuineness—Evidence Act (I of 1872), s. 39—Account books, non-entry in, no evidence—Covenant that payment not endorsed on bond not allowable—Proof of such payments, allowable—Interest after date fixed for redemption.—It is of the essence of modern procedure to take care that an action shall not be defeated by the non-joinder of the right parties. When a party in interest is not made a party to a mortgage suit, the decree is not generally for this reason wholly void. It is effectual as against the persons interested in the equity who are made parties. And the only effect of the failure of the plaintiff to bring on the record a person who has an interest in a fragment of the equity of redemption is to leave his rights untouched, with the consequence that, if the plaintiff obtains a decree for foreclosure, he may subsequently find himself liable to be redeemed by the person who had been left out from the litigation. (19 C. 401, 5 C.W.N. 423, F.; 18 A. 109, Not F.) The endorsement made by the Registering Officer is admissible, under s. 60 of the Registration Act, in evidence, in proof that the facts mentioned therein have actually occurred. The test of genuineness of a signature ought to be the resemblance, not to the formation of letters in some other specimen or specimens, but to the general character of writing, which is impressed on it as the involuntary and unconscious result of constitution, habit or other permanent cause, and is, therefore, itself permanent. The best, usually perhaps the only proper, evidence of handwriting is that of persons, who have acquired a previous knowledge of the party's handwriting from seeing him write, and who form their opinion from the general character and manner of these, and not from criticising the particular letters. Although the entries in books of account are relevant to the extent provided by s. 39 of the Evidence Act, yet such a book is not by itself relevant to raise an inference from the absence of any entry. (10 C. 1024, 7 C.L.R. 356, 30 C. 231, F.; 4 C.W.N. CCVII, R.) In spite of a covenant in a bond to the effect that all payments are to be endorsed on the back of the deed and that no payment not so entered is to be recognised, the debtor is entitled to credit for payment actually made and otherwise proved. (3 W.R. Mis. 23, 8 W.R. 316, 5 M.H.C. 451, 1 N.W.P. 228, 1 B. 45, F.) The interest after the date fixed for redemption in the decree should be allowed not upon the principal sum alone, but upon the aggregate amount found due. KAMALAPATHI BANERJEE v. BEJOY LAL ROY CHOWDHURY, 3 Ind. Cas. 291. (10 C.L.J. 203, 3 Ind. Cas. 289, F.)

(7)—Prior mortgagee not making puisne mortgage party—Subsequent suit by the latter—Conditions of redemption—Interest at the contract rate.—In a suit by a prior mortgagee, one of the puisne mortgagees was not made a party, and the former purchased the property at the sale held under the decree obtained by him in his suit. The puisne mortgagee sued, subsequently to redeem the prior mortgages, and, in that suit, a question as to the conditions of the redemption arose. Held, that the puisne mortgagee not being a party to the previous suit, it ought not to affect either his rights or his liabilities. He could not use the previous decree so as to cut down the prior mortgagee's interest, and at the same time deprive him of the whole advantage of it. The prior mortgagee should, therefore, be entitled to whatever interest his contract entitled him to. (18 C. 164, P.C., F.) The equitable considerations which appear to have prevailed with the learned Judges in Gangadas Bhattar v. Jogendra Nath Mitter (11 C.W.N. 403, D.) seem to be applicable only to a case in which the prior mortgagee has notice of the subsequent encumbrance, and the subsequent encumbrancer has no notice of the prior mortgage. In such a case it may be just to penalize the prior mortgagee for his disregard of the provisions of s. 85, Transfer of Property Act. THENAPPA CHETTIAR v. MARI-MUTHU NADAN, 18 M.L.J. 344=31 M. 258=4 M.L.T. 293. [Rel. on, 4 N.L.R. 168; R., 7 M.L.T. 194]

(8)—Decree for redemption—Appeal by some defendants only—Other defendants also necessary parties—Procedure.—Plaintiff obtained a decree for redemption against the defendants 1 to 4. The defendants 1 and 3 alone appealed against the decree, and the decree was reversed, and suit dismissed. Held, that, as the defendants 2 and 4 were also necessary parties to the appeal, the lower appellate Court should have either dismissed the appeal or made them parties. KICHA REDDIAR v. REDDIAPPA REDDIAR, 6 M.L.T. 346.

(9)—Mortgage—Implied authority of one of the partners to create—Parties—Non-joinder—Time for redemption.—Where the nature of the business of a partnership included the buying of land and the raising of money on loan in order to carry on the business, an authority to one partner to mortgage partnership land may be implied. Where one of two mortgagees sued on a mortgage alleging that he had brought up the share of the other mortgagee, but the latter was not joined as a party, and there was no registered deed of assignment of his interest in the mortgage to the plaintiff: Held, that the formal defect in the suit might be remedied in appeal by permitting him to join as a plaintiff or permitting plaintiff to add him as a formal defendant. A Court ought not to allow a period of less than six weeks for redemption. ANA PENA NATER SHA v. ANAMALAY CHETTY, 10 Ind. Cas. 776.

(10)—Redemption-suit—What judgment should contain when redemption is allowed—Forms of decrees.—When redemption is allowed, the judgment should declare that the plaintiff will be entitled to redemption of the property sued for upon payment of such amount as the Court finds to be due in respect of the mortgage, and should name a date on or before which this sum must be paid into Court. The date should be fixed in the case of cultivated land so that the party who has sown the crop shall have the benefit of it. The judgment should then direct that if the plaintiff pays in the money on or before such date, the defendant shall after such date deliver over possession of the land to the plaintiff together with any documents of title relating to the land which the defendant may have in his custody or power, and shall further do all things necessary to place the plaintiff in the same position in regard to the land as he was in previous to the mortgage. This direction should be followed by an order that if the plaintiff makes default in paying in the money within the time allowed, then the plaintiff will thenceforth be absolutely debarred and foreclosed from all rights of redemption of the property and the suit will stand dismissed with costs. MAUNG MO GALE v. MA SA U, 1 L.B.R. 186. (1 L.P.R. 85, F.) [R., 3 L.B.R. 190.]

(11)—Suit for redemption—Decree to state the specific sum.—A decree in a suit for redemption should specifically state the amount for which the mortgage should be redeemed and ought not to leave it to be determined in execution. HASHIM KHAN v. SARDAR, 34 P.R. 1896.

(12)—Decree on puisne mortgage—Sale subject to prior mortgage—Whether decree-holder bound to redeem prior mortgage, before bringing properties to sale.—Where a second mortgagee has obtained a decree for sale subject to the prior mortgage. Held that the decree cannot be construed as compelling the decree-holder to redeem the prior mortgage, before taking steps to sell the property. ARAVAMUTHA IYENGAR v. KUMARASAMY CHETTY, 7 M.L.T. 230 = 5 Ind. Cas. 490. (25 M. 529, 24 M. 471, D.)

(13)—Suit for redemption—Denial of mortgage—Appellate Court—Point taken in appeal—Omission by vakil to argue.—The plaintiff sued to redeem the land on payment of the money that might be found due on the mortgage. The mortgagee denied the existence of the mortgage. Held that the lower Court was not justified in decreeing possession of the land free from any payment, merely because the defendant denied the mortgage. If a point really arises and is taken in appeal, the appellate Court will not be justified in holding that it has been abandoned, merely because the Vakil has not argued it. DADA valad VALLI v. BAVA SHA valad KASAN, 6 B.H.C.A. C. 9.

The question arose whether the appeal lay to the Chief Court or to the Divisional Judge. Held that the valuation of the suit by the plaintiff must govern the case for the purposes of jurisdiction and that the appeal lay to the Divisional Judge and not to the Chief Court, although the Lower Court had found that the defendant's allegation was true and that the property could be redeemed by payment of over Rs. 5,000. *RANJI KHAN v. not tendered—Costs, mortgagee entitled to, when exact amount not tendered—Transfer of Property Act, ss. 88 and 84—Appeal as to costs—Memorandum of appeal insufficiently stamped—Court Fees Act—Irregularity not affecting merits of case or jurisdiction—Disposal of appeal not sufficiently stamped—Civ. Pro. Code, s. 578.—The plaintiff (mortgagor) deposited in Court on the 19th September, 1899, under s. 83, Transfer of Property Act, the sum of Rs. 1,300, as the amount due on the mortgage. The defendant (mortgagee) refused to take the amount so deposited in full discharge of the amount due on the mortgage claiming Rs. 285 more. Accordingly, the plaintiff brought a suit for redemption on payment of Rs. 1,300. The Subordinate Judge found that Rs. 1,308-3-3 were due on the mortgage on the 19th September, 1899, and he decided that, as that amount had not been deposited, the plaintiff was liable to pay interest up to the date of the suit. The plaintiff appealed to the District Judge. He valued his appeal at Rs. 127-8-0 and paid a Court-fee on that amount. That amount was the difference between the amount deposited in Court and the amount found due by the Subordinate Judge and was interest. In his memorandum of appeal he objected to the payment of this amount, and to the order of the Subordinate Judge as to cost. The District Judge held that the defendant was more in the wrong than the plaintiff and should not get his costs and he awarded the plaintiff two-thirds of his cost. He also held that the first Court should not have awarded interest after the date on which payment was tendered. Held, that the plaintiff should have paid a Court-fee in respect of the first Court's order as to costs as well as in respect of his objection to pay Rs. 127-8 as interest, and that the memorandum of appeal was insufficiently stamped. But the decree of the District Judge could not be reversed on the ground that the memorandum of appeal was insufficiently stamped, as the irregularity did not affect his competency to try the appeal and therefore the provisions of s. 578, Civ. Pro. Code, were a bar to its reversal on that ground. As a general rule, a mortgagee is entitled to his costs in a foreclosure or a redemption suit and should not be deprived of them or made to pay the costs, unless he has been guilty of misconduct with reference to the suit or the subject of it. The mere circumstance that the defendant claimed more than what he was decided to be entitled to is not a ground for refusing him his costs and ordering him to pay plaintiff's costs. According to s. 84, Transfer of Property Act, interest on the principal sum ceases from the date of tender of "the amount remaining due on the mortgage" that is, of course, the exact amount. There is no provision in the section that, although the exact amount is not tendered, interest shall cease pro tanto. Held, therefore, that interest did not cease on the part of the mortgage-money due on the 19th September, 1899, which was covered by the tender and the defendant was entitled to the amount awarded by the Subordinate Judge. BALDEO PERSHAD v. INAYAT KHAN, 6 O. C. 135. [R., 12 O. C. 171.]

(35)—Redemption—Value of suit—Money claimed by defendant for improvements—Res-judicata—Second suit for redemption.—The mortgagor sued for redemption of two pieces of land and obtained a decree in 1885, to the effect that he could redeem the land in dispute in the present suit on payment of Rs. 49 and the other on payment of Re. 1. After obtaining the decree, the plaintiff paid a rupee and redeemed the other land, but took no steps to redeem the land in suit. In 1907, he filed a suit for redemption. In 1904, the mortgagee alleging himself as owner had brought a suit, stating dispossession by the mortgagor of a very small piece of a land, which was either a part of the land in suit or only adjunct thereto, and obtained a decree. The mortgagee pleaded that he had spent Rs. 800 on the land which he was entitled to recover from the mortgagor, that the suit was barred by limitation and res-judicata, and the original Court, (Munsiff, second class), had no jurisdiction to try the case. It was also contended on further appeal that the lower Appellate Court (District Judge) had no jurisdiction to hear the appeal. Held, that the previous suits for 1885 and 1904 did not operate to bar the present suit. (93 P.R. 1908, F.B. = 164 P.L.R. 1908, F.) (2) That the mortgagee was not entitled to recover anything on account of improvements. (3) That the lower Courts had jurisdiction to hear the case. MOHUN v. DIALU, 135 P.L.R. 1909 = 4 Ind. Cas. 939. (19 P.R. 1908 = 129 P.L.R. 1908, D.)

Where a certain property was mortgaged by way of conditional sale for a period of nine years, and it was agreed that the sale would be cancelled on payment of the amount of the consideration money in nine years. Held, that the agreement of the parties was that the loan was to be left outstanding for a period of nine years, and that, within that period, the mortgagee could not foreclose the mortgage, nor could the mortgagors redeem it. Held, further, that for a suit for redemption, the time began to run, under art. 148 of the second schedule to the Limitation Act, 1877, from the expiration of the term of nine years, and the mere fact that the plaintiffs alleged that the mortgage debt had been satisfied within that period did not affect the question of limitation. It is well settled law that a mortgage, as well as an out-and-out sale, by a trustee or a mortgagee, is a 'purchase' within the meaning of art. 134 of the second schedule to the Limitation Act, 1877. The said article is applicable only to cases in which a purchaser, whether his purchase be absolute or sub-modo, must obtain and hold possession for 12 years or upwards, in order that he may have that benefit of the article. Held, therefore, that a person, who bona fide purchases from a mortgagee in possession what is represented to him and what he believes to be the absolute interest, is entitled to the protection of art. 134 of the second schedule to the Limitation Act, 1877. (25 M. 99, 23 B. 614, D.; 9 A. 97, 14 M.I.A. 1, 16 B. 583, 20 A. 482, 22 B. 225, 24 M. 471, 27 B. 373, R. & F.) When 12 villages were mortgaged to a mortgagee, 5 out of which passed to other persons from whom they could not be redeemed, on account of the claim being barred against them, held, that the mortgagor was entitled to redeem the remaining 7 on payment of a proportionate amount of the mortgage money. S. 7, sub-s. IX of the Court Fees Act (VII of 1870), provides that, in a suit for redemption, the Court-fee should be valued at the principal amount secured by the mortgage, and the mere fact that the plaintiffs claimed, in the suit, payment of any sum, which might be found to be due to them on the taking of the accounts, did not alter the nature of the suit, so as to necessitate the payment of an additional fee on such sum. S. 373 of the Code of the Civil Procedure empowers a Court to allow a plaintiff to abandon a part of his claim, with liberty to bring a fresh suit in respect of the part so abandoned, if the Court is satisfied that the suit must fail by reason of some formal defect or that there is sufficient ground for permitting him to abandon part of his claim. This section was intended to meet, amongst other cases, a case in which there has been an improper valuation of the Court-fee stamp. HUSANI BEGAM v. COLLECTOR OF CAWNPORE, 4 A. (38)—Appeal — Jurisdiction.—The plaintiff brought a suit, in the Court of the Subordinate Judge, for redemption of four mortgages for sums amounting in the aggregate to less than Rs. 5,000. The defendant, in his written statement, pleaded that there were four more mortgages on the property. The aggregate of the mortgage-money according to him exceeded Rs. 5,000. Two of the mortgage deeds set up by the defendant were found by the Subordinate Judge to be invalid, and the actual amount of mortgage money, which the Subordinate Judge found to be rightly a charge on the property and on payment of which he decreed redemption, fell under Rs. 5,000. An appeal against the decree of the Subordinate Judge was filed by the defendant before the District Judge, who, on objection having been raised by the other side, returned the appeal for presentation to the Court of the Judicial Commissioner, Oudh. The defendant appealed against this order of the District Judge. Held, that the appeal was properly presented to the Court of District Judge. LALLU SAH v. (42)—Tender of mortgage-debt where no place for payment is specified—Interest, cessation of, only on proper tender.—Where a person seeks to redeem, he must make a proper tender of the mortgage-debt, and if no particular place for payment is specified under the contract, he must seek the creditor out. The reasons for the mortgagor not being able to make a proper tender of the redemption money have nothing to do with the mortgagee, the sole question being whether there was a proper tender or not. Where there was no proper tender, interest will continue to run as s. 84 applies only to a case of proper tender and interest does not stop from the date of the improper tender. MAHADAJI v. (46)—Suit for redemption—Proof of mortgage—Non-production of mortgage-deed—Secondary evidence.—In a suit for redemption, the plaintiffs did not produce the mortgage-deed or a certified copy of it, but alleged that the mortgage-deed was in the possession of the defendant, but took no steps under Chap. X, Civ. Pro. Code, so that secondary evidence may be admitted in regard to the facts and contents of the deed. They called witnesses to prove the mortgage, and produced a jamabandi of a certain year in which the names of their ancestors were recorded as holding the land. Held that the mortgagors had not proved the mortgage by legal evidence. SHEOBARAKH v. In appeal, it was contended that, as this evidence did not prove the terms of the mortgage, the plaintiff was not entitled to a decree for redemption. Held, that, in the absence of evidence, it could not be assumed that the mortgage was made for a period exceeding that alleged by the plaintiff. Held also, that, in the absence of evidence to the contrary, it could not be assumed that the interest, if any, was agreed to be paid, exceeded the profits of the property. PANCHAM TEWARI v. (57)—Cause of action set forth in plaint, onus on plaintiff to establish—Plaintiff in suit for redemption, bound to prove particular mortgage sued on.—Where the plaintiff in a suit on a mortgage fails to prove the particular mortgage alleged in his plaint and relied on by him, he cannot be given a decree in the suit in respect of a different mortgage or mortgages not included in the plaintiff's cause of action but found to subsist between the parties on admission or from the evidence in the case. So, where a plaintiff in a suit for redemption fails to establish the specific mortgage and the averments on which he has based his suit, he cannot claim to get a decree for redemption by reason of some other mortgage in respect of which the defendant happened to admit that he was the plaintiff's mortgagee. *SHEO PRASAD v. Pro. Code he should allege in his plaint facts showing that such right exists. A plaintiff in such a suit is not entitled to succeed merely because the defendant fails to prove the case he sets up, unless the defendant's pleadings show that, on failure to prove a particular defence, the plaintiff must be entitled. *ZINGARI SINGH v. (60)—Mortgage—Suit by a mortgagor to redeem from a co-mortgagor who has redeemed whole of mortgaged property—Burden of proof.—Where a mortgagor is suing his co-mortgagor for possession, upon payment of the proportionate amount of redemption money due of mortgaged property which has been redeemed by the said co-mortgagor, all he has got to prove is that a mortgage was made within 60 years by him and the defendant or those whom they represent, that the defendant or those represented by him redeemed the mortgage, and that the plaintiff is willing to pay his proportionate share of redemption money commensurate with his interest and reasonable interest from the date of redemption. *RANI v. It is a common practice in this country for the people to transfer their lands absolutely to their creditors with the reservation that the debtor may redeem the land at any time on repayment of the debt. (65)—Redemption of land mortgaged.—The respondent came upon the land in dispute by the license of the appellant, who caused M.T.T. to redeem it from mortgage, after which it was held jointly by the families of M.T.T. and the respondent. About 15 years subsequently according to the respondent, the appellant made over the land altogether to him and M.T.T. The respondent also raised the question of the appellant's title. The burden of proof being entirely on the respondent and no limitation being established, in the absence of proof of adverse possession, the respondent was held to be estopped from denying the appellant's title, under s. 116, Evidence Act, and the presumption was that he continued to hold under him. *U THA PE v. (67)—Claim to land alleged to be mortgaged—Burden of proof.—When an ancient mortgage is set up, it must be satisfactorily proved against persons being in possession who deny its existence. In considering the probabilities and improbabilities of the case, it must be borne in mind that we have here a family which has been in possession of land for a period that cannot have been less probably than a hundred years and may have been a great deal more, and that this is an attempt to deprive them of it on the strength of a flimsy piece of parabaik, on which a document could be manufactured in a few minutes and of the statements of a witness who had no business with the transaction he speaks to and who cannot give a satisfactory account of it. Even without the numerous inconsistencies, improbabilities and difficulties adverted to above, it would be a rash thing to place confidence in evidence of that kind. If people really have a claim to land in the hands of others and yet allow nearly 40 years to go by without asserting it in any way or allowing any one to know anything about it, they cannot expect their claim to command belief when they at last put it forward, unless they are able to adduce trustworthy and unambiguous evidence in its support. The value of land generally has been greatly enhanced of late years, and there is naturally strong temptation to assert claims to it, good and bad. The present claim seems to me to be of the latter character, and to fail for want of credible evidence. MA HNIN YWET v. MA SAING, U.B.R. 1892—1896, Vol. II, 565.

The first mortgagee can neither foreclose nor be redeemed by the original mortgagor without taking into account intermediate encumbrances. If the intermediate encumbrancers, who are parties to the suit, do not choose to exercise their rights to redeem, each in turn would be foreclosed before the first mortgagee could come into touch with the mortgagor. A decree nisi in itself from its nature is provisional and requires the party seeking to have it enforced to move it absolute. Whether the decree be procured by the mortgagor or the mortgagee, it is in the option of either party to enforce it and have it converted into a decree absolute but until one or the other party does so, it never can be a final decision or constitute res judicata. (7 B. 467, Commented on.) Where a decree is couched in general terms and a question of res judicata arises upon it, the Court may look at all the intrinsic evidence before it and the materials of the case as a whole, even going so far as statements in the depositions of witnesses. (24 C. 504, F.) Where a document, which as a whole requires registration but is not registered, contains separable parts which do not require registration, those parts may be admitted in evidence to prove transactions which ex hypothesi do not affect immoveable property of the value of Rs. 100 or upwards. An agreement whereby the mortgagee in possession agrees with his mortgagor to carry on the management of a mill (the property mortgaged) and to finance it in consideration of his getting a fixed remuneration, is not compulsorily registrable. As between a Company and persons having no notice to the contrary, directors de facto are as good as directors de jure. Outsiders dealing with a Company are bound to acquaint themselves with its external position, which can usually be gathered from the papers of their constitution, the Memorandum of Association and the Articles of Association, but are not bound to inquire into and satisfy themselves upon all the details of the Company's in-door management. This principle requires modification where the persons sought to be affected with notice are themselves within the Company. An agreement, whereby a mortgagee in possession agrees with his mortgagor to charge for his personal services, valid, if it does not constitute a clog on the equity of redemption. The maxim "once a mortgage always a mortgage" means that there can be no additional contract so as to preclude the mortgagor from redeeming. It does not include previous or past agreements independent of the mortgage, unless they are unconscionable or clearly obtained by undue influence or the abuse of fiduciary relations. The payment of fair remuneration to the manager of a large concern like a spinning and weaving mill, to keep it in a high state of efficiency, is not a clog on the equity of redemption; and in principle it makes no difference whether the manager is the mortgagee in possession or a third party. The acquiescence which will deprive a man of his legal rights must amount to fraud. A man is not to be deprived of his legal rights, unless he has acted in such a way as to make it fraudulent for him to set up those rights. The elements or requisites necessary to constitute the fraud are: (1) the plaintiff must have made a mistake as to his legal rights; (2) he must have expended some money or must have done some act on the faith of such mistaken belief; (3) the defendant, the possessor of the legal right, must know of the existence of his own right which is inconsistent with the right claimed by the plaintiff; (4) the defendant must know of the plaintiff's mistaken belief on his rights; and (5) the defendant must have encouraged the plaintiff in his expenditure of money or in the other acts which he has done, either directly or by abstaining from asserting his legal right. All these elements must exist together. THE HOPE MILLS LIMITED v. SIR COWASJI J. READYMONEY, BART, 13 Bom. L. R. 162 = 10 Ind. Cas. 749.

In cases of legal or equitable mortgage, a tender properly made and improperly rejected, is not equivalent to payment, and neither extinguishes the mortgage-debt, nor determines the mortgagee's property in the security. A proper tender will stop the running of interest, if the mortgagor keeps the money ready to pay over to the mortgagee, and does not afterwards make any profit out of it. Mortgage—continued.—9.—Redemption—continued.

The essence of foreclosure and redemption suits is, that, in such suits, each party is entitled to enforce his rights; a plaintiff claiming foreclosure is bound, upon the accounts being taken, if the balance is against him, to pay that balance; on the other hand, a plaintiff claiming redemption, must submit to a decree for sale or foreclosure, if he makes default in payment; and to avoid a multiplicity of suits, it is necessary, under decrees for foreclosure or redemption that the accounts between the parties should be settled and discharged; if the balance is against any party, he must pay it (9 C. 377, 16 I. A. 107, 16 C. 682, R.) In a redemption suit, the mortgagor is entitled, as in a question with his mortgagee, to have a general account taken of what is due upon the mortgage and the fact that the mortgagor then declared, in his pleadings, his intention of bringing a separate action for recovery of the profits received by the mortgagee after refusal of his tender, does not entitle him to maintain an action for damages for wrongful detention of property after the tender, which would have been wholly unnecessary, if the claim urged in the latter action had been put forward and given effect to in that litigation. But a distinction ought to be drawn between the claim for mesne profits between the date of tender or deposit and the date of the decree in the redemption suit, and the mesne profits from the latter date to the date of delivery of possession. The claim for mesne profits between the date of tender or deposit and the date of the decree must be included in the suit for redemption; but the claim for mesne profits for the period, which intervened between the date fixed for redemption in the decree and the date of actual delivery of possession, may be enforced in a separate suit. redemption not maintainable by mortgagor.—When once a decree for redemption has been obtained by the mortgagor, he is debarred from again suing to redeem the same mortgage. It is the intention of the Legislature, as expressed in ss. 92, 93 of the Transfer of Property Act that there should be one suit only for redemption. The mere fact that a mortgagor has failed to comply with his decree for redemption within time cannot give him a fresh cause of action. Allowance of a second suit for redemption would therefore be going contrary to the provision in s. 13 of the Civ. Pro. Code and also to the principle of s. 244 of the Code. DAVID HAY v. (74)—Lis pendens—Revenue sale under ss. 13, 54, Act XI of 1859—Purchase by auction-purchaser pending suit to enforce mortgage on property.—The principle of lis pendens applies to a case where a person purchases a share of an estate sold for arrears at a revenue sale under ss. 13 and 54, Act XI of 1859, held at a time when execution proceedings in a suit to enforce an existing mortgage on the property were pending. So the auction-purchaser will lose his equity of redemption, if he does not redeem within the time allowed by the mortgage-decree to the original decree-holder. Quare.—Whether if the mortgagee, contesting the validity of the revenue sale, delays its confirmation, any question of equity in auction-purchaser's favour arises. (81)—Redemption of prior mortgage by second mortgagee, time fixed by decree for, whether extended by mere fact of appeal from decree.—A decree for possession was passed in favour of the appellants, purchasers in execution of a decree for sale on a prior mortgage, subject to the condition that the defendant-respondent, a second mortgagee, in possession, was to have the option to redeem the prior mortgage and retain the property by payment of the necessary amount within six months from the date of the decree. On default of such payment, the decree-holders applied for execution and were held entitled to delivery of possession of the property. The defendant, second mortgagee, not having exercised his right of redemption, within six months fixed by the decree granting it, his right to redeem became barred, and the time within which he should redeem could not be computed as from the date of the decree of the High Court on appeal, that decree not having extended the time originally fixed for the purpose. (86)—Decree for redemption, specify time for payment of money.—The question of foreclosure must necessarily be determined in the suit for redemption, the decree in which ought to fix the time within which the money for the redemption is payable. The proper course for a mortgagee, on failure of the mortgagor to pay the redemption money is not the institution of a suit for possession of the land, but an application to the Court to pass a final foreclosure-decree in the suit and, so long as such a decree is not passed, he has no right to the land. HLA NYO v. from a trespasser, even though the land may have been hypothecated as security for a debt payable to the trespasser. The mere fact of the person who takes possession being also the creditor, does not convert his possession into that of a mortgagee. A hypothecated some land to D, in 1859. In 1863, D sued A, and the Court, wrongly treating the deed as a deed of conditional sale, gave D, a decree, and after one year D was put in possession as owner. In a suit for redemption of the land after more than 40 years—Held, that as D was not entitled to possession under the deed and as he illegally got possession as an owner, his possession was not that of a mortgagee but as a trespasser, and as such he could not be ejected after he had been in possession for over 12 years. JIWA KHAN v. Such an application by the mortgagor, on payment of the amount due, is not one in execution of a decree, to which the period of limitation prescribed by art. 179 of the Limitation Act is applicable. Such applications should not be in the form prescribed in s. 235, Civ. Pro. Code. And they should be filed on the record of the suit, not in execution proceedings. MAUNG PE v. MA BAW, 4 L.B.R. 83. The provision in s. 10 of Regulation XV of 1793 that a mortgage shall be deemed to be cancelled and redeemed does not mean redeemed in the full sense of the word. On the passing of the Limitation Act of 1859, the mortgagor's right of redemption became subject to s. 1 (15) of that Act, and a suit for redemption of a mortgage made before the passing of that Act could be brought at any time within sixty years of the mortgage, and it is not barred by limitation within the meaning of cl. 1 (12). (7 A.L.J. 963, F.) A mortgage was made while Regulation XV of 1793 was in force. One of the terms was that the mortgagee will remain in possession in lieu of interest and other charges, and there will be no accounting on either side. Held that the mortgage being subject to Regulation XV of 1793, the mortgagor was entitled to an account of profits. HABIB-ULLAH v. The deed provided that, at any time within seven years (andar miad sat baras) when the vendors paid the vendee, the latter would reconvey. The present suit for redemption was brought on 22nd January, 1907. The lower Court held that the transaction amounted to a mortgage by way of conditional sale, and the suit was not barred, as time ran from the expiry of 7 years after 1845 and not from the date of execution. On appeal, held, that time did not begin to run until after 7 years from the execution, as it was not obligatory upon the mortgagors to pay the money before them. KALKA PRASAD v. In the meantime, the plaintiff obtained a decree for redemption and redeemed the mortgage paying the mortgagee Rs. 134-9-0. The defendant in the present suit was the reversionary heir of B. The widow having died he sued R to set aside the sale of the land by the widow and to recover possession of the land, and obtained a decree on the 19th February, 1900. On the 18th September, 1900, the plaintiff sued the defendant for recovery of Rs. 157-7-0 as charged on the land, the amount consisting of Rs. 134-9-0, paid to redeem the mortgage and Rs. 16-14-0, costs of the suit for redemption. The first Court decreed Rs. 134-9-0 to be realized by the sale of the land. The Court of first appeal modified the first Court's decree and passed a decree against the defendant personally for that amount. Held, that unless the plaintiff's case fell under s. 69 or s. 70, Contract Act, he was not entitled to any decree against the defendant. His case did not fall under s. 69, because the defendant was not bound by law to pay the mortgage-debt, and even if it fell under that section, the claim would be barred under art. 61, Limitation Act,

The mortgage was with possession, with a covenant that, if, after a particular period, the mortgage-money was paid, the property would be redeemed. In a suit brought by the son of the mortgagor, his right to one-third of the property mortgaged was established, and the mortgagee was compelled to pay away to him one-third of the profits of the mortgaged property. Where a mortgage-deed provides that, if, on account of any partition, any portion of the mortgaged land is taken from the possession of the mortgagee, other land of the same value will be given to the mortgagee, or the annual loss sustained by the mortgagee will be made good to him, the mortgagee is entitled to compensation for the loss suffered by him by the substitution of inferior land in partition. AJUDHIA SINGH v. L.R. 38, 6 Bom. L.R. 630, 11 Bom. L.R. 1145 = 4 Ind. Cas. 264.] In England, the established rule is that when mortgaged property is allowed to be redeemed after the expiry of the time fixed, the mortgagee will be allowed for all repairs necessary for the support of the property, but not for general improvements made without the acquiescence and consent of the mortgagor, which enhance the value of the estate, especially, if they are of such a nature as may cripple the right or power of redemption. But the decisions in India have been in contravention of this rule, and to apply this rule at once and without modification to cases in which mortgagees (relying on the law as understood to be settled by the late Sadr decisions) have laid out considerable sums in improvements on mortgaged property, would obviously not be equitable. Ultimately, however, the English rule is that which should prevail; but until sufficient time has been allowed for the law, as laid down in the present decision, to become generally known, the determination of each case must be left, in a great measure, to depend on an equitable consideration of all the circumstances attending it. The rule was however applied to the present case in view of the facts that the sum claimed for improvements was very small, and the time that had elapsed since the fixed period for payment was very inconsiderable. RAMJI TUKARAM v. CHINTO SAKHARAM, 1 B.H.C. 199.

(104)—Malabar Kanom—Redemption—Compensation for improvements—Deterioration before actual redemption.—Where a decree for redemption of a Malabar kanom mortgage fixed a certain sum as the ascertained value of the improvements, the mortgagor cannot be asked to pay the entire sum decreed, when the value of the improvements has deteriorated within the period of six months provided for redemption in the decree. Similarly, the mortgagee will also be entitled to any excess of value which the improvements might be worth at the time of the actual redemption. It is not correct to say that the property in the improvements not yet paid for vests in the mortgagor, and there is no authority for holding that the kanomdar cannot remove trees planted by him. KRISHNA PATER v. SRINIVASA PATER, 20 M. 124. [R., 24 M. 47, F.B.]

(105)—Suit for redemption—Necessary repairs effected by mortgagee—Re-imbursement by mortgagor.—As a mortgagee in possession of the property is bound to keep it in necessary repair, he must be re-imbursed by the mortgagor at the time of redemption for sums spent by him on such repairs. BHAG v. GHASITA MAL, 55 P.R. 1890. [R., 23 P.R. 1909 = 197 P.L.R. 1908.]

(106)—Unnecessary improvements by mortgagee—Compensation—No consent of mortgagor.—A mortgagee will not be entitled to compensation for improvements made unnecessarily for his own benefit, without the consent of the mortgagor, though they might bring in a profit. SHER SINGH v. NIHALU, 67 P.R. 1896. (67 P. R. 1893, R.)

(107)—Improvements to keep up the security—Right to recoup—A mortgagee has a right to keep up his security from deteriorating in value and for that purpose to spend anything upon it. So, he would be entitled to recoup from the mortgagor the amount prudently and necessarily spent by him on the property and also to an extent to which the mortgagor would derive benefit therefrom. BELI RAM v. CHUHA RAM, 18 P.R. 1898.

(108)—Claim to compensation for improvements before allowing redemption in absence of express condition to that effect in mortgage deed—Necessity of proving established and acknowledged custom controlling contract of mortgage accordingly—Madras mortgages.—As a matter of equity, however, it does not appear why mortgagors should be required to pay compensation for trees which they did not want, which were not needed for the preservation or maintenance in proper condition of the property in any way, and which were put down without any reference to their wishes, while the mortgagee was enjoying the sole benefit of the land and everything it could produce. His object was of course to make the land as profitable to himself as possible, and if he sought this object without coming to an understanding with the mortgagors to whom he was liable to restore the land after a limited term, he took the risk on himself. MAUNG O v. MAUNG SAN KO, U.B.R. 1892—1896, Vol. II, 548. [R., U.B.R. 1897—1901, Vol. II, 213, 286.]

(109)—Redemption suit—Accounting, principle of—Katkina lease by mortgagee—After the execution of a mortgage, the mortgagees executed a katkina lease in favour of the mortgagors. The conditions of katkina were that the plaintiffs, the mortgagors, would remain in possession, pay Government revenue, pay also to themselves Rs 265 as huq-ajiri, and pay to the mortgagees Rs. 375 as katkina rent which would include the interest, viz., Rs. 300 payable on the principal amount. The plaintiffs remained in possession, of the land for four years without paying anything as katkina rent, after which the mortgagees took possession. The plaintiffs then brought a suit for redemption. Held, that, in taking the account, the mortgagees were entitled to interest Rs. 300 per annum, with interest at the rate of 12 per cent. per annum, and not the profit Rs. 75, for the period of four years when the plaintiffs were in possession, but the plaintiffs would get

Rs. 265 as huq-ajiri with annual interest for the period they were out of possession. Rs. 265 should be deducted annually, in the first instance, from the sum of Rs. 1,200 with such interest as might accumulate on it at the rate of 12 per cent. per annum; when the sum of Rs. 1,200 was paid off by deductions of Rs. 265 per annum, this sum to be deducted annually from the principal amount and interest calculated at the bond rate. NANDU SAHU v. (110)—Suit for redemption—Making up of accounts necessary for, before passing decree.—In a suit for redemption, a decree could not be passed until the accounts had been made up, for, it could not until that time be ascertained whether or not the mortgage had been paid off by the usufruct and whether or not the mortgagors were entitled to mesne profits. MUTTRA DOSS v. MAGH SINGH, 2 N.W.P. 207.

(111)—Suit to redeem one particular mortgage—Decree for redemption of later mortgage—Cause of action different—Prayer for "any other relief"—Construction of document—Entry settling accounts and recording amount due under mortgage.—In a suit for redemption, it is imperative that plaintiff should say, in the event of there being more mortgages than one, which mortgage he is seeking to redeem. When a plaintiff sued to redeem a certain mortgage, that particular mortgage is his cause of action, and to shift the attack to a later mortgage is to change the suit into one based on a different cause of action. A prayer "for any other relief" may well cover any other relief arising out of the same cause of action, but does not cover a relief arising from a different cause of action. An entry relating to a mortgage already existing, in which accounts are settled and a sum is entered as the amount due under the mortgage, does not constitute a new mortgage. KARAM CHAND v. SULTAN, 72 P.W.R. 1912 = 92 P.L.R. 1912 = 13 Ind. Cas. 650.

(112)—Usufructuary mortgage—Account.—In a suit for redemption of land brought on the allegation that the principal and interest of the mortgage consideration had been recovered from the usufruct and a surplus had been realised in excess thereof, the revenue payments made by the mortgagee should, under the terms of the mortgage, be considered as part of the original mortgage-money repayable before redemption of the land could be claimed. The account should therefore show on the one side the mortgage money and the payment of the revenue with interest thereon, and on the other the mesne profits realised by the mortgagee. CHITBAHAL RAI v. JAYA RAI, A.W.N. 1881, 66.

of the appellant, on the ground that she, as an unmarried daughter, had obtained the sole right to the property of her father to the exclusion of her married sister, to whom along with herself, when a minor, the mortgaged property had, in a previous litigation between the parties interested in the mortgage, been surrendered by the order of the Court, which had held the mortgage debt to have been satisfied. In the present suit D was made a pro forma defendant. P having died during the pendency of the suit, D applied to have her name removed from the array of defendants and substituted as plaintiff. Held, that the right claimed by P being a personal right and adverse to that of her sister D, the suit abated after P's death, and D could not get her name substituted as plaintiff and continue the suit. BALAK PURI v. (115)—Interest beyond principal—Deposit of amount in Court—Interest for year of grace—Deposit—Foreclosure proceedings—Suit—Review—Subsequent ruling being different.—The deposit in Court of the principal sum and of a sum equal to the principal by way of interest was sufficient under the law applicable to the case; the mortgagee could only claim so much. In such a case, it was not necessary to add further interest for the time or any portion of the time of the year of grace. The law prohibited the recovery of interest beyond the principal, and no sum could legally accrue due as interest during the year of grace under such circumstances. The foreclosure proceedings which lead to the deposit of the mortgage amount in Court are not like a suit. A review of an old judgment of some years' standing, on the ground of subsequent decisions laying down a different rule, cannot be admitted. SHEOBURT v. DHAREE THAKOOR, 2 Agra, 394.

(116)—Mortgage by conditional sale—Interest—Charge.—Where, in a deed of conditional sale, it was stipulated that the mortgagee should have no claim to interest, the latter could not claim it in consequence of not having been put in possession under the contract, so as to make it a charge on the property and the payment of it a condition precedent to redemption. ALLAH BAKHSI v. (117)—Transfer of Property Act, (IV of 1882), ss. 83, 84—Deposit of entire mortgage money, cessation of interest on—Right of mortgagee to crops sown by him.—On a previous deposit, made by the mortgagor, having been found inadequate, he made a further deposit on a subsequent date, and the whole amount was then found to be all that was due on the mortgage on that date. The Courts below had rightly disallowed interest to the defendant only after the plaintiff-mortgagor had, with due knowledge of the defendant, deposited the whole money due to him on the mortgage. Under s. 84 of the Transfer of Property Act, when a mortgagor has duly made deposit, in accordance with s. 83, of all that is due on the mortgage, the interest on the mortgage money is to cease. The decree given to plaintiff, in this case, should not have been rendered by the Courts subject to the condition that the defendant was not to be evicted till the crops he had sown were cut. The rule, in such cases, as enunciated in the last paragraph of s. 51 of the Transfer of Property Act, creates no bar to eviction in such a case, but only lays down that the transferee is entitled to the crops sown by him, and to free ingress and egress to gather and carry them. DEO DAT v. RAM AUTAR, 8 A. 502 = A.W.N. 1886, 149.

(118)—Mortgage—Decree for possession obtained by mortgagee—Omission for three years to execute decree—Redemption—Interest for the three years not allowed to mortgagee.—A mortgagee obtained a final decree for possession on the 16th January, 1880. The decree-holder did nothing further until the 18th April 1883, when he obtained possession. In 1887, the mortgagor brought a suit for redemption, and the Court of first instance gave him a decree conditioned on his paying the principal money with interest calculated up to April, 1883. This decree was modified by the lower Appellate Court. Held that the mortgagee was not entitled to interest for the period between the date of the decree in January, 1880, and the date when the mortgagee obtained possession in April, 1883, the claim to such interest not being based on the terms of the mortgage, and the mortgagee's want of possession being due to his own omission to take it by executing his decree. *BANSIDHAR v. receive the net profits in lieu of interest and during the time of his possession, the interest and profits shall be deemed equal," (11) "if the profits do not cover the amount of interest, we the mortgagors will make good the deficiency from our pockets"—the deficiency, if not so made good, being made payable "with interest at the rate mentioned above at the time of redemption." The mortgagee took possession under the mortgage. Held, that, although cl. (6) standing by itself might be construed as constituting an ordinary usufructuary mortgage, its prima facie meaning was qualified by cl. (11). The two clauses should be read together and the latter clause should not be rejected on the ground that it was inconsistent with the former. They both had the effect of making the principal money payable with compound interest, and, on the proper construction of the deed, the mortgagor was liable to pay compound interest on the amount of unpaid interest, which he had stipulated to pay under cl. (11). THAKUR JAWAHIR SING v. SOMESHWAR DATT AND OTHERS, 10 O.C. 92 = 10 C.W.N. 266 = 1 M.L.T. 66 = 3 C.L.J. 354 = 28 A. 225, P.C. = 33 I.A. 42.

That whatever profits may be left after payment of the Government Revenue, etc., will be appropriated by the mortgagee in lieu of the interest. That whenever I pay off the principal sum and the remaining interest, the mortgaged property will be redeemed." The mortgagee did not take possession until several years after the first default. Held, that the mortgagee was entitled to get interest for the period he was out of possession. *RAM DIN v. declaration of their right to receive rent from A and B, their under-tenants, who had given them a kabuleut. The defendant, alleging that these two persons were his tenants, had sued them for rent in the Collector's Court under the provisions of Act X of 1859. The plaintiffs had intervened, and the Deputy Collector had made a decree in favour of the present defendant. Hence the present suit. The defendant's case was that within the plaintiff's talook there was a jumma formerly held by C who had sold it to defendant and after the purchase of these interests, the defendant settled A and B in the dwelling house which had formerly belonged to C, paying a certain rent. Held that the real question was whether the jote jumma formerly held by C and his predecessors, which had since passed into the hands of the defendant by purchase, was a jumma which gave the defendant a right to possession of the land as against the plaintiffs, who had re-entered after the decree for redemption. MOULVIE AHMED ALI v. fields and a house were mortgaged to plaintiff's uncle V, by defendants 2, 3 and 4, for Rs. 2,000. In execution of a money-decree obtained by V against these defendants the property was sold subject to the mortgage. V purchased the three fields for Rs. 340 and defendant 1 the house for Rs. 300. At the time of the sale the mortgage debt amounted to Rs. 3,100, but at the date of the institution of suit it had increased to Rs. 4,000, by accretion of interest. The plaintiff, having succeeded to his uncle V's rights after his death, brought this suit against defendant 1 and defendants 2 to 4 to recover the proportionate share of the mortgage debt which fell on the house. The fields were valued at Rs. 3,600 and the house at Rs. 340. Defendant 1 contended that as the value of the fields purchased by the plaintiff was more than sufficient to recover the mortgage debt the whole debt had been extinguished, and the house should be freed from liability to discharge any portion of it; and that the apportionment ought to be made of the balance due under the mortgage bond, not on the date of the present suit but on the date of the Court sale at which the plaintiff's properties were sold. The Court of first instance gave the plaintiff a decree for Rs. 345, but on appeal the District Court found that, as at the time of the auction sale the amount of the mortgage debt was Rs. 3,100, the plaintiff had been repaid and was not entitled to contribution from defendant 1:—Held, by Jenkins, C.J. and Candy, J., Fulton, J., dissentiente (reversing the decree of the lower Appellate Court) that the plaintiff was entitled to get Rs. 345 from defendant 1 as each purchaser in the Court sale bought subject to a proportionate share of the burden and must discharge it. Per Fulton, J.—Where the mortgagee instead of enforcing his mortgage and bringing the property to sale free of encumbrance (when such course is open to him as it was in the present case) brings to sale the equity of redemption in part of the mortgaged property and buys it himself, an equity arises which entitles the mortgagor, or the person who purchases the right, title and the interest of the mortgagor, to require the satisfaction of the debt first out of the property bought by the mortgagee, because, otherwise, the action of the mortgagee in causing the sale subject to mortgage must almost necessarily secure to him an undue profit at the expense of the mortgagor. FAKIRAYA v. SHEIKH MUSI RAZA*, 2 O.C. 196.

(138)—Stipulation against transfer in mortgage deed—Subsequent sale of mortgaged property—Suit by purchaser for possession after second mortgage to original mortgagees—Purchaser whether could claim to pay mortgage debt by instalments.—K who had mortgaged two villages to the defendants sold them along with others subsequently to the plaintiffs in breach of a condition in the mortgage bond prohibiting any transfer of the property. It was stipulated in the sale deed that the purchasers should pay the mortgage debt due to the original mortgagees by instalments. The mortgagor two months later mortgaged 27 villages (including the two villages already mortgaged and sold) to the original mortgagees. Held, in a suit by the purchasers for possession of the two villages and for cancelment of the later mortgage-deed, that they would be entitled to possession of the said villages only after payment of the mortgage debt in full to the original mortgagees, and that the ruling in Agra (F.B.) 7, dated 4th August 1866 (that a stipulation in a mortgage deed prohibitory of the transfer of the mortgaged property does not prohibit a transfer thereof in good faith for the purpose of discharging the original mortgage-debt), is applicable to cases in which the debt is at once discharged by means of the transfer, and does not sanction a gradual discharge of it by instalments, such as was provided by the sale-deed in question. MAHOMED ZAKOOLLAH v. BANEE PERSHAD, 1 N.W.P. 135.

There can be no division in liability in respect of money advanced on a mortgage. MUSSAMAT MUJEEDOO-NISSA v. SYUD DILDAR HOSSEIN, 14 W.R. 216.

(140)—Mortgage constituting charge on entire estate—Entire debt payable before redemption of any part.—The decree in this case showed that the mortgage was a charge upon the whole estate, and consequently, no person could claim the right to take away a portion of the estate from the mortgagee unless upon payment of the whole amount due upon the mortgage, because, before the mortgage could be removed from any part of the estate, the whole mortgage-debt must be paid off. BOODHOO SINGH v. KISHEN CHUNDER GHOSE, 3 W.R. Mis. 4.

(141)—Transfer of Property Act, 1882, s. 60—Redemption of a mortgage cannot be split up and effected piecemeal.—It is an ordinary rule which must be observed and is the same as that laid down in s. 60 of the Transfer of Property Act, that the redemption of a mortgage cannot be split up and effected piecemeal, because for one thing at least, the mortgagee is entitled to retain the entire security for the entire debt. Otherwise he might be seriously prejudiced. Moreover, any other system would be apt to lead to the greatest confusion. MAUNG TUN U v. MA PE, U.B.R. 1897—1901, Vol. II, 505. [R., U.B.R. 1897—1901, Vol. II, 518.]

(142)—Mortgagee acquiring right of redemption in a portion of the property—Procedure.—Where a mortgagee in possession of properties belonging to co-owners, acquires a right to a share in the property, no suit will lie to redeem the whole or part of the property, by payment of the whole or part of the debt, and the only remedy is by a suit for partition to ascertain the respective shares, at the instance of the mortgagor. MAMU v. KUTTU, 6 M. 61. [Diss., 15 B. 24, 21 B. 619; F., 20 M. 295; R., 10 B. 648; D., 2 P.R. 1904=48 P.L.R. 1904.]

(143)—Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), s. 60—Suit for partial redemption not maintainable.—As has been expressly enacted in the last clause of s. 60 of the Transfer of Property Act, a purchaser of a portion of the mortgaged property cannot be permitted to redeem that portion alone without redeeming the rest. There is nothing in s. 82 of the Act which can be relied on as permitting the redemption of a mortgage piecemeal. KUPPUSAMI CHETTI v. PAPATHI AMMAL, 21 M. 369=8 M.L.J. 6.

(144)—Mortgage—Purchase by one of several mortgagees of a share of the mortgaged property—Redemption by one of several mortgagors of his share.—Where one of several mortgagees has purchased the share of one of the mortgagors in the mortgaged property, this of itself cannot entitle another of the mortgagors to claim to redeem his share in such property. *MAHTAB RAI v. Mortgage—continued.—9.—Redemption—continued.

(145)—Joint mortgage—Purchase of a share by a mortgagee—Redemption of share.—The right of one mortgagor to redeem the whole of a joint mortgage rests upon its joint character; and when that is broken by the mortgagee purchasing the share of one of the mortgagors, the right ceases, and one of the mortgagors cannot redeem more than his share against the will of the mortgagee. KURAY MAL v. PURAN MAL, 2 A. 565. (13 M.I.A. 404, F.) [F., 28 A. 155=A.W.N. 1905, 225, 29 A. 262=A.W.N. 1907, 49=4 A.L.J. 74; R., 21 B. 619, 20 A. 23, F.B.=A.W.N. 1897, 163, 6 O.C. 223, 6 O.C. 279; D., 5 A. 276=A.W.N. 1883, 31.]

(146)—Mortgage with possession to co-owner—Right of some co-owners to redeem without partition.—Where several co-owners of undivided property mortgage their shares with possession to another co-owner, a few of these mortgagors cannot claim to redeem the whole property mortgaged, unless there has been a partition of such mortgaged property among the several co-owners. THILLAI CHETTI v. RAMANATHA AYYAN, 20 M. 295. (6 M. 61, F.; 10 B. 648, D.) [Not F., 2 P.R. 1904=48 P.L.R. 1904.]

(147)—Mortgage with possession—Stipulation for discharge of mortgage-debt out of the usufruct, redemption not possible before such discharge.—Where an instrument of mortgage provides for the mortgagee paying himself the debt from the rents and profits of the estate and for the surrender of possession when the debt is so paid off, the event, on which the obligation to surrender has been made to depend, is the realization of the principal money and interest by the mortgagees themselves from the rents and profits of the mortgaged property and the possession by the mortgagees, until that event occurs, is of the essence of the transaction. The transaction is a vivum vadium in which no time is fixed for redemption and the mortgage could be redeemed only after the discharge of its amount by means of the rents and profits from the property, so that the mortgagees could claim to retain possession until the discharge of their debt in the above manner. TIRUGNANA SAMBANDHA PANDARA SANNADHI v. NALLATAMBI, 16 M. 486=2 M.L.J. 272. [R., 20 B. 677, 11 C.P.L.R. 103, 23 M. 33; D., 16 C.P.L.R. 59.]

(148)—Right of redemption—Insufficient tender of mortgage-money.—Where, by the terms of the mortgage, the mortgagor was, on payment of the whole of the principal and interest, entitled to redeem at the end of the second year of the mortgage, he is not entitled to a decree for redemption at the end of that year on showing merely that the principal money was deposited in Court in the first half of the second year and that the mortgagee had, before the redemption suit, obtained decrees for the interest due for both the years. Under such circumstances, there is no deposit or tender at the proper time of the mortgage money including the interest due. HEWANCHAL SINGH v. JAWAHIR SINGH, 16 C. 307, P.C. [R., 20 A. 401, 5 O.C. 127.]

(149)—Mortgage—Redemption—Suit in ejectment—Equities.—Plaintiff's ancestor purchased certain property at a sale held in execution of a decree obtained by T in 1848 against R and M, and got possession. In 1861, A obtained a decree against the representatives of R in a suit brought against them on a mortgage-bond, the decree not directing the sale of the mortgaged property. A took out execution, bought the right, title and interest of his judgment-debtors in the property brought to sale, which were purchased by the defendants, who having paid the consideration, got possession. Plaintiff subsequently sued the defendants in ejectment, alleging that the latter obtained no title to the property under their purchase. Held that defendants were entitled to stand in A's shoes as an encumbrancer so far as their money had gone to pay off the charge which A had on the land, and that, the suit being in its nature a redemption suit, the plaintiff could not recover the property unless he paid the defendants the amount found due to them on taking accounts. BABOO RAMESSUR PERSHAD NARAIN SINGH v. DOOLEE CHAND, 19 W.R. 422.

(150)—Mortgage—Joint mortgagors—Redemption.—The mortgagors in a joint mortgage transaction are jointly liable to the mortgagees for the whole of the mortgage-debt. Some out of the number cannot maintain a suit for redeeming their own shares of the mortgaged property by payment of a proportional amount of the mortgage-debt. SALIG RAM SINGH v. BARUN RAI, 4 N.W.P. 92.

(151)—Mortgage—Purchase of equity of redemption of part by stranger—Remaining part purchased by one of several mortgagees—Suit for redemption of part whether maintainable.—Where one of several mortgagees purchases the equity of redemption as to a part of the property jointly mortgaged, the purchaser of another part is not thereby entitled to redeem the part purchased by him, unless he discharges the whole mortgage-debt. SOBHA SAH v. INDERJEET, 5 N.W.P. 148. [D., 5 A. 276=A.W.N. 1883, 31; F., 6 A.L.J. 387=31 A. 335.]

on payment of the proportionate mortgage-amount. It appeared that a suit of the father of the present plaintiff for redemption, in 1866 was dismissed under s. 114, Act VIII of 1859=s. 103 of Act XIV of 1882. In 1899, the present plaintiffs and the defendant sued jointly for redemption, with the result that there was finally a decree for redemption of the whole mortgage, in favour of defendant alone. The defendant redeemed the whole mortgage. In the present suit, which was brought by the plaintiffs as against defendant for redemption of their shares of the mortgaged property, the lower Appellate Court found that the plaintiffs were entitled to a decree for redemption of half of the mortgage, on the ground that the defendant was a trustee for the plaintiffs. Held, that the dismissal of the suit in 1866, had given the original mortgagee an absolute title, (15 C. 422, P.C., F.) that the defendant, who, by the redemption of the whole mortgage, stood in the shoes of the mortgagee, was entitled as against his co-mortgagors (plaintiffs), to all the rights and privileges of the mortgagee, and was entitled to oppose the claim of the plaintiff on the ground that he was an absolute owner of the property (8 A. 295, 11 A. 423, F.B., F.) that the defendant was not a trustee for the respondents, that the fact of the appellant and the respondents having brought a joint suit did not affect his right to state all the defences, the mortgagee has to the suit of the plaintiffs. The suit was dismissed. IMDAD ALI v. HURMAT ALI, 32 P.R. 1905=39 P.L.R. 1905. [R., 43 P.R. 1907.]

(154)—Usufructuary mortgage—Liability of mortgagor and mortgagee—Part of mortgaged property taken out of mortgagee's possession—Mortgagee remaining in possession of the rest for a long time, effect of—Interest—Redemption.—A executed an usufructuary mortgage in favour of B in 1880. At the time of the mortgage, a suit was pending in respect of a prior mortgage of 1874, by virtue of which a portion of the mortgaged property passed out of B's hand in 1886. B remained in possession of the remaining property for over 24 years, without taking any steps in respect of the portion which had gone out of his possession under the prior mortgage. In 1910 the mortgagor brought a suit for redemption: Held, (1) that, under the circumstances, mortgagee was not entitled to claim the loss of interest which he had sustained owing to a part of the mortgaged property having gone out of his possession in 1886 under the prior mortgage; (2) that the mortgagor was not entitled to claim a proportionate reduction of the principal money, because the mortgagee was not in a position to deliver to him the entire mortgaged property at the time of redemption. BIHARI LAL v. DURGA DAS, 13 Ind. Cas. 156. (24 A. 521, 29 I.A. 148, 27 A. 313, R.)

subsequent to two separate mortgages of separate lands is to consolidate the two, the mortgagor cannot redeem without paying the whole amount due, under the mortgages nor can he have the amount apportioned on the two lands according to the consideration mentioned in the original deeds. BANNU MAL v. RAMJUS, 33 P.R. 1899.

(156)—Redemption. Suit for—Mortgagor and mortgagee, relation between—Payment of a portion of mortgage-money, effect of—Discharge of a portion of mortgaged property by a proportionate payment of the mortgage-money—Arrangement to hand over property other than the mortgaged property for payment of mortgage-money, effect of, when unregistered—Variation or modification of the terms of contract, what amounts to—Evidence Act, s. 92, cl. (4).—K. D. and S. each owned a third share in the property in dispute. On the 15th June, 1880, K and D mortgaged with possession their 2/3rd share in favour of the defendant. On the death of S, he was succeeded by his widow J., who on the 7th July, 1885, mortgaged her 1/3rd share to the same defendant excepting the village B. On the 5th June, 1901, K, alone mortgaged with possession his 1/3rd share excepting the village B. Half the mortgage-money due under the deed of 1880 was set off as part of the consideration of this mortgage. After the death of the widow, the sons of D sued for redemption of the mortgage of 1885 as her heirs. They contended that by the mortgage of 5th June, 1901, K's share in the mortgage of 1880 had been paid up and the latter mortgage, so far as it related to K's share, had been discharged. They also alleged that about six years ago the mortgagor and the mortgagee entered into an agreement by which the share of J, in village B. as also the share of K. in the said village had been placed in the possession of the mortgagee, on the understanding that he was to collect the rents and the profits thereof and apply them to the reduction of the principal amount due on his mortgage. The questions for decision were whether K's liability under the mortgage of 1880 had been discharged and whether the arrangement alleged by the plaintiff could be proved in law under s. 92, cl. 4, of the Evidence Act, in the absence of a registered document to evidence the same. Held, that the mere fact that K's share on account of the mortgage of 1880 was set off against the amount secured under the latter deed of 1901 was not enough to show that any part of the mortgaged property had been released from liability for the remainder of the money due under the deed of 1880. In the absence of an express contract to the contrary, the mortgagee was entitled to retain the whole of the property mortgaged as security for what was due to him. Held, further, that the arrangement relied upon by the plaintiff did not require registration, as it would not in any way affect the mortgagee, nor could such an arrangement modify or vary the terms of the mortgage, and that, therefore, it would be proved in spite of s. 92, cl. 4, of the Evidence Act. KEDAR SINGH v. SUMER SINGH, 10 Ind. Cas. 196. (10 C. 1035, 11 I.A. 126, 9 A. 249, R.)

(157) — Parties — Redemption suit—Subsequent mortgage — Redemption of portion of mortgaged property not allowable—Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), ss. 60, 85—Rajinamah petition — Evidence — Admission—No necessity of document for transfer of immoveable property before Transfer of Property Act—Costs — Mortgagee to get costs in redemption suit unless guilty of misconduct—Redemption suit dismissed for default of payment—Res judicata—Second suit barred.—It is necessary, in a suit for redemption of a prior mortgage, to make a subsequent mortgagee a party to it, as he is clearly interested in the properties. Also, all the persons interested in all the properties mortgaged must be made parties. Where this is not done, the suit must fail. A suit to redeem only a portion of the properties mortgaged is not maintainable under s. 60, Transfer of Property Act. Where a rajinamah petition filed by the mortgagor stated that, being unable to pay the mortgage-money, she had arranged with the mortgagee to execute in his favour a deed of sale in respect of 4/5th of the property, and she retained the remaining 1/5th, and the suit was decided in pursuance of the terms of the rajinamah, but, although no deed of sale was afterwards executed, the mortgagor's name was registered in respect of 1/5th and the mortgagee's name in respect of 4/5th of the property, and the mortgagor dealt with the 1/5th as her absolute property, by mortgage and gift: Held, that as the rajinamah did not purport to release the equity of redemption or to declare, create or extinguish any right in immoveable property, it was admissible in evidence as an admission by the mortgagor of the agreement at which she had arrived with her mortgagee, and no question of want of stamp or registration really arose. (12 C.W.N. 854, D.) No document was necessary for the transfer of immoveable property before July 1, 1882, when the Transfer of Property Act came into force. In a redemption suit the mortgagee is entitled to his costs, unless he is guilty of misconduct. Obiter dictum.—Where the decree in a redemption suit provided that, in default of payment within a specified time, the plaintiff's suit should stand dismissed, if it was dismissed in default of payment, the matter would be res judicata between the parties, and a second suit would be barred. AUGHORE KUMAR GANGOOLI v. (159) — Redemption in part—Validity—Portion of mortgaged-property, Sale of, Effect on right to redeem.—The general rule that a mortgagor cannot redeem a share of the mortgaged property and that the mortgagee is entitled to retain the whole property mortgaged until the debt is paid is not affected by a sale of part of the lands mortgaged for arrears of revenue. SYUD HASHIM v. (161) — Mortgage—Zur-i-peshghee mortgage—Enjoyment of mortgagees in moieties—Right of mortgagor to claim partial redemption.—Where subsequent to the execution of a Zur-i-peshghee mortgage, the mortgagees took possession of the mortgaged property in moieties, that circumstance would not enable the mortgagor to claim piece-meal redemption of the mortgage. The mortgagor cannot recover possession of any portion of the mortgaged property until he has paid the entire amount due under the mortgage. SHAIKH IMAM ALI v. OOGRAH SINGH, 22 W.R. 262.

(162) — Sale of share of mortgaged property towards mortgage decree—Suit for accounts and redemption of such share—Contribution.—The share of one only of several joint mortgagors can be sold in execution of a decree on the mortgage; and any claim by the owner of such share, that it must be made liable only to the extent of his share of the debt, must be urged, if at all, in the execution proceedings, and not by a separate suit for the ascertainment of the amount due by him and for redemption of his share. Where, under such circumstances, owing to other shares in the mortgaged property having been sold and purchased by the mortgagor in execution of other decrees, against the owners of such shares, the plaintiff's share alone of the mortgaged property, together with some other property of a third party also comprised in the mortgage, was purchased by the mortgagor in execution, of his mortgage decree; held, that a suit was not maintainable by plaintiff for the ascertainment of the amount due by him under the mortgage and for redemption of his share on payment of such amount. Held, also, that, if any excess amount had been realised by the sale of the plaintiff's share over and above the sum ascertained to be due by him, he was entitled to recover a contribution of his portion of such excess by the sale of the third party's property purchased by the mortgagor. *BHAGIRATH v. (163)—Mortgage — Right to redeem before expiry of term.—The general principle is that, in the absence of any stipulation, expressed or implied to the contrary, the right to redeem and the right to foreclosure are co-extensive. Where, therefore, a date is fixed in a mortgage-deed for redemption, no suit could be brought for redemption within that date, notwithstanding the fact that the deed mentions that the mortgage amount is payable "within" that date. *VADJU v. (164)—Construction—Suit for redemption brought before expiration of term.—In a deed of mortgage, it was stipulated that "the interest should be paid every year and the principal in ten years," that "the principal shall be paid at the promised time and the interest every year" and that, on failure by the mortgagor to pay the principal and interest "at the stipulated period," the mortgagee might realise the amount from the mortgaged property and from the other property and the person of the mortgagor. Held upon a construction of the document, that the advance of the amount was for a period of ten years certain; and that, while on the one hand, the mortgagee could not enforce his rights during the period, on the other hand, the mortgagor was not entitled, before the period, to sue for redemption of the property. The case was essentially one in which, looking to the merits of the matters between the parties, their obligations were mutual and reciprocal, and there was nothing in the terms of the deed to take it out of the ordinary rules applicable to documents of the kind. RAGHUBAR DAYAL v. BUDHU LAL, 8 A. 95=A.W.N. 1886, 13. (5 B. 22, R.) [Not F., 201, P.R. 1889; Cons., 10 A. 602; R., 20 B. 677, 16 C.P.L.R. 59, 29 A. 471=4 A.L.J. 375=A.W.N. 1907, 133; D., A.W.N. 1901, 36.]

(165)—Reg. I of 1798, s. 5—Mortgage—Contract to pay principal on specified date—Interest—Payment of interest a condition for redemption.—Reg. I of 1798, s. 5, is not intended to alter the terms of a contract settled between the parties (illegal interest excepted). Where there is a contract between a mortgagor and a mortgagee for the payment of the principal sum on a specified date and for the payment of interest thereon in the meantime, the mortgagor cannot have a partial redemption of the property under the Regulation. There is nothing unreasonable in a mortgagee stipulating that, if the principal sum or part of it is paid off before the time fixed or without the requisite notice, six months' interest on it shall be paid. A mortgagee consenting to allow the principal sum, or a part of it, to be paid off before the time fixed, would not be entitled, when agreeing to this, to make the payment of interest a condition of such redemption. BURNO MOYEE DOSSEE v. BENODE MOHINEE CHOWDHRAIN, 20 W.R. 387.

(166) Mortgage—Mortgagee's right to possession—Mortgage-money, Payment of, before expiry of term of mortgage—Mortgagor's right to redeem—Possession, Suit for.—A mortgagee brought a suit against the mortgagor for possession of the mortgaged property, a grove, alleging that the mortgagor had promised to deliver possession of the same and had refused to do so, and that, up to the time of the institution of the suit, Rs. 35-11-3 were due to him. The mortgagor offered to pay the mortgagee this amount and costs, saying that the mortgagee would, if possession were given to him, cut down the trees, and he paid the money into Court. The mortgagee refused to take the money, claiming to be entitled to possession of the property. The mortgage was for a term of three years and when the suit was instituted, the term had not expired. Held that there had been a transfer to the mortgagee of the right of possession and the mortgagee was entitled by virtue of such transfer to possession. The mortgagor had not a right to elect whether possession should be delivered or the mortgage should be redeemed. Held, further, that the mortgagor had not the right to redeem within the term for which the mortgage was made. *FAKIRA KHAN v. Mortgage—continued.—9.—Redemption—continued.

(169)—Redemption—Right of mortgagee to refuse redemption.—As a mortgagor is not entitled to redeem before the principal money has become payable, the mortgagee is justified in refusing to allow him to do so. URJOONI KUNBI v. HARBAJI JAGANNATH, 1 C.P.L.R. 1. [Diss., 16 C.P.L.R. 59.]

(170)—Usufructuary mortgage for 90 years—Stipulation not to redeem before expiry of 90 years—Validity.—Where, under a usufructuary mortgage deed, dated 5th March 1861, one of the terms was that the mortgagee was to hold for 90 years and that, immediately on the expiry of the 90 years, and not before, the mortgagor must redeem or lose his rights; Held that the term was one that could be enforced and that a suit for redemption before the expiry of the period of 90 years was premature. MUHOMED IBRAHIM v. MUHOMED AZIZ KROSHI, 9 M.L.T. 462 = 8 Ind. Cas. 1068 = M.W.N. (1910) 792.

(171)—Mortgage—Redemption and foreclosure not always co-extensive.—The right of redemption and the right of foreclosure or sale are not always and under all circumstances co-extensive. The right of redemption may be postponed during a certain period, just as the right of the mortgagee to call in his debt may be limited. Both these rights rest upon the terms of the document itself, and where a restriction is not unfair or unduly onerous, redemption will not be allowed before the expiration of the term of the mortgage. A usufructuary mortgage, under which the mortgagee was empowered to be in possession of the mortgaged property for 15 years, enjoying the profits in lieu of interest, provided that "if the property be found to have been mortgaged or hypothecated or transferred to any one, or if there should arise any cause which might be considered likely to cause the total or partial loss of the principal mortgage money and interest, the mortgagee shall have power to realize the entire mortgage money, with interest thereon at the rate of Rs. 3—2—0 per cent. per mensem" from the mortgagor and his property, without waiting for the expiration of the term. Held that this condition in the mortgage deed was neither unreasonable nor oppressive, and it did not therefore give a right to redeem before the expiry of the term of the mortgage. BHAWANI v. SHEODIHAL, 26 A. 479 = 1 A.L.J. 133 = A.W.N. 1904, 60. (20 B. 677, 22 B. 375, R.) [R., 126 P.L.R. 1908.]

(172)—Suit for redemption of mortgage before expiration of term—Mortgagor's remedy for balance of mortgage money—Act XXVIII of 1855.—A mortgage executed subsequent to Act XXVIII of 1855, for a fixed period, the mortgagee taking possession in lieu of interest, cannot be redeemed until the period for which the mortgage was effected, has expired; and, under the circumstances, the mortgagor's proper course would be to sue for the balance of the mortgage loan which had not been paid to him. MUN PEAREY v. SHIVA DEEN, 1 Agra 91. [F., 11 W. R. 408.]

(173)—Usufructuary mortgage—Redemption before stipulated period.—Where a person executed an ikrarnama by way of mortgage and the ikrar was to the effect that the mortgagee was to remain in possession of the mortgaged property for a period of eight years without any objection on the part of the mortgagor or his heirs and that the amount due was to be realized from the usufruct of the land mortgaged, and that, at the end of these eight years, if anything should still be found due, the mortgagee was to recover that amount from the mortgagor: Held, that neither the mortgagor nor any person claiming under him was entitled to bring a suit for redemption before the expiry of the period of eight years mentioned in the ikrar. CHANDRA KUMAR BANERJEE v. ISWAR CHANDRA NEWJI, 6 B.L.R. 562 = 14 W.R. 455.

(174)—Mortgage—Redemption before period fixed therefor.—Where the intention of the parties to a mortgage is that there should not be any right of redemption until the expiration of a certain term, and it is so expressed in the mortgage deed, held that both under the English and the Indian law, the mortgagor cannot redeem before the expiration of the fixed period, unless the mortgagee consents thereto. This rule is based on the principle that, in the absence of stipulation, either express or implied, to the contrary, the right to redeem and the right to foreclose are regarded as co-extensive. SAKHARAM N. SARPESAI v. VITHU L. GOUDA, 2 B.H.C. 225 = 1 Ind. Jur. N.S. 250. [Appl., 5 B. 22; R., 9 B.H.C. 79, 20 B. 677.]

(175)—Mortgage—Lease by mortgagor to mortgagee—Redemption—Act XXVIII of 1855.—In a suit to recover possession of the entire 16 annas of certain properties by redemption of a mortgage dated 1862, on deposit of a sum which the plaintiff alleged to be the balance of the peshgi money, principal and interest, due to the defendant (lender), it appeared that it was arranged between the parties that the principal sum of Rs. 19,300 was to be paid off in 1874 and that a lease was given to the mortgagee by the mortgagor, the term of which was from 1864 to 1874. At the foot of the deed of zuripeshgi, there was a calculation which showed that the assets of the properties leased were assumed to be Rs. 2,830; a small payment was to be made by the lessee to the lessor, apparently to mark the tenancy and it was stipulated that the lessee, was to clear off both the principal and interest of the amount advanced from the said Rs. 2,830 and that, at the commencement of 1875, on payment of Rs. 1-2-0 by the borrower which would be the amount then due as per calculation at the foot of the deed, the lessee (the lender), would have to surrender possession. The transaction took place subsequent to the passing of Act XXVIII of 1855. Held, that the plaintiff was not entitled to ask for possession before the expiry of the term of the lease and that the transaction between the parties was not a simple usufructuary mortgage but a mortgage coupled with an engagement that bore all the characteristics of an ordinary case. SURJAN CHOWDHRY v. MUSSAMAT IMAMBANDI BEGUM, 6 B.L.R. 566, Note=12 W.R. 527. [Rel. on, 6 B.L.R. 562=14 W.R. 455; R., 10 A. 602.]

(176)—Onerous condition—Condition as to mortgage being not redeemable for 60 years enforced.—The mortgagor specifically agreed with the mortgagee that he should not be entitled to redeem until after the expiry of 60 years. The purchaser of the mortgaged property from the mortgagor sued for redemption and contended that the condition as to redemption was so inequitable and onerous that relief from it should be given on equitable grounds, and it should be struck out. Held, that the contention was not valid and redemption could not be allowed to the plaintiff before the expiry of the stipulated period. RALLA v. AMIN CHAND, 126 P.L.R. 1908.

(177)—Usufructuary mortgage—Redemption—Time for redemption fixed—Suit before the fixed period, maintainability of.—Where a mortgage-deed fixed a period of ten years for redemption, a suit to redeem prior to the expiration of that period is premature. INDERJIT v. BHARAT SINGH, 4 Ind. Cas. 407.

(178)—Mortgage — Mortgage for a certain fixed term—Suit for redemption before expiry of term—Inequitable condition.—Where the mortgage-deed provided that the term of the mortgage was to be fifty years, and the mortgagor could redeem after the expiry of the period of the mortgage on payment of the amount due, and in a suit for redemption brought before the expiry of the term of the mortgage, it was contended on behalf of the mortgagor that, by the mortgage-deed, he was entitled to redeem at any time he liked, and the condition as to the term of the mortgage being fifty years was inequitable: Held, that, upon the construction of the deed, the mortgagor was not entitled to redeem before the expiry of fifty years, the term fixed in the mortgage-deed, and that the condition was not per se inequitable. The ordinary presumption is that the period for redemption is fixed for the convenience of the mortgagor, and not for the benefit of the mortgagee. But the presumption is rebuttable, and does not arise in a case where the provisions of the deed clearly show that the mortgagee intended to secure his possession for a definite period. MILKHI v. FATTU, 40 P.L.R. 1903.

(179)—Loan on mortgage—Mortgagee in possession—No interest—Redemption not to be at any time.—It is incompetent to a mortgagor, who borrowed money on no stipulated rate of interest and on condition that the mortgagee was to remain in possession, to claim back the mortgaged land before the stipulated time. SREEMUNT DUTT v. KRISHNA NATH ROY, 25 W.R. 10.

(180)—Usufructuary — Mortgagor cannot ordinarily be compelled to redeem.—In Upper Burma, mortgages must be construed as far as possible in accordance with the intention of the parties. (U.B.R. 1897—1901, Vol. II, 502, F.) In the case of a usufructuary mortgage, where the security remains unimpaired, if there is no covenant for the repayment of the mortgage-money, the mortgagee cannot sue to compel the mortgagor to redeem the mortgage. MAUNG THA TE v. MAUNG TAUNG BO, U.B. R. 1897—1901, Vol. II, 516. [F., U.B.R. 1897—1901, Vol II, 518.]

(181)—Mortgage — Redemption — Non-payment—Possession until payment—Suit for account—Maintainability.—A decree obtained by a mortgagee provided that the mortgagor should pay a certain sum to the mortgagee for redemption, and, on failure, the mortgagee should take possession of the property mortgaged until the sum due be discharged. Held that, in the face of such a decree, no suit was maintainable by the mortgagor against the mortgagee for accounts and possession. The mortgagee was entitled to continue his possession till the decretal amount was paid to him by the mortgagor. TANAI BAGAVAN v. HARI bin BHAVANI DUBAL, 16 B. 659, F.B.=P.J. 1887, 315. [F., 26 B. 312=3 Bom. L.R. 939, 13 Bom. L.R. 30; R., 16 B. 656, 19 B. 140.]

(182)—Mortgage—Redemption decree—Non-payment of mortgage money—Recovery of possession by mortgagee—Suit for account by mortgagor — Maintainability.—A mortgage-decree directed the mortgagor to pay a certain sum for redemption, and, on his failure to do so, the mortgagee was to recover and retain possession till the amount was paid off. The former having failed to pay the amount, the latter took possession of the mortgaged property. The mortgagor subsequently brought a suit for account and possession. Held, that the suit was not maintainable against the mortgagee. The only means by which the plaintiff could recover possession from the defendant was by paying the amount of the decree. RAMBHAT v. RAGHO KRISHNA DESHPANDI, 16 B. 656. (8 B. 303, 16 B. 659, R.) [F., 6 Bom. L.R. 1100, 13 Bom. L.R. 30.]

(183)—Redemption, Suit for — Deposit of mortgage-money by mortgagor—Deposit of mortgage money in Court, what amounts to valid—Transfer of Property Act, ss. 83 and 84—Mortgagor, suit by, to recover surplus collection made by mortgagee after mortgagee has been satisfied—Limitation Act, arts. 105, 109 and 120.—The plaintiffs who owned certain shares in a village mortgaged them separately to the mortgagees on the 9th November, 1876. The mortgagees were authorised to pay themselves, from the rents and profits, the interest of the principal monies. On the 13th May, 1890, the mortgagors separately deposited in Court certain sums. In the applications under which the deposits were made, it was stated: "Let the Court know that some items of money are due to the petitioner from the mortgagees for the recovery of which he will sue after redemption has been effected." Notices were issued to the mortgagees, but they refused to accept these amounts on the ground that they were not sufficient. On the 4th September, 1890, the plaintiffs instituted separate suits for redemption. They obtained decrees and in execution thereof obtained possession on the 8th January, 1892. The decrees were set aside and possession was restored to the mortgagees on the 1st August, 1893. On the suits being retried, the mortgagors on the 31st March, 1896, obtained decrees for redemption and, having paid the amounts found due from them by the Court, they obtained possession of their shares on the 4th November, 1896. On the 24th April, 1899, the plaintiffs separately instituted the present suits, alleging that from the 13th May, 1890, the mortgagees ceased to be entitled to interest and that consequently they were not entitled to appropriate the rents and profits of the share from that date to the 7th January, 1892, and from the 1st August, 1893 to the 3rd November, 1896. They claimed the rents and profits for these periods and the value of certain trees alleged to have been sold by the mortgagees as part of the profits. On behalf of the mortgagees, it was contended that the deposits were not valid and that the claim as regards the profits was governed by arts. 105 and 109, Limitation Act, and was beyond time. Held, that the deposits were made in good faith with the intention that the mortgagees should, if they were willing to do so, take the amounts. All that the language of the applications under which the deposits were made showed was that the plaintiffs reserved their right to dispute that the whole amounts deposited were due to the mortgagees. Held, further, that article 105 was applicable to the suits as regards both the periods for which profits were claimed. Held, therefore, that, while the claim for profits for the period from the 13th May, 1890, to the 7th January, 1892, was barred by limitation, that for the period from the 1st August, 1893, to the 3rd November, 1896, was within time. Held, further, that the claims in respect of the trees were claims for surplus profits and were governed by art. 105. SALIK RAM v. ASHIK HUSAIN, 4 O.C. 355.

(184)—Mortgage with possession—Redemption—Directions for accounts.—Plaintiffs sued for redemption of a mortgage for Rs. 225 executed by their father to the father of the defendant, alleging that they were ready to pay Rs. 186 which was the sum received under the mortgage. The defendant answered that the plaintiffs' father had received Rs. 225 and mortgaged the land in dispute as security for Rs. 100 out of that sum with the condition that, on non-payment of Rs. 100 within 10 years, the mortgage was to be foreclosed. It was further pleaded that, the payment not having been made, the defendant had become the owner of the property, and that he had spent Rs. 6,000 in erecting buildings on the land. Held that the rule of Courts of Equity in England as to allowances to a mortgagee with possession could not apply, as the course of decisions in the late Sadler Court, and the general understanding of the law caused by those decisions, as well as those of subordinate Courts, may reasonably have led the mortgagee to believe that upon non-payment of the money at the time fixed, he had become the absolute owner of the property and might deal with it in any way he thought fit. The mortgagee was therefore allowed all sums of money laid out or expended by him in buildings or other permanent improvements on the mortgaged premises, making all reasonable deductions for depreciations by lapse of time or other causes, in addition to the amount due under the mortgage. ANANDRAV v. RAVJI DESHRATH, 2 B.H.C. 214. [F., 3 B.H.C. 11, 9 B.H.C. 69.]

(185)—Bengal Regulation XV of 1793—Construction—Interest—Construction of Bengal Regulation XV of 1793 as to usurious interest—Mortgage—Redemption—Accounts.—A mortgage, lease, and agreement, held to constitute one mortgage security, the three instruments being entered into as a device to avoid the usury laws within the meaning of s. 9, Bengal Regulation XV of 1793. Interference with the rate of interest was a thing of positive law and cannot be extended beyond the provisions of Regulation XV of 1793. [R., 5 A 419.] The mortgagors in this case were entitled to redeem at any time before the expiration of the term created by the lease on payment of what might be due on the mortgage security for principal and interest at 12 per cent. per annum. In a suit by mortgagors under a usufructuary mortgage to establish their right to cancellation of the mortgage-deed, to the possession of the lands, and to payment of the surplus, held that the onus lay on the plaintiffs to show that the mortgagees in possession were paid in full by receipt of the profits. Bengal Regulation XV of 1793, s. 2, re non-production of accounts of receipts by mortgagees in possession is still in force and unrepealed by Act XVIII of 1855. A mortgagee is not an assurer of the continuation of the same rate of profit which his mortgagor was able to raise; therefore an estimate of a proceeding rental does not suffice to show actual receipt. The duty to which the mortgagees are bound by s. 11, Reg. XV of 1793, is to keep accounts of gross receipts from the property mortgaged, and also the expenses of management and preservation. The gross receipts must be such as the mortgagor himself, would have been entitled to; and if he could not, by reason of an intervening lease, call for an account of the collections, neither can his mortgagee, and if a valid engagement is made, qualifying the usufructuary possession, the account of the receipt must be subject to that modification. The mortgagee need not personally attest the accounts if he has no persona knowledge of them. The Legislature never intended that a man should swear positively to knowledge of that of which he can have no personal knowledge. Presumption against mortgagees for non-production of accounts must have reasonable limits, and not be mere conjectures based on inexact data. SHAH MAKHANLAL v. SRIKRISHNA SINGH, 2 B. L. R. P. C. 44=11 W. R. P. C. 19=12 M. I. A. 157. [R., 14 W. R. 66, 4 M. 113, 26 B. 363; D., 16 W. R. 251.]

(186) — Mortgage—Suit for redemption—Mortgage amount alleged by plaintiff to be due being below the sum really due—Dismissal of suit.—The appellants sued for redemption of mortgage alleging that the mortgage amount was Rs. 20, but the respondents alleged that the land had been mortgaged for Rs. 400. The lower appellate Court held that the appellants had failed to prove that the land had been mortgaged for Rs. 20 and dismissed the suit. Held that, as the appellants did not ask for an account nor did they offer to pay any such sum as might be found by the Court, to be due, the lower appellate Court was not wrong in dismissing the claim of the appellants which had admittedly not been substantiated. BHAGWANDIN v. BACHHU, A. W. N. 1882, 137.

(187) — Redemption of, prior to Regulation XVII of 1806.—When there is neither deposit nor tender of money prior to the date fixed for the payment of a mortgage in the nature of a bye-bil-wuffa, the right of redemption is lost to the mortgagor under Regulation I of 1798. Held also that the benefit of Regulation XVII of 1806 could not be applied to mortgages made prior to the passing of that enactment. MUSSAMUT BEEBEE RUHMAN v. SHEIKH SHUM-SOODDEEN HYDER, W. R. 1864, 183.

(188) — Redemption impracticable if any balance due on mortgage—Interest.—If anything be found due on a mortgage a mortgagor cannot obtain a decree for redemption. GOPEE LALL v. BEEBEE MOHAFUZZUN, W. R. 1864, 349.

(189) — Mortgage—Stipulation that mortgage should become a sale if not redeemed within given time—Razinamah in favour of, and transfer of possession to, mortgagee—Effect of razinamah in extinguishing equity of redemption—Subsequent purchaser of equity from mortgagor not entitled to redeem—Conveyance when vitiated by mistake of law—Indian Contract Act, s. 21.—In pursuance of the stipulation in a mortgage-deed that, on the mortgagor's failure to redeem within the time specified in the deed, it should become a sale, the mortgagor executed a razinamah without any reservation surrendering the property in favour of the mortgagee. The razinamah was, under the circumstances, held to have extinguished the mortgagor's equity of redemption irrespective of any ignorance or mistake of law on the part of the mortgagor as to his rights as such. The principle has been laid down in the Indian Contract Act that an error of law does not, by itself, vitiate a contract. Much less will it annul a conveyance after the lapse of several years, unless there has been some fraud or misrepresentation. The plaintiff, in this case, relying on his purchase of the alleged equity of redemption of the mortgagor subsequent to his surrender in favour of the mortgagee, instituted this suit for redemption of the property, and this suit was dismissed on the ground of the equity having become extinguished previous to the alleged sale thereof to him by the mortgagor. VISHNU SAKHARAM PEATAK v. KASHINATH BAPU SHANKAR, 11 B. 174.

(190) — Bengal Regulation, XVII of 1806, ss. 7 and 8—Mortgage by conditional sale—Non-payment of amount due within time—Redemption.—In the part of India where the Regulation is in force, the right to redeem depends entirely upon it, irrespective of the construction of the mortgage-deed. Where, in the case of a mortgage by conditional sale without possession, the mortgagor did not pay the whole amount within the year of grace, as required by s. 7, but paid only the principal amount and the last year's interest, as required by the mortgage bond, the conditional sale became conclusive and the mortgagor was not entitled to redeem. MANSUR ALI KHAN v. SARJU PRASAD, 9 A. 20=13 I. A. 113, P. C. =4 Sar. 749. [R., 103 P. R. 1893.]

(191) — Decree for redemption—Failure to pay within the time fixed, of the mortgage amount.—The pendency of an appeal by the mortgagee cannot have the effect of relieving the mortgagor from redeeming within the proper time. GOVINDAN v. CHAPPUTTI, 15 M. 171, Note. [R., 15 M. 170.]

(192) — Failure of mortgagor to redeem within time fixed in consent decree in a redemption suit—Mortgagor's application for extension of time refused—Mortgagor's application to foreclose—Mortgagor's right—S. 93, Transfer of Property Act, 1882.—The scheme of the Transfer of Property Act is that a mortgagor getting a decree for redemption is liable to foreclosure, if he fails to pay within the time limited, unless he gets an extension under s. 93 of the Act. A mortgagor, who fails to redeem by a certain time fixed by a consent decree passed in a redemption suit, and whose application to extend time, after the time fixed for redemption has elapsed, is refused, will not when the mortgagee applies to foreclose, be entitled to redeem. An order absolute, in such a case, is not rendered unnecessary by the fact of the decree being a consent decree. DESU CHETTY v. GHANSHAM DOSS, 5 M. L. T. 76=2 Ind. Cas. 616. (19 M. 43, 36 M. 354=18 M. L. J. 259, D.)

(193) — When suit for redemption may be instituted.—There can be no suit for redemption, unless a time for payment of the principal money has been expressly or impliedly fixed.

The mortgagor may sue for accounts and possession, but, if it be found that the mortgage money has not been repaid from the rents and profits of the property, his suit must be dismissed. KALU v. LALJEE, 11 C.P.L.R. 103. (16 M. 486, F.; 4 C.P.L.R. 43, Appr; 3 M.H. C. 366, R.)

(194)—Right of redemption, bar of by limitation, on expiry of twelve years from year of grace.—In this case, the Lower Appellate Court had correctly found that the conditional sale relied upon by the respondent was duly foreclosed. More than 12 years having elapsed from the date of the expiration of the year of grace, the appellants had lost their right of redemption. LOTF HOSSEIN v. ABDOL ALI, 8 W.R. 476. (195)—Tender, when valid—Time—Amount—Deposit—Notice.—In order that a payment may be a valid tender, the whole of the money due must be deposited within the time stipulated under the agreement for payment, and due notice of the deposit must be given to the obligee. NITA NUND v. MYA RAM, 3 N.W.P. 80.

(196)—Usufructuary mortgage—Stipulation as to time of redemption—Time of the essence of the contract.—In a usufructuary mortgage of agricultural land, it was stipulated that the mortgage might be redeemed by the payment of a certain sum in the Jeth of any year. Held that, having regard to the agricultural conditions of the country, the time of payment was of the essence of the contract, and that the mortgagor would not be entitled to redeem in any other month. BANSI v. GIRDHAR LAL, A.W.N. 1894, 143.

(197)—Mortgage—Redemption, Suit for—Second mortgagee's right to redeem, Effect of decree for redemption of first mortgage by mortgagee upon—Representative in interest of mortgagor, if mortgagee is—Liabilities of second mortgagee when no party to suit for redemption of prior mortgage by mortgagor—Foreclosure, Decree for—Res judicata.—G mortgaged with possession a certain village to B in 1880. In June 1894, G mortgaged the same village to the plaintiff. It was stated in the deed of mortgage that the mortgagee "is at liberty to redeem the property" from B, "former mortgagee," and that for that purpose the mortgagor had left "in deposit" a certain sum of money with the mortgagee and had received the balance in cash etc., etc. In July, G sued B for the redemption of the latter's mortgage. The plaintiff (the second mortgagee) was not made a party to the suit. G obtained a decree for redemption on payment of a certain sum of money. At the time when the plaintiff instituted his suit against G and B, in which he claimed to foreclose the second mortgage and to redeem the first mortgage, the amount found due on the first mortgage had not been paid. Holding that the plaintiff, as the representative in interest of the mortgagor was debarred from suing to redeem the mortgage by reason of the decree obtained by G against B, and that the mortgaged property was "out of reach" of the plaintiff, the District Judge dismissed the suit for redemption of the first mortgage and foreclosure of the second mortgage and passed only a money-decree against G. Held, that the mortgagee is not a representative in interest of the mortgagor, as he does not succeed to the position of the mortgagor as regards the property. A second mortgagee is entitled to redeem the first mortgage whether or not in his mortgaged-deed provision is made for his doing so. All persons claiming under the mortgagor such as purchasers, lessees, and second mortgagees have as such a right to redeem. Held, therefore, that the plaintiff, merely because he claimed under G, was not bound by the decree made between G and B (the first mortgagee). Held, further, that, even if as found by the District Judge, the plaintiff in his own interest instigated G to bring the suit against B and made over to him the money left with him to redeem B's mortgage, in order to enable G to prosecute the suit, the plaintiff was not really and substantially a party to that suit, was not bound by the decree passed therein, and was not debarred from suing to redeem B's mortgage; and that, as a necessary consequence, he was not liable to pay the amount found due by that decree. Held further, that there was nothing in the plaintiff's mortgage deed, which cast on him, in the circumstances, the duty of paying the amount found due on the decree obtained by G against B, although it might have been open to him to pay it. Held, further, that the plaintiff was entitled to a decree for foreclosure. SHEO GHULAM SINGH v. GHULAM SARWAR, 4 O.C. 100.

(198)—Mortgage with possession, suit for redemption of—Decree not providing period for payment nor consequences of non-payment—Acquiescence—Second suit for redemption by the sons of the mortgagor, maintainability of—Res Judicata—Civ. Pro. Code (Act V of 1908), ss. 11 and 47—Transfer of Property Act, ss. 92 and 93—Cause of action.—In the case of a usufructuary mortgage the mortgagor obtained a decree for redemption of the property mortgaged on payment of a certain sum of money, but the decree as framed was defective and improper, inasmuch as it fixed no period for payment nor contained any provision as to the consequences of non-payment, as required by s. 92, Transfer of Property Act. The mortgagor never took out execution of the redemption decree nor was the amount due from him ever paid by him into Court. The sons of the mortgagor brought a second suit for redemption. Held per Piggot, A.J.C.—(1) That the responsibility of acquiescence in the defective decree should be shared by the defendant mortgagee. (2) That, the apparent object of the Legislature in providing for sale under s. 92, Transfer of Property Act, being to secure to the mortgagor the difference between the market value of the property and the amount for which it was mortgaged, to hold that the second suit was barred would amount to giving the mortgagee a decree for foreclosure—a result which the Legislature never contemplated. (3) That, as the mortgagee could have avoided this contingency by seeing that the decree was passed in conformity with law, the principle of res judicata should not be applied in a doubtful case of this kind. Per Evans, J. C. and Lindsay, A.J.C. (1) That the main question to consider in cases of this kind was not whether any legal relation subsisted between the parties, assuming the same to subsist, to the suit, but whether the plaintiff was not precluded from seeking to enforce his rights by reason of his having sued upon the same cause of action and obtained an adjudication. (2) That the former suit and the adjudication thereupon exhausted the original cause of action, and the suit was therefore barred under ss. 13 and 244, Civ. Pro. Code, (1882) (ss. 11, 47, and Act V of 1908). (201)—Mortgage—Decree for redemption directing payment of mortgagee's costs on a certain date, or in default, foreclosure—Effect of default—Enlargement of time fixed for redemption, in execution proceedings.—It is not competent to a Court in execution proceedings to enlarge the time for redemption where the redemption decree states that the effect of not redeeming within a certain time fixed is that the mortgagor's right of redemption should remain foreclosed (13 B. 106, R.). In the present case, plaintiff sued for redemption of a certain land, and it was found that the mortgage debt was paid off out of the rents and profits, and a decree was therefore passed awarding possession to the plaintiff, with a direction that each party was to bear his own costs. On appeal, this decree was modified to the effect that the plaintiff should pay the defendant's costs of the suit as well as of the appeal on or before 1st April, 1888, that the defendant should deliver up the land to the plaintiff, and that in case the plaintiff failed to pay the costs as directed, he should for ever be foreclosed. This decree was in 1887, but before this decree, the plaintiff in execution of the first Court's decree had taken possession of the land. The plaintiff failed to pay the defendant's costs as directed by the appellate Court within the time fixed by it. Thereupon, the defendant applied to the Court for restoration of the property into his possession, urging that the property had now vested in him by reason of the plaintiff's default in paying his costs on the appointed day. Held that the defendant ought to be restored to possession, that the fact that the plaintiff was in actual possession at the time of the appellate Court's decree did not in any way affect the foreclosure decree of that Court, and that the Court cannot now in execution proceedings pass any order extending the time for payment of the redemption money; and that the effect of the failure of the plaintiff to pay the amount of defendant's costs which became part of the mortgage money, within the time fixed in the decree, was to render the plaintiff finally foreclosed. SUBBANA v. this appeal and after the expiration of the three months allowed by the decree the mortgagor paid the amount into Court. The Court made an order allowing the payment and granted execution. On appeal, the High Court discharged this order on the ground that the Court executing a decree had no power to enlarge the time. Then the mortgagee withdrew his appeal against the redemption decree. The mortgagor then applied for execution and contended that the order for withdrawal of the appeal was equivalent to a decree of the appellate Court and that, where there was an appeal, the time prescribed by the original decree ran from the date of the appellate decree. Held that the date of the withdrawal of the appeal would not afford a fresh starting point for the three months within which he could redeem. The withdrawal rendered it unnecessary for any decree to be drawn up, and the only decree which could be executed was that passed by the original Court. [R., 22 B. 500, 6 O. C. 48, 5 N.L.R. 88=3 Ind. (203)—Mortgage by conditional sale—Equity of redemption—Redemption after specified time.—The doctrine of the English Law with respect to the equity of redemption, after default of payment of the mortgage-money, is unknown to the ancient law of India prevailing in Madras, which, in the absence of any Regulation or Act of the Legislature altering such law, determines the interest of mortgagor in favour of the mortgagee under a conditional sale made absolute by failure of the mortgagor to redeem at the time specified in the deed. The provisions of Bengal Reg. XVII of 1806, allowing, in respect of bye-bil-wafa, the mortgagor, or his representatives, to redeem at any time before the foreclosure, have not been extended to Madras. In this case, the suit to redeem was instituted in 1853, and the suit was held not maintainable after the time fixed in the deed. PATTABHIRAMIER v. mortgagee, if he wished to save his estate from forfeiture, to tender the amount due, or to pay it into Court, pursuant to the provisions of Regulation I of 1798, within the period stipulated for the repayment of the loan. Regulation XVII of 1806 first introduced a modification of the strict rights given by the contract. S. 7 of that Regulation gives the mortgagor a right of redemption within one year after an application by the mortgagee to the Court under s. 8 of that Regulation. After such an application, the mortgagor must either pay or tender the money lent, or the balance then due, if any part of the principal sum has been discharged, and if the mortgagee has not been in possession, any interest that may be due, or he must make a deposit pursuant to s. 2 of Regulation I of 1798. The general effect of these Regulations is, that if anything be due on the mortgage and the mortgagor makes no deposit or an insufficient deposit, the right of redemption is gone at the expiration of the year of grace. The title of the mortgagee, however, is not even then complete. A mortgagee after having done all that Regulation XVII of 1806 requires to be done in order to foreclose the mortgage and make the conditional sale absolute, must bring a regular suit to recover possession if he is out of possession, or to obtain a declaration of his absolute title if he is in possession. In that suit the mortgagor may contest the validity of the conditional sale, or the regularity of the proceedings taken under Regulation XVII of 1806 in order to make it absolute. He may also allege and prove that nothing is due or that the deposit which he has made is sufficient to cover what is due, but the issue, in so far as the right of redemption is concerned, will be whether anything, at the end of the year of grace, remained due to the mortgagee, and if so, whether the necessary deposit had been then made. If that is found against the mortgagor, the right of redemption is gone. [Appr., 15 W.R., P.C., 35=7 B.L.R. 136=13 M.I.A. 560; Expl., 3 Agra 358; R., 13 W.R. 44, 17 W.R. 197, 3 A. 610=A.W.N. 1881, 31, 3 A. 770=A.W.N. 1881, 66, 6 A. 344=A.W.N. 1884, 110, 12 B. 36, A.W.N. 1893, 209=16 A. 59; D., 16 W.R. 251, A.W.N. 1892, 108=14 A. 405.] The defendant's husband gave the plaintiff an instrument which purported to be an absolute bill of sale of certain lands in consideration of a certain sum advanced. On the same day, the plaintiff executed to the defendant's husband an ikrar importing that on payment of the said sum with interest on a specified date, the sale should be void; but that in the event of the seller not paying the principal and interest according to his engagement, the ikrar was to be null and void, and the purchaser was to become the absolute proprietor of the property. On the day before the date of the bill of sale, the defendant's husband had granted a lease of the mortgaged premises benamsee to the plaintiff's son, but really to plaintiff who, under colour of it, obtained possession of the mortgaged premises. Plaintiff commenced this suit in order to complete his title under the foreclosure. Treating the lease to his son as a subsisting lease to that person, and himself as out of possession, plaintiff asked to have possession decreed to him together with mesne profits. Held that, as the real object of the suit was to perfect plaintiff's title as absolute owner of the property, he was not debarred from that relief, if he was otherwise entitled to it, because, under an erroneous view of the lease, he had asked for it by his plaint in a somewhat different form and with something to which he was not entitled. That the lease did not save the plaintiff from the liabilities whilst it gave him the advantages of a mortgagee in possession, still less could it be taken to modify the terms of the conditional sale. That the plaintiff was entitled to possession of the mortgaged premises as absolute owner by virtue of the conditional sale which had been duly made absolute but was not entitled to a decree for any mesne profits. [Cons., 6 C. 564=7 C.L.R. 583.] Under s. 11, Regulation XV of 1793, the production of accounts by a mortgagee in possession seeking to foreclose, cannot be called for when there is neither plea nor proof that the usufruct had liquidated the principal and interest, and where no deposit had been made to cover the balance admitted to be due. The necessity for a mortgagee in possession to produce his accounts arises:—First, when the mortgagor has deposited the principal money, leaving the question of interest to be settled by an adjustment of the account. Secondly, when the mortgagor has deposited all that he admits or alleges to be due; and thirdly when he pleads and undertakes to prove that the whole of the principal and interest had been liquidated by the usufruct of the mortgaged premises. *FORBES v. Under this clause, therefore, an equity of redemption was a kind of property that might be seized and sold. A, a mortgagee who takes from B as security an existing mortgage from C to B, stands in the same position towards, and is subject to the same equities in respect of, the mortgagor B, who has assigned that mortgage to him by way of sub-mortgage, as B himself, a mortgagee, does to the original mortgagor C. mortgagor's equity of redemption and obtained a conveyance thereof from the Sheriff under cl. 3, s. 1, Act VI of 1855. Held, in a suit by the mortgagor against the mortgagee for redemption of the mortgage, that the latter was entitled under that Act to hold the mortgaged estate against the mortgagor freed from the equities existing in him previous to sale and conveyance of his rights and interests under the mortgage. *TOYLUCKOMOHUN TAGORE v. (206)—Heir of mortgagor, Right of, to redeem—Right of purchaser—Limitation—Suit to redeem against transferee, or (in alternative) to enforce terms of purchase.—The form of mortgage was the usual indigo planter's mortgage, with power of sale. After heavy losses, the agents (mortgagees) stopped the factories, and sold them, informing the planter (mortgagor) of the sale, and suggesting his concurrence. He, in a written acknowledgment, gave reluctant assent: he was not called on for any formal confirmation or act; the mortgagees wrote off the greater part of the debt to profit and loss, credited the purchase-money, and closed the account. The purchaser took and retained possession. After two years the mortgagor died, leaving a will, in which he described his property, but did not mention the mortgaged factories. The conveyance to the purchaser was produced, in which the mortgagor was made a party, but which was dated and executed after the mortgagor's death. It purported to be, not an exercise of the power of sale, but a transfer of the legal estate by the mortgagees at the request of the mortgagor: it was executed by the mortgagees and purchaser. Held, firstly, that the mortgagor's heir was not entitled to redeem (see also Sreemulmoney Bebee v. Goberdhone Bermono, 2 Ind. Jur., N.S., 319); also that, on dismissal of the redemption suit, no terms or conditions could be imposed on the defendant, who in this case held under the original contract of sale to which the mortgagor assented. Held, secondly, that even had the contract included (as argued for appellants), an undertaking to indemnify from liabilities, the payments sought to be reimbursed were beyond six years, and no fraud was proved; therefore as to these the suit was barred. *DOUCETT v. The interest was payable every year. The mortgagee obtained a decree for Rs. 500 in 1876 against the mortgagor on account of arrears of interest. In execution of the decree, Survey Nos. 68 and 75 were put up for sale and purchased by the mortgagee in 1877. About the same time Survey Nos. 71, 76 and 77 were put up for sale and purchased by B who obtained possession. In 1879 B sold the Survey Numbers to the mortgagee, who remained in possession of all the Survey Numbers ever since. In 1907, the plaintiffs filed a suit to redeem the five Survey Numbers; Held, (1) that, as regards Survey Nos. 68 and 75, the only remedy which the plaintiffs had was in the first instance to get the sale set aside under proceedings taken in execution under s. 244, Civ. Pro. Code (1882); and that, having failed to do so, they could not maintain their suit for redemption, because the sale was not void but only voidable. (2) That, as to Survey Nos. 71, 76 and 77, they passed into the possession of a stranger to the decree, whose sale was confirmed and who obtained possession and enjoyed it for two years; and that the mortgagee who subsequently purchased from him was entitled to rely on the title of his vendor. The ruling in 22 B. 624 has no application to the case of a purchase by a stranger. SAHADU MANAJI SHINDE v. DEVLIA JABA MAHAR, 14 Bom. L.R. 254=14 Ind. Cas. 780.

for money, brought this suit to recover possession of the property comprised in the usufructuary mortgage upon payment only of the amount due on that mortgage. Held, that the plaintiffs were not entitled to recover possession upon payment of the amount of the usufructuary mortgage alone, but were bound also to pay the amount of the simple mortgage which had been redeemed by the defendants. KIRAT v. In 1892, the mortgagees sued under the second deed to recover Rs. 3,030, praying for the sale of the property subject to the first mortgage. The suit resulted in the passing of a money-decree for Rs. 2,705. In execution of this money-decree, the mortgaged property was put up for sale subject to the first mortgage. The mortgagees obtained leave to bid at the auction, and purchased a portion of the property in auction sale, which was confirmed later on. The mortgagees were put in symbolical possession of the property in June 1896. Sometime in 1896, the mortgagees instituted a suit on their first mortgage and prayed for realising the mortgage amount from the portion of the property not purchased by them. It was held in that suit that the mortgagees should have recourse first to that portion which was purchased by them. In that suit the mortgagors did not contest the validity of the sale, but contended that the portion of the property purchased by the mortgagees should bear the whole burden of the mortgage. By upholding the sale, the mortgagors succeeded in protecting the rest of the mortgaged property. In 1900, the mortgagees filed a suit to recover by partition the share purchased by them, and a decree was granted. Plaintiffs (mortgagors) now sued for redemption of the share purchased by the mortgagees. Held, per Lucas, J.C., Crouch, A.J.C. (concurring), that, if the only previous litigation between the parties had been the suit in which the equity of redemption was purchased by the mortgagee, and the suit for partition and possession of the property purchased, the Court would be inclined to hold that the plaintiffs (mortgagors) had not lost their right to redeem, but the fact that, in the subsequent suit of 1896 to which the plaintiffs (mortgagors) were parties, the right to redeem was decreed to the mortgagees, altered the situation, and that therefore the plaintiffs (mortgagors) are now barred from claiming the right to redeem. Held also per Lucas, J.C., that a mortgagee, who puts up the mortgaged property to sale in execution of a money decree and himself purchases the equity of redemption, cannot thereby avoid the liability to be redeemed, even though the sale of the equity of redemption has been duly confirmed by the Court. (1 C. 337, 32 C. 296, P.C., 22 B. 624, 22 M. 647, 23 M. 377, 17 M.L.J. 163, R.; 35 C. 61, Cons) Held, per Crouch, A.J.C., (1) that, if there is a sale in contravention of the terms of s. 99 of the Transfer of Property Act, the sale is not a nullity, but is merely an irregularity, but may be set aside if the proper procedure be followed within the time allowed by the law (32 C. 296, P.C., 35 C. 61, R.) and that, in Sind where s. 99 is not in force, a sale in contravention of the equitable principle embodied therein can be nothing more than an irregularity, and is good until set aside (5 B.L. R. 450, 35 C. 61, D.; 5 C. 198, P.C., 16 C. 682, P.C., 32 C. 296, 22 B. 624, 23 B. 119, 23 M. 377, 24 M. 96, 30 M. 313, R.) Where an equity of redemption has been sold at a Court sale, and such sale is not a nullity, a mortgagor can claim redemption, without getting the sale first set aside, only on the theory that the purchaser of the equity of redemption is a trustee for him, or, in other words, only where the purchaser of the equity of redemption is guilty of "constructive fraud." Held also per Crouch, A.J.C., (2) that a mortgagee, is ordinarily, under no disability to purchase the equity of redemption from his mortgagor, and that, if he purchase it under circumstances which negative any presumption that he has taken an unfair advantage of his position, the sale is good. Held that, therefore, if a mortgagee take the precaution of obtaining the permission of the Court, before the purchase of the equity of redemption, in a sale held in execution of a money-decree, even though passed in respect of the mortgage-debt, he cannot be held guilty of constructive fraud, unless there be other circumstances constituting it, and hence does not take the property subject to redemption. WADERO SUMAR WD. (215)—Property purchased from heir of owner—Suit by purchaser against mortgagee from owner—Certificate of heirship under Act XXVII of 1860 not binding on defendant—Pleas open to mortgagee defendant.—Plaintiff, as purchaser from a daughter of one M, sued for possession of certain property which stood formerly in the name of M and was mortgaged by him to the defendant. Defendant alleged that M was only a trustee for three other persons who had subsequently executed a bond to him to secure a further sum of Rs. 350, arranging to charge the interest thereon upon the land. Plaintiff put in a certificate obtained by the daughter, under Act XXVII of 1860, enabling her to collect the debts of her deceased father M. The lower appellate Court refused to try the question whether the plaintiff's vendor was the daughter of M, and holding that the plaintiff failed to establish that M was a mere nominal party, affirmed the decision of the first Court dismissing the suit. On appeal by the defendant, the High Court held, in the first place, that, although, as between the daughter and any other immediate heir of M who could have appeared, the granting of the certificate under Act XXVII of 1860 might have been conclusive evidence that she was the daughter and heir of M, it was not so as against the defendant, who was not a party to, and not bound by, that proceeding, and that he was at liberty to show that plaintiff's vendor was not the daughter of M, and secondly, that although the original purchase in the name of M was prima facie evidence that he was the party legally interested in the purchased property and although the defendant, who took a mortgage from him, ought not to be allowed to defeat his claim to redeem, simply by setting up the title of a stranger, still, this could not bar the right of the defendant to show the true rights and interests of the parties at the time of the suit. BHUNDOO BUGUT v. SYED MAHOMED HOOSSEIN, 2 W.R. 70.

(216)—Purchaser of rights of mortgagor's heirs—Suit for possession of property bought—Onus on plaintiff, of proving right to equity of redemption and to possession on payment.—Plaintiff sued for possession of property alleged to have been mortgaged to the predecessor in title of the appellant. Plaintiff, the present respondent, claimed as purchaser of the rights of the heirs of a person to whom the rights of the original owner, the mortgagor, were alleged by the plaintiff to have been transferred by a sale in execution of a decree. The defence was that when plaintiff purchased he bought nothing, his vendors having had no interest whatever in the property. The lower Court gave the plaintiff a decree for an account of what was due on the mortgage, with order for possession if nothing should, on taking the account, be found to be due, or on immediate payment of the balance, due from him, if any balance should be found still due. The High Court, on appeal, reversed the decision of the lower Court and dismissed the suit. Before he could be entitled to a decree, he had to prove that the mortgage still existed and that he, as occupying the position of his vendors, was entitled to the equity of redemption and to possession on payment of what remained due. The High Court expressed that it could not concur in the conclusion of law at which the Judge of the lower Court had arrived. He had overlooked the important point that the plaintiff came into Court suing to eject those who were in possession, and who had been many years in possession, and that it was upon him to prove a strict legal title to the relief sought to be obtained by him. *ASHRUFFOONNISSA BEGUM v. a suit brought on a mortgage-bond. The defendants took a mortgage from the mortgagor of the plaintiff's assignor. The defendant's mortgage was of a subsequent date and it included the lands comprised in the plaintiff's decree. Subsequent to the date of the plaintiff's decree, the defendants obtained a decree upon their mortgage-bond. Both parties brought the mortgaged properties to sale and themselves purchased the lands. But the sale to the defendants was prior to that of the plaintiff. The defendants obtained possession of the lands purchased by them. At the time when the plaintiff's assignor brought the suit on his mortgage, he had no knowledge of the defendant's mortgage and, in consequence he did not make the defendants parties to his suit. But the defendants, though they had knowledge of the prior mortgage, failed to include the prior mortgagee in their suit. In the present suit, the plaintiff prayed for possession of the property or in the alternative that the defendants might redeem him or give up possession. Rampini and Brett, JJ., having held different views as to the maintainability of the suit, the appeal was referred to Mitra, J. Held, the decree obtained by the first mortgagee was valid in law, notwithstanding that the present defendants were not impleaded as defendants in the suit, which resulted in the decree. It was, however, imperfect and the sale under it had the same imperfection. The defendants, on the other hand, purchased under a decree for sale on their own mortgage. They took the property in the same condition as it stood at the date of the mortgage to them. If they desired to continue in possession, they were bound to satisfy the mortgage-debt which was imposed on the property before any right accrued to them under their mortgage. The respective rights of the parties could be adjusted in this suit. The plaint contained all the necessary allegations of fact and the reliefs, claimed in the alternative were all that could be demanded. There was no necessity for a fresh suit for sale. Held, further, that the doctrine of lis pendens did not apply in this case. If the title of the defendants was created, or the devolution of interest in their favour took place, during the pendency of the first mortgagee's suit, the doctrine of lis pendens would have applied. But the defendant's title related back to a date anterior to the first mortgagee's suit. ancestor of the plaintiff, his heir F pledged one of the mouzahs, Becharampore, with others as collateral security, in a bond in favour of plaintiff; and some years later executed a zur-i-peshgi pottah in favour of defendant who obtained possession by paying to plaintiff the money due under the first zur-i-peshgi lease. Plaintiff then sued F alone on his bond and obtained a decree, in execution of which he sold a share in Becharampore and purchased it himself. He now sues for possession and to have the superiority of his lien declared over defendant's zur-i-peshgi. Held that plaintiff is not entitled to possession before he pays off the whole of the amount advanced by the defendant to clear off the debt due under the first zur-i-peshgi lease, and that the holder of a subsequent encumbrance, by paying off a prior encumbrancer, acquires all the rights of the latter, to the extent of the amount actually paid by him for that purpose. BEKON SINGH v. D. owned a four biswa share in a village which included six plots of sir lands, that R. D. in 1850 mortgaged the share and the sir lands to one R. N., who in turn sub-mortgaged to J. G.; that R. D., died leaving a son B., during whose minority A. P. in virtue of his position as a co-sharer in the village, paid off the mortgage effected by R. D., obtained possession of the property and held it as a mortgagee himself, that thereafter on June 28th, 1875, A. P. mortgaged the six plots above-mentioned with four others to C, father of defendants 1 and 2. This was the mortgage which the plaintiff sought to redeem. As regards the first six plots, he alleged that, on February 20th, 1880, B redeemed the mortgage of the share but did not obtain possession of the plots which were in possession of the sub-mortgagee C.; that on January 20th, 1887, B's widow R. acquired from A. L., the son of A. P., the right to redeem the sub-mortgage of 1875 and that on May 30th, 1892, R. sold all her rights to the plaintiff. The plaintiff further alleged that he obtained from A. L., on March 23rd, 1893, a sale-deed of any rights that he might still have had in the six plots first mentioned as the heir of A. P. He contended that, either, under his purchase from R. in May, 1892, or under the deed of March, 1893, he acquired the right to redeem the mortgage of 1875 as far as the six plots were concerned. Held, that the first mentioned six plots having been mortgaged by R. D., as a separate property and sub-mortgaged to the father of defendants 1 and 2, and, having become on partition the separate property of the owner of the share, the mortgage and sub-mortgage were as valid, as if the plots had all along been the separate property of the owner of the share. Held, also, that a sub-mortgagee is a person, who has an interest in the mortgaged property within the meaning of s. 85 of the Transfer of Property Act, and that he should be made a party to a suit for redemption of the original mortgage. In such a suit, the mortgagor should first be given an opportunity of redeeming the mortgage made by him and securing possession of the whole property, and, if he fails to do so, the mortgagee should be given an opportunity of redeeming the sub-mortgage made by him and securing possession of the property affected by it. Held, further, that the sale-deed of May 30th, 1892, executed by R. in favour of the plaintiff, included the right to redeem that portion of his share which was held in mortgage by the father of the defendants 1 and 2. As regards the remaining four plots, the plaintiff said that A. P., was the superior proprietor and A. L. the under-proprietor of them; that A. P., by the deed of 1875, mortgaged both his own and his son's right; that he, the plaintiff, purchased the under-proprietary right from A. L., on August 17th, 1896, and thus acquired the right to redeem the mortgage of 1875 in respect to these plots. It was proved that the defendants 1 and 2, by deeds of November 1877 and July 1879, had purchased the superior proprietary right in these plots. In the mortgage of 1875, A. P., did not specify exactly what sort of right he was mortgaging. Regarding the first six plots, it was found that they did not originally form part of the four biswas share of R. D., but were the joint property of all the co-sharers; that R. D., had no right to mortgage them but did so; that the mortgage was taken over by A. P., and redeemed by B. who then obtained possession of the share. The six plots in question were subsequently upon a partition of a village allotted to R. as part of the four biswas share. Held, that the acquisition by the plaintiff of the under-proprietary right in the four plots above mentioned, could not entitle him to redeem the mortgage of the superior right. LACHMI NARAYAN v. (223)—Redemption, Suit for—Assignment of mortgage—Actionable claim—Transfer of property Act (IV of 1882), ss. 131 and 135.—A mortgage was made on the 2nd February, 1882. It was assigned on the 20th February 1886. The assignees obtained possession of the mortgaged property on the 1st July, 1886, in accordance with the provisions of the mortgage. The mortgagors claimed to redeem the property on the payment of Rs. 14,000, the price paid for the assignment. The assignees claimed to be paid the principal sum secured by the mortgage, and interest and compound interest amounting to Rs. 9,727-8-0 from the date of the mortgage to the 30th June, 1886, i.e., up to the time they obtained possession of the property. The Court of first instance decreed the claim on payment of the price of the assignment. Its judgment was silent as to the question whether the assignees were entitled to any interest on the price. The point raised in appeal was whether a claim to a debt secured by the mortgage of immoveable property was an "actionable claim" within the meaning of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882, before the amendment of that Act by Act II of 1900. Held, that a claim to a debt secured by a mortgage of immoveable property was not an 'actionable claim' within the meaning of s. 131; held, therefore, that s. 135, Transfer of Property Act, 1882, was not applicable to the present suit. Held, further, that, in order to redeem the mortgage, the mortgagors must pay the principal sum secured by the mortgage and the interest due for the period from the 2nd February, 1882, to the 30th June, 1886, namely, Rs. 9,727-8-0. JAWAHIR SINGH THAKUR v. After his death, his widow U. K. executed on the 25th July, 1881, another mortgage-deed for Rs. 24,000 in favour of the mortgagees for the money due on the former deed. On the death of U. K., the dispute among the reversionary heirs of M was settled in 1887 so far as the mutation proceedings went by the entry of the name of the defendant's father as owner of 8 annas and of the father of R and his brothers and one D as owner of 4 annas each. On the 28th May, 1893, R and his brothers deposited, Rs. 24,000 in Court and had notice, under s. 83, Act IV of 1882, issued to G who had become assignee of the mortgage calling on him to take the money and let the mortgage be redeemed. On the 16th June, 1893, the defendant executed a deed of mortgage of his 8 annas share for Rs. 12,000 in favour of the sons and a partner of the assignee, the terms of which were that the "mortgage should be redeemable at the end of ten years; if the mortgagor failed to pay the interest then after 5 years, the mortgagees would be entitled to possession." It was further stated in the deed that the money was borrowed to pay off the debt due on the defendant's share under the deed of the 25th July, 1881. The assignee after this intimated to R and his brothers that only Rs. 6,000 was due from them on the mortgage, the rest having been redeemed as he had also secured Rs. 6,000 from D. He, therefore, took out Rs. 6,000 of the Rs. 24,000 deposited by R and his brothers and returned the deed of the 25th July, 1881, to R and his brothers. Thereafter the defendant R and his brothers and D got possession of the village according to their recorded share, subsequently R and his brothers obtained Civil Court decree for the shares of the defendant and D and thus got possession of the whole village sometime in 1898. The plaintiffs who are the representatives of the sons and partner of the assignee G brought a suit on the 7th October, 1898, against the defendant and also R and his brothers and D for possession as mortgagees of the 8 annas share mortgaged by the deed of the 16th June, 1893, on the allegation that the interest had not been paid for 6 years and they were entitled to possession, and that, if they could not have possession, for sale of the mortgaged property. The Court decreed the claim against the defendants personally and dismissed the suit as against the other defendants and as to possession or sale. The defendant appealed from this decree and the question at issue was simply whether the defendant had been properly made personally liable for the money due under the mortgage-deed of the 16th June, 1893, or whether the decree should have been one capable of being enforced against the property by possession or sale and against the defendants actually in possession of the same. Held that the defendant was the sole person liable under the deed of the 16th June, 1893; the other defendants (R and his brothers, etc.) were not parties to it nor they were his representatives. Though the debt, for satisfaction of which the mortgage-money of the deed of 1893 purported to have been borrowed, was no doubt an ancestral debt on the property, yet the defendant had no right to redeem any part of that debt or to create a further charge on the property for that purpose, as he had no title to any part of the property and was not in legal possession of it at the time and that, therefore, that pro-

erty was not liable for the mortgage debt due under the deed of 1893. The defendant must be held to have borrowed the money of the deed of 1893 to pay off his share of the mortgage-money of the deed of 1881 and he must be held to have received and applied the money to that purpose. The consideration received by the defendant was redemption in his favour and restoration of actual possession to him of the share he claimed, and he was, therefore, liable to fulfil his obligations under the deed. CHANDRIKA BAKSH SINGH v. But, the puisne encumbrancers obtained a declaration that the decree was not binding on them. Hence the present suit. Held that the puisne mortgagees, if they sought to redeem, must pay the full amount of principal found to be due on the mortgage, with interest at the stipulated rate up to the date of payment, notwithstanding the fact that the former decree did not allow him interest at this rate. RAM PERSHAD v. The principal terms of the deed were that the mortgagor should pay the principal within three years, that he should pay interest until the principal was paid, that he should not alienate the mortgaged property until the principal and interest had been paid, that if he did not pay the principal and interest on the promised date he should place the mortgagee in possession of the property, that if he failed to do so the mortgagee might obtain possession through the Court, that from the date of the mortgagee's obtaining possession the mortgagor should not have any claim to the profits of the property and the mortgagee should not have any claim to the interest, and that after twenty years in the month of Jeth the mortgagor should pay the principal and arrears of interest and redeem the mortgaged property. The respondent pleaded that he was willing to pay the amount due on the deed, that the appellant therefore was not entitled to the possession of the property, that the twenty years' period fixed for payment by the deed of mortgage was very hard and in view of the provisions of s. 74 of Act IX of 1872, as amended by Act VI of 1899, could not be enforced in a Court of equity. Held, that the provisions of s. 74 of Act IX of 1872, as amended by Act VI of 1899, were not applicable, as they applied to cases in which pecuniary compensation was sought for breach of contract. Held, that the mortgage was an anomalous mortgage and not a combination of a simple mortgage, and usufructuary mortgage and that therefore according to the provisions of s. 98 of the Transfer of Property Act, the rights and liabilities of the parties must be determined by their contract as evidenced by the mortgage-deed. Held, that according to the contract as evidenced by the deed, the mortgagee was entitled to possession of the mortgaged property in the event of the mortgagor failing to pay the mortgage-money within three years from the date of the deed and on obtaining possession to retain the same for a period of twenty years, and the mortgagor could not redeem until that period had expired. Held, further, that the condition in the mortgage-deed that if the mortgagor failed to pay the mortgage-money within the time fixed, the mortgagee should be entitled to possession of the property for twenty years and that the mortgagor should not be entitled to redeem within such period was not a restriction or "clog" on the right to redeem. TIKAM SINGH v. It was also stated that the mortgagor had taken a further advance and covenanted that he would not redeem the usufructuary mortgage unless he would also pay the money under the second bond: Held, that the second bond created a charge upon the property, and that, in face of the covenant contained in the bond, the mortgagor was not entitled to redeem the first mortgage, unless and until he would pay the money due under the second bond. MUSAMMAT PANCHU v. DEO KARAN, 6 Ind. Cas. 165. (A.W.N. 1906, 267, Rel. on.)

(236)—Clog on redemption—Second mortgage on same property—Agreement to redeem both mortgages simultaneously.—Certain mortgagors, having taken a further advance on the security of a second mortgage of the same property, covenanted in the second mortgage that they should not be at liberty to redeem it, without, at the same time, redeeming the first. Held, that this was a valid covenant and did not amount to a clog or fetter on the right of redemption. MUHAMMAD ABDUL HAMID v. JAIRAJ MAL, A.W.N. 1906, 267 = 3 A.L.J. 768. [R., 6 A.L.J. 255, 6 A.L.J. 654 = 31 A. 482.]

(237)—Mortgage—Consolidation—Clog on equity of redemption—Mashrut-ul-rehn.—A executed an usufructuary mortgage in respect of certain property in favour of B. Later on A executed another mortgage-deed styled Mashrut-ul-rehn in which he stipulated that he would not be entitled to redeem the original mortgage without at the same time paying off the further debt:—Held, that both the mortgages were consolidated together, and that A could not redeem the earlier mortgage without redeeming the later. HARGOBIND v. TULARAM, 10 Ind. Cas. 222. (7 A.L.J. 821, 7 Ind. Cas. 115, R.)

(238)—Redemption—Clog—Covenant to redeem earlier and subsequent mortgages together—Mortgages executed by different persons—Hindu law—Joint family—Right of after born son to contest alienation.—J, P and C were members of a joint Hindu family. J and P executed a mortgage in 1871 in respect of certain joint property in favour of B. In 1877 J and C executed another mortgage in favour of the same mortgagee in respect of the same property. In the mortgage of 1877 they entered a covenant that the earlier mortgage could not be redeemed unless the amount of the subsequent mortgage was also paid. The son of J, who was not born at the time of the execution of either of the mortgages, wanted to redeem the mortgage of 1871 only. Held, that, in the face of the covenant contained in the subsequent mortgage, he could not redeem the earlier mortgage alone. Held, further, that the plaintiff, who was not in existence at the date of the mortgage of 1877 and had no interest in the property to which it related, could not contest the validity of that mortgage. SHEO KUMAR UPADHYA v. JITTU SINGH, 9 Ind. Cas. 52.

(239)—Suit for redemption—Adverse possession of third party.—A suit for redemption will fail, if it is found that actual possession of the property was, not with the mortgagee, but with a third person deriving title from one who had enjoyed the property adversely against the mortgagor and the mortgagee for more than 12 years. NIHAL SINGH v. MUTSADDI, 161 P.R. 1889. (2 M. 226, Appr.; 124 P.R. 1883, R.)

(240)—Civ. Pro. Code, 1892, s. 43—Previous suit for redemption dismissed—Subsequent suit on admission of mortgage—Suit to redeem—No specific mortgage alleged—Effect.—Where a previous suit for redemption had been dismissed on the ground that the specific mortgage alleged had not been proved and that no decree could be passed on the admission by defendant of some other previous mortgage, held that a subsequent suit for redemption on the basis of the admission made in the previous suit was barred under s. 43, Civ. Pro. Code. There was only one cause of action, and the plaintiff, having sued on a false claim while aware of his true right, should be taken to have relinquished his real claim. [Overruled, 29 M. 153, F.B. = 16 M.L.J. 48; Diss., 28 M. 406; Disc., 26 M. 760 = 13 M.L.J. 448; R., 17 C.P.L.R. 178, 31 M. 385.] It is not necessary that a plaintiff suing to redeem should allege and prove a specific mortgage. He can get a decree on an admission of mortgage previously made by the defendant. (Obiter). (Note. This case was a sequel to the case reported in 18 M. 462). RANGASAMI PILLAI v. he sold the share to the second respondent, who sued for redemption of the mortgage and in August 1881 obtained a decree against the appellant for possession of the share on payment of a certain sum in 1290 Fasli. The decree did not provide for foreclosure in case of non-payment by the decree-holder. An application for execution of the decree was dismissed in 1886 as being barred by limitation. In 1900, the second respondent joined with the third respondent in selling the entire village to the first respondent. The appellant sued for pre-emption of the share of the third respondent alleging that, in the event which had happened, he had become the proprietor of the share which had been mortgaged to him. One of the questions for decision was whether a second suit for redemption was maintainable. Held, that a second suit for redemption was not maintainable against the appellant. RAM DAYAL v. RAJA RAMPAL SINGH, 6 O.C. 367. [R., 10 O.C. 81.]

(242)—Suit for—Mortgage of 1849 in which no time for redemption was fixed, redemption of—Act XIII of 1866, s. 3—Limitation Act (XV of 1877), sch. II, arts. 134 and 144—Res judicata.—R and others, who constituted a joint-Hindu-family mortgaged with possession the property in dispute to U in 1849, but did not deliver possession. After R's death, D became the head and manager of the joint-family and he got his name alone entered in settlement papers as the sole proprietor of the property. U sued D alone for possession of the mortgaged property and got a decree in 1865. In 1865, another member of the joint-family sued D the Settlement Court to have his name entered along with that of D in equal half shares and got a decree in 1873. A similar suit was brought by K, one of the present plaintiffs, in 1866, which was finally decided in 1883. In 1868, D alone sued U for redemption unsuccessfully. In 1871, U mortgaged the property as his own absolute property to, J, but remained in possession till 1875, when, in execution of a decree obtained against his son H, it was sold by auction and purchased by J and came into his possession in 1880. The present suit for redemption of this property was brought by the plaintiffs, K and others, against D, H, J and others, defendants after more than 12 years from the date of J's purchase. The cause of action, according to the plaintiffs, arose out of the decree of 1865. The Counsel for the appellants admitted before the lower Court that, if the plaintiffs had to rely on the mortgage of 1849, as the starting point, their case must fail. Held, that the suit must be considered to be one for redemption of the mortgage dated 1849, that an erroneous admission of the plaintiff's Counsel before the Court on a point of law was not binding on the plaintiffs. Held, that, as the mortgage-deed did not fix any time when the mortgage must be redeemed, Act XIII of 1866 did not apply and the suit was not barred under s. 3 of that Act. Held, that art. 134 of the Indian Limitation Act was no bar as the word "purchase" in that article did not include a "Mortgage." Held, that the suit, having been brought after more than 12 years from the date of J's purchase, was barred by art. 144 of the Limitation Act. Held, further, that the suit, which was brought by D for redemption of the mortgage in 1868 and which was decided against him, operated as res judicata in the present suit. THAKUR KALKA v. THAKUR DEBI SINGH, 8 O.C. 233 (B.)

(243)—Res judicata—Suit for redemption—Two appeals in the lower Court—Two decrees passed—Appeal against one—Limitation—Acknowledgment—Joint mortgagees—Signature of khewat by one of them.—In a suit for redemption, the Court of first instance decreed it in respect of one-third of the property and dismissed it as to the rest. Both the plaintiff and the defendants appealed to the Court below which decided the appeals in one judgment. In the result the plaintiff's appeal was dismissed and the defendant's appeal was decreed. The plaintiff filed one appeal to the High Court:—Held that the whole appeal was not barred by the rule of res judicata. The result of the dismissal of the plaintiff's appeal by the Court below was that it was not open to the plaintiff to ask for the redemption of the property to the extent of two-third. (7 A.L.J. 861, F.B., D.) The mortgage was made in favour of three persons jointly. In the Khewat of 1875, L, G, and H were set forth as mortgagors, and, B, P and Bh, were set out as mortgagees. The wajib-ul-arz which referred to the Khewat was signed by B alone. The date of the mortgage was alleged in the plaint to be 1849, but the plaintiffs failed to prove when the mortgage was made. Held, that one only of the joint mortgagees having signed the Khewat, there was not a sufficient acknowledgment as against all the mortgages, and consequently the suit was barred by limitation. (1 A. 117, D.) Quære.—Whether the signing of a lengthy wajib-ul-arz, which refers among many other things to the khewat, can be considered an acknowledgment of the title of the mortgagor within the meaning of the Act? CHUNNI v. (7 W.R. 564, 34 C. 223, R.) Where a mortgagor brings a suit and obtains a decree for redemption, he cannot maintain a second suit for recovery of surplus collections made by the mortgagee, during the period of the mortgage, s. 43 of the Code of Civil Procedure being a bar to the maintenance of that suit. Per Karamat Husain, J.—The right to claim the surplus profits is synchronous with the right to claim possession of the mortgaged property, and to hold that the cause of action for claiming excess collections accrues when the mortgage-debt has been satisfied, is inconsistent with the principles on which the law of redemption is based. RAM DIN v. (245)—Practice—Proceedings subsequent to preliminary decrees for redemption and sale—Limitation Act (XV of 1877), sch. II, arts. 178 and 179—Civ. Pro. Code (Act XIV of 1882), s. 232.—Proceedings subsequent to preliminary decrees for redemption and sale are not governed by the Civ. Pro. Code or the Limitation Act. The appellant was the assignee of a mortgage-decree passed against the two respondents on the 22nd June, 1904 by the Sub-Divisional Court of Toungoo. The property to which the decree related was in the Pegu District. The original decree-holder applied to the Sub-Divisional Court of Pyu in the Toungoo District to execute the decree on the 29th January, 1906, but this application was dismissed for non-payment of process fees. The appellant next applied on the 9th August, 1907 to the Sub-Divisional Court of Toungoo describing himself as the assignee of the decree, and asked for a certificate of non-satisfaction to be forwarded to the Pegu Sub-Divisional Court in whose jurisdiction the mortgaged property was situated. The application was granted and in the certificate the appellant was described as decree-holder. The proceedings in Pegu were successful and the appellant took no further steps till the 4th August 1908, when he applied to the Sub-Divisional Court of Toungoo to issue notices under proviso (4 L.B.R. 83, F.) to s. 232 of the Civ. Pro. Code, 1882. The Sub-Divisional Court held that the application was time-barred as the application of the 29th January, 1906 was made to the wrong Court and more than three years had elapsed from the date of the original decree. This decision was confirmed by the Divisional Court: Held, that the application which was dismissed by the Sub-Divisional Court was not an application to enforce the decree for sale, but a preliminary application for issue of notice under s. 232 of the Civ. Pro. Code, which did not apply to those proceedings, and that the proper course was for the assignee to apply to the Court for an order of sale in pursuance of the preliminary decree, as the assignee's status had already been recognized by the Toungoo Court in the earlier proceedings of 1907 and his name had been substituted for that of the original decree-holder. Held, further, that the application of the 4th August,

1908 was unnecessary and that the lower Court was technically right in dismissing it; but that the dismissal did not affect the appellant's right as assignee of the original mortgagee to obtain an order absolute for sale of the property in continuation of the decree of 22nd June, 1904, and that, if he applied for such an order, his application would not be governed by art. 178 or 179, Limitation Act. AHMED ALI v. (246)—Suit to redeem kanom—Contract of renewal, barred—Right of redemption.—Where the manager of a Malabar Edom brought a suit in 1890 to redeem a kanom which had expired in 1885, and the defendant set up an agreement which the former manager had entered into with him for a renewal of the kanom for another twelve years, held that the renewal was intended to take effect from 1885, and that, therefore, the defendant's right to set up the agreement was barred by limitation and that, consequently, the plaintiff was entitled to redeem. Held also that, if the defendant could maintain a suit for specific performance, plaintiff would not be entitled to a decree for possession. PANGUTCHAN v. PARAMESWARA PATTAR, 6 M.L.J. 33. (16 M. 464, Diss.) [Overruled, 29 M. 336, F.B. = 16 M.L.J. 395 = 1 M.L.T. 153.]

(247)—Execution of deed of sale and agreement to re-sell on same day—Transaction not amounting to English or anomalous mortgage.—Where, on one and the same day, two documents were executed, one of which purported to be a deed of sale and the other an agreement to re-sell the property to the vendor, if the amount of the consideration were re-paid in a certain number of years, the two documents together would not constitute either an English or an anomalous mortgage and the transaction amounted to a deed of sale on the one side and an agreement to re-transfer on the fulfilment of a certain condition on the other side. Prior to the passing of the Transfer of Property Act, there was no law in force in the Central Provinces providing for the foreclosure or redemption of an English mortgage between Natives. PARMANAND SARAF v. (248)—Mortgage money—Court deposit—How far can be accepted as security for mesne profits.—Abdur Rahim, J.—The redemption money deposited in Court by plaintiff may be accepted as security for mesne profits to be furnished by him, as the liability to pay mesne profits would arise only if the decree for redemption is set aside in appeal, in which case plaintiff will become entitled either to draw the money deposited in Court or to compel the defendants to refund the same. Per Sundara Iyer, J., contra. The money deposited in Court cannot be accepted as security, as plaintiff was no longer the owner of the money and had no disposing power over it. Defendants were the present owners of the money and the reversal of the redemption decree will only create a debt in favour of plaintiff as from the date of reversal. A mere possibility of a debt cannot be transferred and could not be accepted as security. SINGARAM CHETTIAR v. KALYANASUNDARAM PILLAI, M.W.N. 1912, 397=11 M.L.T. 248=15 Ind. Cas. 383.

(249)—Purchase by mortgagee of equity of redemption in portion of mortgaged property—Right of mortgagee to enforce his lien over the rest.—A mortgagee does not, by purchasing the equity of redemption in a portion of the mortgaged property, lose his lien over the rest. Every part of the mortgaged property being liable for his debt, he can enforce his right under the mortgage over the remaining portion of the property. GANPAT RAO v. RAMCHAND, 2 C.P.L.R. 90.

(250)—Mortgagee not put in possession entitled to claim interest—Arrears of unpaid interest, to be paid at the time of redemption—Covenant to pay interest not recoverable out of the profits of the property.—Held, that, where, in a mortgage-deed, there was a distinct undertaking, on the part of the mortgagor, to pay any amount on account of interest, which was not recoverable out of the profits of the property, and the mortgagor failed to deliver possession of the property to the mortgagee, the latter was entitled to refuse redemption, until the whole of the interest due during such period was paid. PHUL CHAND v. MR. H. H. SANDILANDS, 10 O.C. 29. (17 B. 425, 9 O.C. 144, D.) [R., 11 O.C. 323.]

(251)—Usufructuary mortgage—Covenant by mortgagor to pay mortgagee arrears of rent due at time of redemption—Payment by mortgagee of arrears of revenue—Right of mortgagee to reimbursement before redemption.—Where a second mortgagee of a certain property sued for redemption of a prior usufructuary mortgage, held he was not entitled to do so, unless he paid, along with the mortgage-money, the arrears of rent due as per covenant in the prior mortgage-deed, and also the amount of the arrears of Government revenue paid by the prior mortgagee to save the property from revenue-sale, although this latter provision was not in the deed itself. GIRDHAR LAL v. BHOLA NATH, 10 A. 611=A.W.N. 1888, 238. [Appr., 22 B. 410; R., 28 A. 593=3 A.L.J. 435=A.W.N. 1906, 150, 13 A. 195.]

(253)—Lease—Ticca and Zur-i-peshgee—Usufructuary mortgage—Redemption before expiry of term—Act XXVIII of 1855—Reg. XV of 1793, s. 10.—A lease granted by a debtor to his creditor for a certain term at a fixed jumma, provided that the lessee after paying the Government revenue and a certain sum to the lessor annually without claiming any abatement, should apply the balance of the jumma in reduction of the principal and interest of the debt till the expiry of the term, when the balance of the debt remaining unpaid should be paid in a lump sum, and if it was not so paid the lease was to continue. It was also provided that the lessor should not alienate the property until the debt was paid. Held that the transaction was partly in the nature of a ticca, and partly in the nature of a zur-i-peshgee and was not a pure usufructuary mortgage, and that the debtor could not redeem the lands by paying the principal and interest before the expiry of the term. Held, also, that even if it be considered as a usufructuary mortgage, it having been executed after the passing of Act XXVIII of 1855, the terms of s. 10 of Reg. XV of 1793, would not apply, and the mortgagor could not redeem before the expiry of the term. KHAJAH LOTF ALI v. GUJRAJ THAKOOR, 11 W.R. 408. [F., 12 W.R. 527.]

(254)—Purchase by prior mortgagee in execution of his decree—Right of redemption of subsequent mortgagee on paying mortgage amount.—A subsequent mortgagee is not entitled to redeem the prior mortgage by simply paying the price for which the prior mortgagee may have purchased the mortgaged property at an auction-sale held in execution of the decree obtained by him on his mortgage, without having joined the subsequent mortgagee as a party. Where he elects to redeem the prior mortgage under such circumstances, he, like the mortgagor, will not be entitled to do so save upon tender or payment of the full amount due on it. The omission to make the subsequent mortgagee a party to the prior mortgagee's suit has the effect of relegating the subsequent mortgagee to the position in which he was before the institution of that suit. It is on that ground that it is open to the second mortgagee to redeem the first mortgage, but he could not do so except on the terms on which he could have obtained redemption before the institution of the first mortgagee's suit or under the decree passed in that suit, namely, by payment of the whole amount due under that mortgage. DIPNARAIN SINGH v. HIRA SINGH, 19 A. 527=A.W.N. 1897, 147. (21 C. 366, 16 B. 486, A.W.N. 1895, 45, D.) (256)—Conveyance in consideration of payment of all debts of owner—Right of mortgagee to claim unsecured debt along with mortgage-debt—Tacking allowed to avoid multiplicity of actions.—The main question in this case was, whether the plaintiff was entitled to redeem the property in question without also paying the amount of a simple contract debt owing to the mortgagee by the original mortgagor, K, from whom the plaintiff derived his title. Although, admittedly, K could have redeemed the mortgage without paying the unsecured debt due by him, it was held that, as K had, by a voluntary conveyance in favour of the plaintiff, made over in his life-time all his property to the plaintiff with the obligation of paying all his (K's) debts, and as due effect could not be given to the whole of the instrument executed by K, unless it be construed as a conveyance to plaintiff charged, as between him and K, with the payment of all debts of K, the mortgagee should be allowed to tack the unsecured debt in question with the mortgage-debt, for the purpose of avoiding circuitry of actions on the same principle as, by English Law, a mortgagee is entitled to tack on a simple contract debt as against executors or volunteers under the mortgagor. RAGHO GOVIND PARAJPE v. BALVANT AMRIT GOLE, 7 B. 101. [D., 18 M. 368.]

(257)—Suit for redemption of mortgage—Decree without clause directing foreclosure—Omission to execute decree—Bar of fresh suit for redemption.—In this case, a mortgagor obtained in 1858, in a suit to redeem the mortgage, a decree for possession of the mortgaged property on payment of a particular sum. No time was fixed in the decree for payment, nor did the decree provide for foreclosure in the event of the non-payment of the mortgage money. The decree was never executed, but in 1878 a second suit was brought to redeem the mortgage; and it was held that, by reason of default in the payment within the time prescribed by law for execution of decrees, the order for redemption must be taken to have operated as a judgment of foreclosure so that the mortgagor's second suit for redemption was not maintainable. GANSAVANT BAL SAVANT v. NARAYAN DHOND SAVANT, 7 B. 467. (258)—Sale by mortgagor pending suit for redemption—Omission to redeem in enforcement of decree—Purchaser pendente lite—Subsequent suit for redemption, not maintainable.—One M. had sued for partition, and the Court, finding a mortgage set up by R, passed a decree for redemption, on payment by M, of the amount due under the mortgage. Plaintiff who had purchased from M a portion of the property pending the suit, brought this present suit for redemption against M and R, since M who had sold away the whole property did not execute the former decree for redemption. He lodged the amount found to be due on account of the equity of redemption of which he had become assignee, and, relying on this as a sufficient tender, claimed restoration of the land from R. The lower appellate Court held that the plaintiff was entitled to redeem the property, but the High Court decided that the plaintiff's suit was unsustainable. If the rights of M centred in the plaintiff by the sale to him, they came to him subject to the vent of the suit then pending, in which he did not choose to get himself made a co-plaintiff. The assignment to the plaintiff having been made pendente lite, and he not having been a party to the suit by the assignor, he was bound by the decree against the latter and had no right to bring a separate suit, and the plaintiff and his assignor having failed to redeem within six months from the decree, as ordered thereby, both were foreclosed. Nor could the plaintiff, by any step, prevent the right of the mortgagee against M from growing and perfecting itself during the six months allowed for redemption. *RAMCHANDRA KOLATKAR v. (259)—Redemption—Proof of mortgage other than one sued on—Right to claim redemption of mortgage so proved.—Where, in a suit for redemption, the plaintiff was unable to prove the specific mortgage alleged by him but there was proof of the existence of another subsisting mortgage on the property, a decree for redemption could not be passed in favour of the plaintiff on the footing of the mortgage so proved. *VASUDEVAN NAMBUDERI v. of certain land on the allegation that the defendant held it as mortgagee, and the defendant claimed to hold it as Inam free from payment of Government revenue, and it was found that he held it under this title since 1824 up to the commencement of the suit, held, that the title of the defendant, which is thus fortified by long enjoyment, could not be disturbed without clear and unmistakable proof of the mortgage. RAMRUDEEGOWDA v. (262)—Decree for redemption—Time fixed for payment of mortgage amount—Omission of consequences of default—Order allowing payment after date fixed—Validity.—Where a decree for redemption of mortgage, prescribed the time within which to redeem but did not say in terms that if the amount were not paid within that time, the right to redeem should become barred,—and the decree-holder was allowed to deposit after the time fixed, held, on an application for revision, that the order of the Court was not one to call for interference under s. 622, Civ. Pro. Code, as it was only ministerial and did not prejudice the right of the mortgagee, if any, owing to non-payment within time. BANDHU v. SHAH MUHAMMAD TAKI, A. W. N. 1888, 119. [R., 14 A. 520.]

(263)—Mortgage—Redemption of one of several prior usufructuary mortgages held by one mortgagee—Position of subsequent mortgagee.—K. N. and G. were joint owners of a khata—K's share being half and N's and G's the other half. In 1887, the three mortgaged half the khata to M. for Rs. 600. The mortgage was to be without possession, unless default in payment of interest was made. On the 20th January, 1900, M. obtained a consent decree for possession of the land mortgaged, on the condition, that the land would be released on payment of Rs. 650. B. the defendant in the present suit deposited in Court Rs. 650/- to the credit of M, who on the 17th August, 1900, withdrew the money without prejudice to his rights under the second mortgage which K. had executed on the 22nd March, 1899, creating a further charge on the one-fourth share of the khata already mortgaged by him, providing that, on failure to pay interest as agreed therein, M. would recover possession. Default having occurred, M., on the 29th August, 1900, sued for possession. B., who was impleaded as a co-defendant, pleaded that he had paid off the first mortgage and stood in the shoes of the mortgagee in respect of that mortgage, having on the 11th July, 1900, got a mortgage of 3/4ths of certain specified fields in the khata. Held, that the plaintiff's claim was valid and B's plea was not maintainable, as B had notice of the existence of the prior and mesne mortgages before the execution of his mortgage and no equities arose in his favour. There is no authority for the proposition that, where two mortgages have been executed in favour of one mortgagee, the mortgagor may redeem the prior mortgage and use it as a shield against

(264)—Decree for redemption—Deposit by decree-holder towards redemption—Subsequent attachment of same amount for costs and withdrawal of same from Court—Judgment-debtor's right to recover possession.—In a suit for redemption, there was a decree in favour of plaintiff, with costs. The plaintiff having had to pay a certain amount into Court towards his redemption, he did so. He afterwards, got a certain portion of the amount, attached in execution of his decree for cost, and withdrew the attached amount. Thereafter, he got possession under the decree for redemption. Subsequently, the judgment-debtor-mortgagees applied for restoration of possession of the mortgaged premises, on the ground that the amount deposited had been reduced by the attachment, and the lower Court put them in possession. Held, on appeal, the lower Court's order giving possession to the judgment-debtors was wrong; and that the decree-holder was entitled to deduct the amount due to him for costs out of the amount he had to deposit, and that, if, instead of doing so, he attached a portion of the amount deposited, the procedure would not be wrong or illegal; the High Court directed the judgment-debtors to put the decree-holder back in possession. PARMANAND v. Tenancy Act (II of 1901), s. 20—Mortgage of occupancy holding—Redemption of a prior valid mortgage—Rights of mortgagees.*—A usufructuary mortgage of an occupancy holding was executed after the passing of the North-Western Provinces Tenancy Act. The mortgagee sued to redeem a prior mortgage of the same holding, whose mortgage was executed before the passing of the Act. Held, that the mortgage, under which the plaintiff claimed, was invalid and unlawful, as contravening s. 20 of the Act, that the plaintiff had acquired no right under his mortgage and was not entitled to redeem the prior mortgage, whose mortgage was valid under the law. BANMALI PANDE v. three of the members of the above family. To the foreclosure suit brought by the mortgagee against A, B and C, the sons and grandsons of the mortgagors, A, B and C, were not made parties. After the foreclosure decree was made absolute, when the mortgagee sought possession, the co-parceners, who had not been made parties to the former suit, instituted a suit for redemption. The lower Court, while decreeing redemption, held that the price of redemption should be fixed at what was found payable in the former suit. Held; If it be taken as a general proposition that the price of redemption, to persons, who should have been, but were not, made parties to the foreclosure decree is to be limited to the sum fixed by that decree, regardless of the time which may have passed since the decree was made, then the rule laid down would be at variance with the principle enunciated in 15 C.P.L.R. 26. It is difficult to see how a foreclosure-decree could be regarded as non-existent with respect to the redemption rights of the plaintiffs, and yet be used against the correlative rights of the defendants. No undue advantage would be given to the defendants, if a fresh mortgage account, unconnected with the account which formed the basis of the foreclosure-decree, is now made the foundation of the redemption-decree. The mortgagees are not under any legal obligation to create an opportunity for redemption, by the mortgagors or any person claiming under them, at any particular time. Their obligation is limited to this—that whenever they might claim to foreclose against any such person, they must give him a period to be fixed by the Court, within which to exercise his right of redemption. The mortgage-debt remains a debt which the plaintiffs are bound to pay according to the terms of the deed, and they are therefore liable for daily increasing interest while they choose to leave the debt unpaid. This increase of interest is not due to any fault of the defendants. The plaintiffs are not bound to await a foreclosure-suit by the defendants before they seek redemption. They could have paid and redeemed on any day after the due date fixed by the bond. A decree, which is a dead letter so far as it grants relief to the decree-holders, is equally ineffective to bind them, in respect of the rights of persons not parties to such decree. (18 C. 164, 19 A. 527, 31 M. 258, R.) No Court of equity, justice and good conscience, would allow redemption in 1908, on payment only of the amount declared due in 1901, the mortgagees having in the meantime been kept out of possession of the mortgaged property. If the defendants obtained physical possession for any time, they must account for the profits, if any, taken by them during that period, or lose their interest therefor. If, though in possession for a term, they, in fact, obtained no produce from the land, they are still liable to allow something for their use and occupation of it. If the physical possession of the plaintiffs has never been disturbed, under cover of foreclosure-decree, by the defendants or any person claiming under them, then the calculation will be one of unbroken interest from the date of the bond to the date of redemption. The account must be made without any reference to the foreclosure decree, which, for the purpose of this case, must be regarded as having no existence. It is not permissible to make any assumption or conjecture as to what would have been the precise result—redemption or foreclosure, if plaintiffs had been joined in the foreclosure suit. GHASIRAM v. JHINGWA, 4 N.L.R. 168.

(269)—Interest—Delay in suing—Redemption by co-mortgagor of his share in the property—Right of mortgagee to allow partial redemption—Jurisdiction of Civil or Revenue Court—Mortgage with possession—Mortgagor undertaking to assist mortgagee in recovering produce, status of.—Mere delay in suing is no sufficient reason for refusing to allow a mortgagee full interest at the stipulated rate. A mortgagee is legally entitled to allow redemption by a co-mortgagor of his share of the mortgaged property only. Where a mortgage deed recites that possession is given to the mortgagee and the mortgagor only agrees to assist the mortgagee in recovering produce from the tenants who are in cultivating possession of the mortgaged land, a suit for recovery of possession by the mortgagee against the mortgagor is cognizable by a Civil Court. A mere engagement by the mortgagor to assist the mortgagee in recovering produce from tenants does not make him a tenant under the mortgagee; he is at most in some sort an agent for the mortgagee. (272)—Mortgage—Subsequent mortgagee's right to redeem prior mortgage—Inconsistent plea taken up by defendant—Suit to redeem part of mortgaged property.—In September 1879, K, P and B executed a usufructuary mortgage in favour of S for Rs. 16,000. In February 1880, S executed and registered a deed by which he permitted the mortgagors to retain possession of a part of the mortgage property by way of maintenance. In December 1880 K mortgaged a one-fourth share of the property to J for Rs. 8,700. The term was thirty years. J paid S Rs. 12,000 and obtained possession of three-fourths of the mortgaged property, P at the same time paying Rs. 4,000 and obtaining possession of his one-fourth share. In 1897 B executed a mortgage in favour of the plaintiff, under which the latter became entitled to two-fourths of the property as the interest of B. The plaintiff sued J, for possession of such interest on payment of Rs. 8,000 out of Rs. 12,000, the money which J had paid S. J pleaded that the plaintiff could not redeem a part of the property and must sue to redeem the whole of it on payment of Rs. 12,000, and the plaintiff's suit was dismissed on this plea, when the plaintiff brought another suit for possession of the whole property on payment of Rs. 12,000, against J., the latter contended that the plaintiff as the mortgagee of B's interest could redeem those interests only and could not redeem those of K. Held, that the plaintiff, having been forced to take up the position which J assigned to him, could not afterwards turn round and say that plaintiff could only redeem B's interest and not the whole property. Held, further, that, the plaintiff, who was seeking to redeem S's mortgage, was not affected by K's mortgage to J. for thirty years. Held further, that, at the time at which J paid off S's mortgage, S had as mortgagee no right to the profits of the lands, and therefore J by paying off the mortgagee did not acquire any right to the same. *JAWAHIR SINGH v. mortgaged property—Mortgagor cannot redeem whole against the will of the mortgagee—Adverse possession of mortgagee—Held, that, in a redemption suit, the general rule is that a person interested in part only of the mortgaged property may insist upon redeeming the whole of it, but where the mortgagee has acquired part of the mortgaged property, a purchaser of part only cannot redeem more than his own share, against the will of the mortgagee. *B. There is no distinction between acquisition by purchase and acquisition by inheritance on the part of a mortgagee. (1 Ind. Cas. 779 = 6 A.L.J. 387 = 31 A. 395, F.) A, as the sole owner of certain property, mortgaged it to B. A subsequently died and left no heirs. The land then became shamditatdeh, and so the property of the whole body of the proprietors of the village, of whom B was one. Plaintiff sued to redeem the whole land asserting that, as one of the proprietors, he was an interested person and had the right to redeem the whole. Held, (1) that the plaintiff could only redeem his own share of the property but not the shares of other proprietors, as the mortgage-security had been broken and no co-sharer was an interested person as regards his fellows. (10 B. 648, 15 B. 24, 21 B. 619, Expl. & Not F.) (2) that it was not necessary for plaintiff to partition the shamlat before redeeming his own share of the mortgage. (15 B. 24, Rel. on; 6 M. 61, 20 M. 295, Diss.) (3) that, being in possession not as a co-sharer but as a mortgagee, he could not take advantage of the rule of customary law that no other co-sharer could interfere with his actual possession until partition. *SHANKAR DAS v. [Appr., 11 B.H.C. 32; R., 14 C.P.L.R. 170.]. Where a Court omits to adjudicate upon part of the claim, it is competent to the mortgagor to bring a second suit in respect of that part. (284)—Mortgage by three persons—Equity of redemption subsequently partitioned among them—Suit for redemption by two sharers—Effect—Sale of entire equity of redemption—Suit by purchaser for redemption of one-third share of the property—Set-off.—A, B, and C (three undivided brothers), after mortgaging their common family property, effected a partition of the equity of redemption among themselves. Two of the mortgagors (A and B) then redeemed their two shares on paying two-thirds of the principal and interest due and also two-thirds of a sum said to be due on account of excess assessment paid by the mortgagee in respect of the mortgaged lands. The plaintiff, as purchaser at Court-sale of the whole of the mortgaged property, sued to redeem the remaining one-third portion of the property, and was met by the defence that he must pay, together with the mortgage-money, one-third of the sum which the defendant alleged he had paid as assessment. The lower Appellate Court having found that the mortgagee-defendant had not proved the alleged payment of assessment, gave a decree in plaintiff's favour, on payment by him of one-third of the mortgage-money less the amount paid as assessment by the two mortgagors (A and B.) On appeal, the High Court varied the lower Court's decree and held that the amount should not be deducted from the mortgage-money. The mortgagors had severed their interests under the mortgage and the mortgagee had chosen to recognise their partition as shown by his allowing two of them to redeem their two-thirds shares and by giving them possession. The plaintiff's right to redeem his one-third share was perfectly distinct from the former transaction and there was no longer any joint account to which the sums previously paid could be credited. LAKSHMAN GIRIRAYA NAIK v. equity of redemption except one, has brought the mortgaged property to sale and purchased it, he may bring an action for declaration of his title as purchaser at the mortgage sale and for recovery of possession, subject to the exercise of the right of redemption of the person excluded. Quære.—Whether it is open to a mortgagee, who has omitted to implead a necessary party, to maintain another suit to enforce his security against the party excluded. If the mortgagee has purchased some of the mortgaged properties, the defendant is entitled to redeem his own share in the disputed property, upon payment of a proportionate part of the amount due on the mortgage (5 C.L.J. 315=11 C.W.N. 403, R.) To find out the proportionate amount payable by the defendant, the value of all the properties comprised in the mortgage security at the date of the execution thereof should be first determined, as also the value of the disputed property. The principal amount of mortgage must then be distributed over all the properties comprised in the mortgage and the amount fairly chargeable to the share of the disputed property, proportionate to its value, will have to be calculated. The amount so fixed is the principal, which the defendant may be called upon to pay. Interest on this amount will run at the rate specified in the mortgage contract, from the date of the mortgage to the date fixed for re-payment, in the decree made in the mortgage suit, and further interest at the Court rate, between the date fixed for re-payment and the date of actual realization. The principle is equally applicable whether the decree in the mortgage suit was upon contest or by consent. Against the sum so found due to the plaintiff should be set off the profits, if any, which may have been realised by the plaintiff by his possession of the disputed share (31 I.A. 57=31 C. 332=8 C.W.N. 609, 3 C.L.J. 611, R.). When the mortgagee, who, in execution of his decree, purchased the mortgaged property, was subsequently deprived of it, then instituted a suit for recovery of the purchase-money against the person who was not made a party in the mortgage suit, on the ground that the effect of the previous litigation between the parties had been to deprive him of the disputed property, as also on the ground that the institution was due to the dictum in the judgment of the High Court, leave was granted to the plaintiff to amend his plaint and convert the suit into one for recovery of possession of the disputed share, subject to the exercise of the right of redemption of the defendant. JUGDEO SINGH v. parties, a purchaser of a portion of the estate from all the co-sharers, suing for redemption of the whole estate, must discharge all the debts which they jointly or severally charged on the property, for he represents all the co-sharers. A mere agreement in a bond executed by a mortgagor subsequently to a mortgage, to the effect that "after the expiry of the mortgage, when the time comes for payment of the mortgage money, first I will pay this bond with interest and after that I will pay the amount of the mortgage," is sufficient to create a charge on the mortgaged estate. BHUGWAN DASS v. MAHOMED JAFER, 4 N.W.P. 161.

(287)—Decree obtained by prior mortgage—Part of mortgaged property sold in execution—Sale subject to subsequent mortgage, effect of, on right of redemption of remaining properties—Right to redeem on payment of proportionate mortgage debt.—In 1874, plaintiffs had mortgaged various lands without possession. In 1876, they again mortgaged to defendants 1 and 2, 6 plots of land and 5 houses and placed them in possession. At the sale held in execution of a decree obtained by the prior mortgagee, the said defendants 1 and 2, the subsequent mortgagees with the 4th defendant, purchased the right of the plaintiffs to redeem 3 of the said plots. Plaintiffs brought this suit for redeeming the rest of the property. The lower Court had allowed them to do so but only on payment of the full mortgage-debt. The High Court held that this was wrong. The lower Court had ignored the fact that the property purchased by the defendants was sold subject to the mortgage and was still burdened with the mortgage-debt. The plaintiffs were entitled to redeem part of the mortgaged property since the mortgagees had themselves acquired the share of their mortgagors and so severed their interests under the mortgage. The suit was, in the result, remanded to the lower Court for the purpose of ascertaining what proportionate amount of the mortgage-debt was charged on the property purchased by the defendants for the purpose of deducting that from the whole mortgage amount in order to ascertain the amount payable by the plaintiffs. PIRJADA AHMADMIYA PIRMIYA v. SHA KALIDAS KANJI, 21 B. 544. [R., 6 Bom. L.R. 284; D., 24 M.96.]

(288)—Mortgage—Suit for redemption of part of property—Objection to frame of suit—Subsequent suit avoiding objection.—The equity of redemption in a Talooqua comprising 16 villages was sold in auction in satisfaction of a decree against the original proprietor and mortgagor and his heirs. Defendant, the sub-mortgagee of the Talooqua purchased twelve villages. Three villages were brought by other parties and the remaining villages by the plaintiff. The latter sued to redeem the village they had bought, without making the purchasers of the other three villages parties to the suit. Defendant objected inter alia that the purchasers of the other three villages ought to have been made parties to the suit, and this objection was eventually upheld. The plaintiffs then sued to redeem three villages and one-fourth of another, making the owners of the three villages defendants. The lower Courts decreed the claim. On special appeal, the defendant questioned the plaintiff's right to redeem the three villages. Held that the defendant having forced the plaintiffs to bring the present suit, could not turn round upon them and object to their doing what they were absolutely directed to do by the Court, i.e., that they were bound to redeem the other three villages if they proposed to redeem the village they had bought. NAWAB AHMED ALI KHAN v. JAWAHIR SINGH, 1 Agra 3. [Overruled on appeal, 13 M.I.A. 404; Not F., 2 A. 565.]

(289)—Mortgage of whole village—Suit for redemption by one of the joint mortgagors or his representatives—Right to sue.—The defendants who were mortgagees of an entire village subsequently purchased the equity of redemption in respect of a portion of it. Plaintiff claiming to represent the joint purchasers of the equity of redemption in another portion of the village, one by purchase and the other by descent, sued to redeem the entire estate. The defendants questioned the validity of the sale to the persons through whom the plaintiff claimed and impugned his right as heir. Held, that the defendants (mortgagees) were not entitled to question the sale as they did not contest it when the sale took place but had only preferred their claim to a right of pre-emption, and inasmuch as the estate was jointly purchased by the persons through whom the plaintiff claimed, the right of the plaintiff to one-half of it by purchase being unquestioned, his title to redeem the whole of the joint estate was established. BITTHUL v. TOOLSEE RAM, 1 Agra 125.

(290)—Owner of portion of equity of redemption, right of, to redeem whole property—Lien on other portions in favour of redeeming co-owner.—In cases where there are two owners of parts of the equity of redemption, the mortgagee could enforce his rights under the mortgage against both together, or against either of the two, leaving that one, if forced to pay the whole sum, to recover the proper rateable contribution from the other. On the other hand, it is competent to either of such part-owners to redeem the whole and seek contribution from the other. Whichever of the two redeemed, he would have a lien on the share of the other for the proportional contribution of that share to the sum expended in redemption, and this right or interest would be as capable of transfer as the aggregate group of interests called ownership. The vendor to the plaintiff, in this case, having purchased only a portion of the property mortgaged, the mortgagor having retained his equity of redemption, even after the Court-sale, the mortgage of the property again by him to the defendant was valid so that the plaintiff could not recover possession of the property mortgaged to the defendant without paying the amount of his lien. VITHAL NILKANTH PINJALE v. VISHVASRAV, 8 B. 497. [R., 13 B. 45, 3 N.L.R. 92.]

(291)—Owner of part of an estate—Redemption—Right of one who redeems the whole estate.—The owner of the equity of redemption of part of an estate under mortgages is entitled to redeem the whole of the mortgaged estate, if the mortgagee insists upon his right to have it so redeemed. [R., 21 B. 619, 21 M. 18, 61 P.L.R. 1904; D., 9 M. 92.] When a part owner so redeems the whole estate, he thereby puts himself in the place of the mortgagee redeemed, and acquires a right to treat the original mortgagor as his mortgagor, and to hold that portion of the estate, in which he would have no interest but for the payment, as a security for any surplus payment he may have made. ASANSAB RAVUTHAN v. VAMANARAU, 2 M. 223.

(292)—Suit to realize balance of mortgage-debt—Purchase of equity of redemption—Proportionate share of the debt.—Where the plaintiff, purchaser of a mortgage-deed, sought to sell a share of one of several properties comprised in the mortgage, to satisfy the balance due on the mortgage, the defendant, who had purchased the equity of redemption in that share, would no doubt be entitled to insist that the property should be burdened with no more than a proportionate amount of the original mortgage-debt and might claim to redeem that share upon payment of that quota; but, where it had not been shown what that proportion was, nor had the money been paid into Court, the plaintiff would be entitled to enforce the attachment. HIRDY NARAIN v. SYED ALLAOOLLAH, 4 C. 72=2 C.L.R. 580. (13 M.L.A. 404, F.)

(293)—Mortgage—Court sale of equity of redemption—Portion only purchased by mortgagee—Suit for redemption—Partial redemption.—A mortgagee is entitled to say to each of several persons who may have succeeded to the mortgagor's interest that he shall not be entitled to redeem a part of the property on payment of part of the debt, because the whole and every part of the land mortgaged is liable for the whole debt. But a mortgagee who has acquired by purchase a part of the mortgagor's rights and interests is not entitled to throw the whole burden of the mortgage-debt on the remaining portion of the equity of redemption in the hands of one who has purchased it as a sale in execution of a decree against the mortgagor. Such a purchaser would be entitled to redeem the portion of the property purchased by him on payment, not of the whole but such portion of the debt as is proportionate to the relative value of the mortgaged properties. MAHTAB SINGH v. MISREE LALL, 2 Agra 88. [F., 24 W.R. 24, 12 C.W.N. 745; R., 2 A. 565 20 A. 23=A.W.N. 1897, 163, 22 A. 284, F.B.=A.W.N. 1900, 69, 26 A. 72=A.W.N. 1903, 190.]

(294)—Mortgage by some members of a joint Hindu family, suit for foreclosure of, omission to implead other members in—Right of omitted members to sue to redeem entire property.—In a suit for redemption of the whole of a mortgaged property brought by some members of a joint Hindu family, it appeared that the defendant-mortgagee had, in a previous suit by him for foreclosure of the same mortgage, omitted to implead the plaintiffs as parties thereto, though he had notice of their interests. On a contention by him, however, that the plaintiffs ought not to be allowed to redeem the whole property, but must be limited to their shares alone, held, the character of indivisibility exists not only with reference to the mortgagee, who may generally be more benefited thereby, but also with reference to the mortgagor and persons acquiring through either any partial interest in the subject; none of whom therefore, can get relief under the mortgage, except in consonance with the principle of its indivisibility. Further, on general principles, the mortgagee should not be allowed to utilize his own neglect of a duty imposed by law and his failure to implead proper parties, to gain for himself a better position than he would otherwise occupy; and the plaintiffs, therefore, had the right to redeem the entire property mortgaged and such right ought not to be restricted to what would have been the share of each of them on partition. DINDAYAL v. SHEORAJ SINGH, 2 N.L.R. 116. (22 M. 209, F.; 3 C.P.L.R. 82, 28 C. 517, R.) [R., 5 N.L.R. 117, 5 N.L.R. 103; Diss., 4 N.L.R. 168.]

(295)—Redemption of part.—A mortgagor of an undivided share may redeem the entirety, at any rate if the mortgagee does not object, and may be compelled to do so if required by the mortgagee. *CHAUDHRI AHMAD BAKHSH v. (296)—Right of a prior mortgagee to compel puisne mortgagee to redeem the whole—Redemption of a portion of the mortgaged property where the mortgagee refuses to allow redemption of the whole—Estoppel by defence raised in the previous case.—Under a mortgage of September, 1879, and a subsequent agreement, S became the mortgagee in possession, for a term of 12 years, of a 4 annas share of K and an 8 annas share of B in two villages. In December, 1888, K mortgaged his 4 annas share for 30 years to the plaintiff, who redeemed the mortgage of 1879 and took possession of both shares. In 1897, B mortgaged his 8 annas share to the defendant, who then sued the plaintiff for redemption of that share on the payment of the amount due on it under the mortgage of 1879. The plaintiff insisted on the defendant redeeming the whole share of 12 annas, and the defendant's suit was dismissed. In 1899, the defendant brought another suit for redemption of both shares, obtained a decree and took possession. In 1901, plaintiff sued for redemption of the 4 annas share of K only, on payment of the amount due on it under the mortgage of 1879, but offered to redeem the share of B also. The defendant did not accept the offer. Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to redeem K's 4 annas share. JAWAHIR SINGH v. (297)—Mortgage—Redemption of mortgage by one of co-mortgagors—Charge upon co-mortgagors, share of mortgage debt—“Obtains possession,” meaning of—Transfer of Property Act, s. 95—Joint decree against several mortgagors.—H mortgaged a two annas share to R for Rs. 1,000 with interest at the rate of Rs. 1-8 per cent. On his death he left as his heirs his brother the plaintiff, and the defendants who were his widow and three daughters. The plaintiff paid Rs. 1,000 on account of the mortgage-debt and subsequently Rs. 480-6-0 more in satisfaction of a simple money decree obtained for the balance of that debt. The plaintiff then brought a suit against the defendants alleging that he had a charge on the mortgaged property for the share of the mortgaged debt which was due from them and which he paid, and that he was entitled to a decree for sale of their share in default of payment. He further alleged that the defendants were jointly liable. Held, that the plaintiff had a charge on the share of each of the defendants for the latter's proportion of what the former had paid to redeem the mortgage. The liabilities of the defendants were however separate and the plaintiff was not entitled to a decree for the sale of their share jointly on their failure to pay their proportion of the mortgage-debt, but he was entitled to separate decree against each of them in proportion to her share of that debt. Held, further, that as all the money, by the payment of which the debt was discharged, was paid by the plaintiff, it must be held that he redeemed the mortgage. It did not matter that part of the debt was paid before the mortgagee was entitled to recover it, or that, for the other part, the mortgagee had obtained a simple money decree which the plaintiff satisfied. Held, further, that in s. 95, Transfer of Property Act, the words, “obtains possession” may be interpreted to mean “obtains possession when the mortgagee had possession under his mortgagee.” GHULAM MAULA KHAN v. MUSAMMAT BANNO KHANAM, 4 O.C. 273.

deed, that the mortgagor shall not redeem before he has paid off a personal loan, shall be given effect to in cases not governed by the Transfer of Property Act, 1882. But such a condition is a clog on the equity of redemption and not enforceable in cases governed by this Act. Where the mortgaged property having been split up into two, each sharer represented his own share and made an acknowledgment in respect of it, and the two acknowledgments put together comprised the whole property, it was held that those were valid acknowledgments within the meaning of s. 19 of the Limitation Act, 1877, although they were not signed at one time by all the mortgagees of that time or by each one in respect of the whole of the mortgaged estate. HIRALAL ICCHALAL MAJUMDAR v. (299)—Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), s. 60—Partial redemption of a puisne mortgage—Puisne mortgagee not party to prior mortgagee's suit and vice versa—Second mortgage only of a portion of property—Independent decrees obtained by both mortgagees—Property sold in both decrees—Puisne mortgagee's right to redeem only that portion which was mortgaged to him—Effect of second sale on mortgagor's right of redemption—Prior mortgagee not allowed to redeem the puisne mortgage.—A prior mortgagee brought a suit on his mortgage and got a decree for sale of the mortgaged property. Plaintiff, who was a puisne mortgagee in respect of a portion of the same property, was not made a party to this suit. In execution of the decree under the first mortgage, the whole mortgaged property was purchased by the defendant. Subsequently the plaintiff brought a suit on his second mortgage and got a decree for sale, without impleading the prior mortgagee or the auction-purchaser as a party to his suit. In execution of his decree, the plaintiff himself purchased the share mortgaged to him. He then brought a suit to redeem this share on payment of a proportionate amount due on the first mortgage. Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to redeem the share on payment of a proportionate amount due on the first mortgage, and he had not lost the right of redemption obtained by his mortgage. Held, further, that the defendant was not entitled in virtue of his purchase to redeem the plaintiff. Even if it were assumed that the prior mortgagee stood in the shoes of the mortgagor, the mortgagor's right of redemption no longer existed, inasmuch as a decree was passed on the puisne mortgage and the property sold in execution of that decree. HAR SAHAI v. MUKKARRAM HUSSAIN, 1 Ind. Cas. 505. (28 B. 153, D.)

Certain property was mortgaged as a share in a patti. After the mortgage, a partition took place and the mortgaged property was transferred to another mahal and again described as a share in the mahal. The mortgagors sued for redemption, but claimed possession of certain specific plots of land as representing the share originally mortgaged. Held, that in such a suit, the plaintiffs could only get a decree for possession of an undivided share, and if they wanted the specific plots must apply to the Revenue Courts for a partition. CHANDAN SINGH v. (301)—Ex-proprietary tenancy—Mortgage of proprietary rights—Rights sold and purchased by mortgagee—Amount payable on redemption.—After a usufructuary mortgage of certain sir lands, the mortgagee purchased the sir and Zamindari rights, the mortgagor becoming an ex-proprietary tenant. On a suit for redemption being brought, held that, the mortgagee having himself broken up the integrity of his security, he cannot be permitted to cast the whole burden of the debt upon the ex-proprietary rights. CHUNI LAL v. SIKISHAN SINGH, 8 A.L.J. 227=33 A. 434=10 Ind. Cas. 729.

(302)—Redemption—Mortgagor cannot be compelled to redeem the whole property—Relinquishment of one portion—Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), s. 85.—A mortgagor cannot be compelled to redeem the whole of the mortgaged property. He is bound to pay the whole of the mortgage debt before he can redeem any portion of the mortgaged property; but subject to this condition there is nothing to prevent his relinquishment of the right to redeem one portion of the property while suing to redeem other portions. VENKATVARAHACHARYA v. (303)—Redemption of whole mortgaged property when portion of it purchased by mortgagee, suit for—Redemption of whole mortgage by owner of part of the equity of redemption.—A person interested in part only of mortgaged property may insist upon redeeming the whole; but when a mortgagee purchases a part of the property, the latter can insist upon retaining the portion so purchased but he is not entitled to have the redemption restricted to the interest of the plaintiff who seeks to redeem. PARWAN SINGH v. redemption against B by a person in whom the rights of C and L were vested and who with one of the defendants had acquired all the rights of the mortgagor. The mortgage-deed provided that the mortgage-money should be tendered or paid in the khali fasl but the plaintiff had made no tender in the khali fasl. Held, that, under the circumstances, the plaintiff could maintain a suit for redemption, though he had made no tender in the khali fasl. Held, also, that the plaintiff representing C and L as mortgagees was entitled to the same proportion of the sum due as of the principal sum secured. Held also that although the plaintiff was at the date of suit only part owner of the right to redeem, he was entitled to redeem the whole of the mortgage. The general rule is that a person who owns a part only of the equity of redemption can claim, and if the mortgagee so wishes, is bound, to redeem the whole mortgage, but when both the plaintiff and the defendant have acquired parts of the equity of redemption, the plaintiff cannot redeem the whole against the will of the defendant. B. In 1872, they jointly mortgaged the whole to the defendant. G's share became vested in his three grandchildren A., A.J., and A.H. In 1893, M mortgaged his share again to the defendant by a deed which was signed for him at his request by another person and which postponed the redemption of the mortgage of 1872 from 1296 to 1350 Fasli. M died having devised his share to A.J. After 1296 F. the plaintiff as purchaser of the right of A., A.J. and A.H. sued for redemption of the entire land. Held, that joint character of the mortgage of 1872, had been destroyed by the deed of 1893 and therefore the plaintiff, so far as he represented G, could not insist upon redeeming the entire land, that so far as he represented M, he was bound by the provision in the deed of 1893 and could not as yet redeem M's share but that, under the circumstances, he was entitled as the representative in interest of G to redeem G's share alone. Held, also, that s. 59 of the Transfer of Property Act, does not require the personal signature of the mortgagor but a mortgage is signed by the mortgagor within the meaning of that section, if his signature is affixed for him with his authority. Therefore, the deed of 1893 had been validly executed. MIRZA HAIDAR ALI v. RAJA JANG BAHADUR KHAN, 6 O.C. 279. [R., 10 O.C. 81, 11 O.C. 73.]

S. 61 of the Act has been enacted with the object not of indicating that there might be some other restriction on such rights of a mortgagor, but of prohibiting the application of the principle of consolidation to India, except where the parties had by contract agreed that such consolidation should take place. A mortgagor, therefore, unless otherwise bound by contract, cannot be prevented from redeeming one of two or more mortgages held by his mortgagee over the same property without redeeming the other or the others. TAJJOBIBI v. It was contended for the mortgagee defendants that since they were co-sharers in the land, the plaintiffs could not redeem without first effecting partition. Held, that the plaintiffs were entitled to redeem the whole mortgage and enter into joint possession with the mortgagees upon payment of the whole amount of the mortgage money. BAHRAM KHAN v. (315)—Suit by one of several joint mortgagors for redemption of his share—Indivisibility of mortgage.—Though it is a general rule of law that the integrity of a mortgage is to be maintained for the purposes of fulfilment of the security, still, a co-sharer in the equity of redemption can sue the mortgagees for redemption of his own share if the mortgagee, by his own conduct in purchasing a portion of the equity of redemption, destroys the indivisibility or integrity of his mortgage himself. Whilst it is perfectly true that a mortgagor is not entitled to redeem any portion of the property mortgaged without the whole debt being liquidated, the mortgage transaction being one and indivisible, it is equally true that when the mortgagee or mortgagees by their own act break up the indivisibility of the mortgage, they can no longer insist upon the integrity of their security, and they are liable to be sued by each individual mortgagor for redemption of his own share by payment of the proportionate amount remaining due on the mortgage. KISHEN LAL v. CHUNNA LAL, A.W.N. 1887, 250. (3 M. 230, 2 A. 565, 5 A. 276, 13 M.L.A. 404, F.)

Subsequently the latter sued to redeem the prior mortgage: Held that the suit was not barred by res-judicata. Held, also, that, so long as the property was not sold in execution of the decree obtained by the prior mortgagee, the subsequent mortgagee's right to redeem did not extinguish. SAHU SHIAMSUNDAR LAL v. (318)—Decree, for redemption with foreclosure clause added—Power to enlarge time—Principles and practice of Chancery Court—Decree for redemption with foreclosure clause added.—Power to enlarge time for payment depends, where the Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882) is not in force, upon the principles and practice of the Court of Chancery under which the practice of adding a foreclosure clause to a decree for redemption has been introduced. The adoption by the Indian Legislature in any Act of the principle on which any such practice may be founded does not cause such principle to have less weight, even though that Act may not be generally in force. If the principle applies, then, it is not necessary that the Act should also be shown to apply. Right of mortgagor to retain possession free of the mortgage affirmed, where the mortgagor having paid into Court the sum specified in his redemption decree 20 months after due date, the mortgagee did not apply for (the foreclosure to be made absolute) an order directing him to be placed in possession of the mortgaged property till 18 months later. MAUNG KYA GAING v. It is not competent to him to sue for possession subsequently, asking that his own waiver in favour of the mortgagor by his election should be set aside, on the mere grounds that the deposit had not been made before the expiry of the year of grace and that he had been misinformed by his agent that the deposit was made within time. save estate from foreclosure.—The mortgagee in this case allowed by petition a further term of payment to the mortgagor extending to the 25th November, 1863; if the mortgagor had tendered the mortgage money and interest, to the mortgagee on the 25th November he would have been in time; so he would have been clearly in time if he had taken his money into the Judge's Court on the 25th November. The Judge, however, had closed his Court on that day and extended the holiday until the Monday following. On that Monday, the plaintiff took his money into the Court, and deposited it there for the purpose of preventing a foreclosure of his estate. The question was whether the absence of the Judge from his Court was a sufficient answer to the mortgagor for not having deposited the money in the Judge's Court to prevent foreclosure. The High Court held that, although the mortgagee had extended the time for the payment to the 25th November, the mortgagor was prevented by the closing of the Court—a circumstance to which he was no party, and which was not caused by any default or misconduct on his part—from depositing the money in the Judge's Court on that day. He, therefore, had a reasonable excuse for not doing so, and consequently it would be contrary to any principle of justice, equity and good conscience to allow the mortgagee to take advantage of the mortgagor's inability to deposit the money in Court, and to treat the mortgage as foreclosed. It was further contended in this case that, inasmuch as the plaintiff was unable to deposit the money in Court on that particular day, he was bound to then make a tender to the mortgagee. But the High Court was of opinion that, when the Judge's Court was not open, the mortgagor was not bound to make tender to the mortgagee. The plaintiff had the option, either of depositing the money in the Judge's Court, or of tendering it; and if there was a sufficient excuse for not depositing it in the Judge's Court he was not bound to tender the money and prove that tender. DABEE RAWOOT v. Held, that the fixation of the period was not of the essence of the contract, for the contract contains no condition which expressly prohibits the debtor from redeeming the mortgage during the currency of the period fixed therefor. The general rule is that a mortgagor is at liberty to discharge the mortgage-debt at any time; and the mortgage-deed in the present case contains no stipulation which would impede the operation of this general rule. FAIZ TALAB KHAN v. FAZAL, 4 P.W.R. 1912 (N.W.F.P.)=203 P.L.R. 1912. (201 P.R. 1889, 10 A. 602, 2 M. 33, 17 M.L.J. 83, F.)

(322)—Suit for redemption—Previous dismissal of suit for non-joinder—Foreclosure proceedings—Expiry of year of grace—Suit for redemption—Res-judicata.—One of the sons of a mortgagor sued for redemption, but it was found that another suit for redemption had been previously brought by another son of the mortgagor and, on the defendant's objection in that suit that the plaintiff could not sue alone, he alleged that he sued on behalf of his brothers also and undertook to produce the brother, the plaintiff in the subsequent suit in person or produce a power of attorney from him and, on his failing to do either, the suit was dismissed. Held that the present suit was not res judicata, that, as a foreclosure proceeding is merely a ministerial one without any final judicial sanction, a mortgagor can sue and get a decree for redemption on proving his claim and on showing that foreclosure proceedings were not good and were final against him for some cause or other. A mortgagor need not take notice of defective foreclosure proceedings nor need he wait till the mortgagee sues to complete his title to plead irregularity in the proceedings and may claim redemption even after the lapse of the year of grace. GURDITTA MAL v. SANDHI KHAN, 27 P.R. 1900.

(323)—Fixing of term for redemption—Suit before the expiry of term.—The fact that a period is fixed for the redemption of a mortgage does not prevent the mortgagor from redeeming it before the expiry of the stipulated period as such fixing of the period is only for the convenience of the mortgagor. MAULA v. Should I not pay the same, you are to recover the same in full from the mortgaged property." Held that the clause was inoperative as amounting to a stipulation having the effect of postponing the mortgagor's right to redeem beyond the time when the mortgagee can call in his money. SARI v. within seven days without any penalty or condition by way of debarring redemption or otherwise without effect—Insufficiency of time allowed for payment.—In a suit for redemption of land under usufructuary mortgage, the Court of First Instance gave a decree for redemption and directed payment in 7 days. It added nothing, however, either as penalty or condition. The mortgagor (respondent) was said to have failed to make payment in 7 days and the mortgagee (appellant) applied to the Court to declare that the mortgagor was debarred from redemption. In this case he succeeded in the Court of First Instance, but the decree was reversed in first appeal and he brought this second appeal. Held, dismissing the second appeal with costs, that the mortgagee was not entitled to put matter into the decree which was not there. The direction for payment within a limited time had no practical effect upon the decree for redemption as no condition was imposed or penalty attached to non-compliance. Seven days was far too short a time to allow for payment anyhow; and further, the omission to add any penalty by way of debarring redemption or otherwise was right in result as this was a usufructuary mortgage, the rules of the Transfer of Property Act applying as rules of practice in such matters. MAUNG SHWE BIN v. Subsequently, in 1898, the same share was mortgaged with possession to the plaintiff for a term of 80 years, it being expressly stipulated that the mortgagor shall not redeem until the expiry of the said period. In 1905 K sold the property to the defendants who then paid off J's mortgage of 1886 and took possession of the property mortgaged. The plaintiff now brought a suit for possession on the basis of the mortgage of 1898. The defendants contended that the mortgagor, not being at the date of transaction in possession of the mortgaged property, had no right to mortgage it with possession and that the plaintiff could not claim possession on the strength of the deed. It was also contended that the condition in the mortgage-deed that the mortgagor shall not redeem for 80 years should not be enforced and the defendants should be allowed to redeem the plaintiff's mortgage: Held, that although the property was not in the possession of the mortgagor in 1898 when he mortgaged it to the plaintiff, yet that circumstance could not prevent the plaintiff from asserting her right under the terms of her mortgage-deed and that, therefore, she was entitled to recover possession of the property mortgaged to her: Held, further, that the present suit for possession could be treated as a suit for the specific performance of the contract, and that the defendant could not be allowed to redeem in the present suit inasmuch as the defendants had not offered to redeem the plaintiff's mortgage, nor had they paid the Court-fee which would be payable on a prayer for redemption of the mortgage: Held also, that it was premature to consider whether the provision that the mortgage shall not be redeemed for 80 years should be enforced or not, as the plaintiff had not yet obtained possession of the property and no question of redemption could till then arise. Held, lastly, that the plaintiff, before obtaining possession of the property mortgaged, must pay to the defendants the amount of money paid by them to the mortgagee of 1886. KANCHAN SINGH v. We will redeem it in Tabaung, 1262, by payment of an extra sum of Rs. 70, i.e., Rs. 500 in all. If while the land is in Ko Yunut's possession there be any interference on the part of Government or others, we will bear the responsibility thereof with costs. If, on the arrival of the date (specified), we fail to redeem, we will make over outright to Ko Yunut and wife, Ma Paw, the land within the (aforesaid) boundaries for Rs. 430, the money advanced." Whereupon Ko Yunut and wife, Ma Paw paid over Rs. 430 and accepted the Maubin land in mortgage, etc. The mortgagors sued for redemption after the expiry of the stipulated time. Held (1) that, in Burma, the Courts have nothing to do with the ancient law of India in relation to mortgages, that they are bound by equity, justice and good conscience, and that the rules contained in the Transfer of Property Act have been commended to the Courts as rules of equity, justice and good conscience (26 C. 1, F.; U.B.R. 1897—1901, Vol. II, 502, U.B.R. 1897—1901, Vol. II, 509, R.)

The respondent applied under s. 87 of the Transfer of Property Act, for an order absolute for foreclosure. date of such default." On 9th January, 1872, R executed a third deed in favour of S and B. This set forth that the villages of Gangapur and Ferozepur were mortgaged to them, that Rs. 3,000 were due to them on account of profits, and that R would pay and discharge the sum of Rs. 3,000 in two years—the creditors abovenamed would have the power to realise their money from all the moveable and immoveable property of whatsoever kind; that the creditors would further have the power to realize their money with interest in full from whichever of the mortgage property they liked, after payment of the money due to the previous mortgagee as well as from all other property. It was admitted that Gangapur was a hamlet of Ferozepur. The plaintiff, who was, the son of the mortgagee, S. and who had acquired R's equity of redemption, sued the defendants 1, 2 and 3, sons of the mortgagee, B, and to redeem that part of Gangapur which was in their possession on payment of half the mortgage-money due under the deed dated 2nd January, 1869. The defendants claimed that in addition to the mortgage-money, money was due to them under two deeds of further charge, (1) dated 19th July, 1869 and (2) dated 9th January, 1872. Held, that the deed of the 19th July, 1869, was intended to create a further charge on Gangapur and the plaintiff was bound to pay it off at the time of redeeming Gangapur. (9 A. 158, R.) Held, further, that the penalty of Rs. 1-8 per day from the date of default was an unconscionable one and should not be enforced in full. Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to redeem the mortgage of Gangapur of the 2nd January, 1869 without paying off the mortgage of the 9th January, 1872. CHANDRIKA PERSHAD v. A covenant to renew perpetually is a clog on the mortgagor's right to redeem and is inoperative, if it is entered into simultaneously with the mortgage. Where an anomalous mortgage was created prior to the Act, the question of its redemption has to be determined with reference to the law in force prior to that Act. It was observed that it was unnecessary to express any opinion as to the effect of s. 98, Transfer of Property Act, on similar covenants in anomalous mortgages executed after the passing of the Act. According to the rules of Equity, which formed the basis of the course of decisions prior to the Act, but subsequent to 1858 any agreement entered into at the time of mortgage, having the effect of clogging the right of redemption, was inoperative. *MURTHI KHANDAN v. mortgagors, while executing a second mortgage of their property in favour of prior mortgagees, covenanted that "we shall repay the amount due under this bond before payment of the mortgage money due under the earlier mortgage, held that the covenant was valid and did not amount to a clog or fetter on the equity of redemption, and that both the mortgages must be redeemed at the same time. One of these bonds was a simple bond, others, mortgage bonds secured on the same property. Held, that so far as these mortgage bonds were concerned, the contract was enforceable and must be given effect to, but as regards the simple bond, the contract was a clog on the equity of redemption and was not enforceable. *DURGA PERSHAD v. Where, therefore, a mortgagor stipulated that the mortgage was not redeemable for 50 years, but that, after 15 years, if the mortgagor himself his son or daughter, i.e., any one of these three, should pay whatever may be due on the mortgage, redemption should be allowed, held that this latter provision as to redemption cannot be taken as a purely personal concession, but that an alienee of the mortgagor can enforce redemption after the period of the stipulated 15 years. [R., 154 P.L.R. 1901, 13 O.C. 128.] The Limitation Act, 1877, gives 60 years as the period within which suits for redemption or foreclosure, can be brought, and the Courts in India will never hold any period fixed by the parties to be bad on the ground of its being unreasonably long. *SAYAD ABDUL HAK v. (342)—Subsequent agreement of sale.—Law does not permit any clog on the equity of redemption; but it is open to the mortgagor and mortgagee to enter into a contract subsequently to the mortgage for the sale of the mortgaged property to the mortgagee. KANHYALAL v. NARHAR, 5 Bom. L.R. 140=27 B. 297.

(343)—Mortgage deed—Clog on equity of redemption—Charge.—A debtor executed a mortgage for Rs. 1,500. The deed recited that a debt of Rs. 5,000 due on a previous khata had become payable under the bond; the debtor undertook to pay this latter sum within two years from the date of the bond from out of the moneys which he expected to receive from a third party; and the debtor covenanted in the mortgage deed that he would not redeem the mortgage until both the sums of Rs. 1,500 and Rs. 5,000 were paid. The deed was stamped as for Rs. 6,500. The question arose whether the stipulation about the payment of Rs. 5,000 was a clog on the equity of redemption: Held, that the debt of Rs. 5,000 was secured on the property as a charge by way of mortgage, and that no question as to a clog on the equity of redemption could arise in the case. HARI v. VISHNU, 6 Bom. L.R. 313=28 B. 349.

gaged for the sum of Rs. 39,520-15-0, property which consisted of seven warehouses in Shamji Hussaji Street in Bombay, and a jamatkhana and four warehouses in Don Tad third row. The seven warehouses were also let to the mortgagee for the sum of Rs. 1,500 per annum, and a house at Shamji Hussaji Street, which was not comprised in the mortgage-deed at all, was also let to the mortgagee at the rate of Rs. 1,100 per annum. On the 13th November 1901, the plaintiffs, deriving his title from the mortgagee, filed a suit against the officers and some of the members of the Bene Israil Community and the Advocate-General, as representing the charity, for an account to be taken under the mortgage of the 21st November 1866; and for the relief, among others, that on default of payment by the Bene Israil Community of the amount found due, it may be foreclosed of all equity of redemption in the said premises or that the mortgaged premises may be sold and the proceeds applied towards payment of the debt. It was contended for the defendants that the agreements by which the premises were let to the mortgagee were bad being clogs on the equity of redemption: Held, overruling the contention, (1) that the objection that the collateral advantage of the mortgage was to last after the redemption of the premises was not applicable to the case, for there was express provision to the effect that the mortgagee should have the premises at Rs. 1,500 and Rs. 1,100 per annum, only during the term of the mortgage; (2) that there was nothing in the agreements for lease or in the mortgage deed which prevented the mortgagors from redeeming the property. A mortgage is a conveyance of land or an assignment of chattels as a security for the payment of a debt, or the discharge of some other obligation for which it is given. This is the idea of a mortgage and the security is redeemable on the payment or discharge of such debt or obligation, any provision to the contrary notwithstanding. Any provision inserted to prevent redemption on payment or performance of the debt or obligation for which the security was given is what is meant by a clog or fetter on the equity of redemption, and is, therefore, void. It follows from this, that "once a mortgage is always a mortgage" but this principle does not involve the further proposition that the amount or nature of the further debt or obligation, the payment or performance of which is to be secured, is a clog or fetter within the rule. MAHOMED v. EZEKIEL, 7 Bom. L.R. 772.

(345)—Clog on the equity of redemption.—The doctrine that a provision or stipulation which will have the effect of clogging or fettering the equity of redemption, is void, might be expressed in this form: "Once a mortgage always a mortgage, and nothing but a mortgage." The meaning of this is, that the mortgagee shall not make any stipulation which will prevent a mortgagor, who has paid principal, interest and costs, from getting back his

Held, that the mortgagor contemplated simultaneous payment of the amounts of the three consolidated mortgages, and that the two later documents placed a further charge on the property which was the subject of all the three mortgages. There was only a consolidation of the three mortgages, and no clog or fetter was imposed on the equity of redemption. (A.W.N. 1906, 267; 1 Ind. Cas. 345; 6 A.L.J. 255, F.; A.W.N. 1906, 278, D.) Held, further, that, under s. 31 of Act IX of 1908, a mortgagee had the right to bring a suit for sale within two years of the passing of the Act, unless 60 years from the date when the mortgage became due would elapse before the expiry of the two years. *RAM DAS CHOUBE v. So long as the entire mortgage-money...is not paid up, the mortgaged property cannot be transferred to any one else, nor will the executant repay the mortgage money by borrowing elsewhere. Held, that this covenant did not debar the mortgagors from redeeming the mortgage by payment of any sum remaining due whenever convenient to them.

Where the private purchaser first sued to have the Court-sale in execution of the mortgage decree, above referred to, declared invalid against him and to eject the mortgagee-purchaser, and the suit was dismissed, a subsequent suit by him for redemption is not bad either under s. 13 or under s. 43 of the Civ. (357)—Redemption of mortgage, Suit for—Parties—Persons interested in equity of redemption.—The plaintiff brought a suit against the defendant to redeem certain khoti lands mortgaged by the plaintiff's father to the uncle of the defendant. The defendant contended inter alia that the plaintiff could not sue alone as there were eight co-sharers of the plaintiff who ought to be made co-plaintiffs. The co-sharers were the plaintiff's uncle and the sons of another uncle, who had ceased to be members of the undivided family of the plaintiff at the time the plaintiff's father executed the mortgage. These relations did not claim any interest in the equity of redemption. Held that the plaintiff's uncle and cousins were not necessary parties to the suit. The mortgage did not purport to have been made by the plaintiff's father as manager of the family and the plaintiff's uncle and cousins did not claim any interest in the equity of redemption. In the absence of all evidence to that effect, it could not be presumed that the plaintiff's father effected the mortgage otherwise than in his individual capacity. If the defendant had made out that the plaintiff's father and uncles were undivided at that time, it might have been presumed that the mortgage was for and on behalf of them as well as himself, but this the defendant had failed in doing. The mere fact of their relationship did not give them any interest in it. RAGHO VINAYAK v. SHEIKH DAUD, 13 B. 51.

It absolutely forbids alienation and thus deprives the mortgagor of a right which is an essential incident of the estate which he has in the land by virtue of his equity of redemption. A Court of Equity will not give effect to any such collateral restriction on the equity of redemption. [R., 20 B. 677; 6 Bom. (361)—Mortgage—Suit by first mortgagee—Subsequent mortgagee not a party—Right to redeem.—The defendant, the first mortgagee, obtained a decree against the mortgagor for sale. He failed to add the plaintiff, a subsequent usufructuary mortgagee of the property, as a party to his suit. In execution of his decree, the defendant purchased the property himself and obtained possession. Now the plaintiff sued to recover the property. Held that that the plaintiff was entitled to redeem the defendant's prior mortgage and that the decree and sale could not affect the right of the plaintiff as he was not made a party to the previous suit. *RAGHUBANS KUAR v. (364)—Mortgage—Contract not to alienate—Second mortgage for payment of first mortgage.—A mortgage contract being a security for obtaining the repayment of a loan does not incapacitate the mortgagor from any other dealing (except in defeasance of the rights of the mortgagee) with the property. A stipulation not to alienate cannot operate to annul a bona fide conveyance to a third person by the mortgagor for the purpose of paying off the original mortgage debt. When the second mortgagee is the medium of paying over to the first mortgagee the amount of the latter's debt, and to that extent takes the place of the mortgagor, it cannot with propriety be said that there has been a breach of the agreement. A zur-i-peshgee lease was granted to D for nine years to secure the payment of a sum of money. The mortgage deed contained the ordinary provisions to the effect that the mortgagee should be entitled to the profits and collections in lieu of interest; that the mortgagor on repayment of the principal, at the expiration of the lease or subsequently at the appointed period, should obtain possession; that the mortgagor should not alienate or mortgage the land, and that any such attempted transfer should be void, and D took possession of the property. A second zur-i-peshgee mortgage was given to H for paying the first mortgage, and

Subsequently, at a partition, the bond of Rs. 50 was allotted to the defendant and that of Rs. 96 was allotted to the plaintiffs. The defendant brought a suit for sale of the property on the basis of the mortgage bond allotted to him. He did not make plaintiffs a party to the suit. In execution of the decree obtained in the suit, defendant purchased a portion of the mortgaged property himself. Held, in a subsequent suit brought by the plaintiffs on the basis of the mortgage bond of Rs. 96, that the whole of the mortgaged property was liable to be sold and that the defendant had only a right to redeem. MAGGAN LAL v. of a sale held in execution of the decree obtained therein will be to transfer to the purchaser the equity of redemption of the mortgagor. The puisne mortgagee does not by the sale lose his right to redeem the prior mortgage. If, in such a case, the puisne mortgagee exercises his right of redemption, the purchaser under the prior mortgage may in his turn institute a suit as owner of the equity of redemption and redeem the puisne mortgagee on paying him the amount due to him under the mortgage. Where a puisne mortgage comprised several items of property not included in the prior mortgage, and the puisne mortgagee in the exercise of his right as such redeemed the prior mortgage, as assignee of the equity of redemption in respect of the item comprised under the prior mortgage would be entitled to redeem such puisne mortgagee on payment of the amount of the mortgage on the item of property comprised under the prior mortgage and the proportionate amount of the subsequent mortgage chargeable on the said item of property. SIVARAMAN CHETTY v. (369)—Mortgage of family property by manager—Money-decree obtained by mortgagee—Sale of mortgaged property in execution—Purchase by mortgagee without leave to bid—Right of redemption of other members of family.—Plaintiff and an uncle of his were the undivided members of the family of the deceased original mortgagor, being his son's son and son respectively. The present defendant, the mortgagee sued the uncle and obtained a money-decree and attached the mortgaged property in execution. Held that the decree obtained against the uncle as manager of the property and representative of his father was binding upon the plaintiff as though he had been made a party defendant to perfect the representation. The defendant notifying or disclosing his mortgage-lien caused several of the mortgaged properties to be sold in execution of his money-decree, and, without obtaining leave from the Court to bid at the sale, purchased several of them in the names of other persons. Plaintiff now sued to redeem the mortgaged properties brought by the defendant making the several benami purchasers as well as his uncle parties to the suit. Questions arose as to whether the plaintiff was debarred by the previous sales in execution from redeeming, and whether he could redeem without having the execution sales set aside. Held, that the mortgagee, having attached the mortgaged property in execution of a money-decree against the mortgagor and having himself purchased the property at the sale in execution of the decree without obtaining the leave of the Court to bid at the auction, had not thereby freed himself from the liability to be redeemed by the mortgagor. The sale was rendered nugatory, not by reason of the provisions of s. 294 of the Code (though permission granted under that section to bid might have validated the purchase), but by the impossibility of a mortgagee

by such sales and purchases as these freeing himself from his liability to be redeemed. The same reasoning applies to a mortgagee buying the equity of redemption under a decree obtained upon a claim independent of the mortgages as applies to a decree obtained upon a collateral instrument to secure the mortgaged debt. MARTAND v. It was contended that, under the demise, the plaintiff had no right to redeem and that the plaintiff, on the date of the sale, had only a kanom interest for a small amount over the property and that the jenmi right belonged to another K. It was also contended that, it having been declared by order in claim proceedings under s. 246, Civ. Pro. Code, (1859), that E had no jenmi right over the lands, and the said order not having been challenged by regular suit, the plaintiff cannot claim to redeem the demise as jenmi. Held, that the order on the claim proceedings was not one which E was bound to impeach within one year or twelve years after it was passed. Decree and sale—Subsequent suit by second mortgagee—Purchaser entitled to priority—Second mortgagee bound to redeem—Form of decree—Secondary evidence—Recital in later deed—Presumption.—In a suit for sale upon a mortgage of June 4 1877, alleged to be in renewal of a mortgage of June 12 1875, against certain defendants who were in possession of the property by virtue of purchase in execution of their decree which had been obtained upon a mortgage of November 8, 1875, the latter pleaded that this mortgage was in lieu of an earlier mortgage of December 5, 1869. To the suit by the defendants on their mortgage the plaintiff had not been made a party. Held, that the plaintiff, as a subsequent incumbrancer, before he could sell the property, was bound to redeem the defendants who had been in possession since the date of their purchase. In a mortgage suit the Court ought to have the fullest power to direct what is right and equitable, having regard to the circumstances of the case and the interests of all the parties to the suit in the property. Semble:—In a suit by a subsequent incumbrancer to which the prior incumbrancer is a party, if the latter so desires, it will be convenient to direct redemption of the prior incumbrance. (384) — Mortgage — Redemption — Hindu widow—Reversioner suing to redeem—Lapse of time—Burden of proof—Evidence.—In 1849-1851, R mortgaged three properties to defendants. In 1853, R died, and his widow S succeeded him. S, during her lifetime, incurred many small debts, but did not create any incumbrance on the property. S died in 1861, and was succeeded by her mother-in-law G. In 1866, G mortgaged the three properties and four others, to the same mortgagees for Rs. 1,473, which represented R's mortgage debts, S's debts and G's debts. G died in 1875. In 1896, the plaintiff, a reversioner, sued to redeem the lands from R's mortgage, contending that G's mortgage was not binding upon him. The lower appellate Court held that looking to the lapse of time between G's death and the suit, the plaintiff could not redeem without paying off G's mortgage-debt. Held (1) that G's mortgage could, as against plaintiff, only burden the properties, mortgaged by R if and so far as the mortgagees could show that the debts G purported to secure were incurred for those recognized purposes which justify the sale or mortgage of the inheritance by a female who had only a qualified estate; (2) that if plaintiff's contention as to the invalidity against him of G's mortgage was right, then, he could, immediately on G's death, have recovered possession of the four properties, but R's mortgage stood in the way of his recovering the three properties, thus, as to the four properties, the possession was adverse to the extent of the qualified interest claimed, as to the three properties it was not. Lapse of time is an element of consideration: it may absolve the mortgagee from the high standard of proof that would be required in relation to a recent transaction; but it cannot dispense with the necessity for some proof, or create a bar to redemption on payment of all that is legally due. SUBHANRAO v. Then followed a proviso that, if before 21st December 1941 the property was not redeemed, the vendee's title would become absolute. Plaintiff offered to pay the sale price after 23rd December 1883, but within the time stipulated by the latter proviso. Defendants pleaded that they were entitled to hold on till 21st December 1941, and that the suit was premature. Held, that, though plaintiff was not at liberty to redeem before 23rd December 1883, he was entitled, under the terms of the sale-deed, to redeem at any time before 1941, and that the suit was not premature. DASAPPALA-VA v. gage before the expiry of the term for which the mortgage was intended to be made, unless the mortgagee succeeds in showing that, by reason of the terms of the mortgage itself, the mortgagor is precluded from paying off the debt due by him to the mortgagee (5 B. 22, 8 A. 95, R.). Where parties agree that possession of the property shall be transferred to a mortgagee for a certain term, it may be inferred that they intended that redemption should be postponed until the end of the term, though the creation of a term is by no means conclusive on the point. [R., 9 A. W. N. 135, 16 C. P. L. R. 59, 17 M. L. J. 83=126, P. L. (398)—Conditional sale—Mortgagee entitled to possession on default in payment of mortgage-money within stipulated time—Right of mortgagor to redeem mortgage.—Suit to recover certain property that had been mortgaged as security to the plaintiff. The right to the relief claimed by the plaintiff was based on the ground that the mortgage instruments operated as absolute sales to the plaintiff of the mortgagor's proprietary right upon default made as therein provided, and entitled the plaintiff to immediate possession. Held that where an instrument appeared clearly, as in the present cases, to have been entered into by the parties for the purpose of securing the repayment of a loan, the mortgagor, making the security subservient to the purpose for which it was created, could in equity and good conscience redeem the property by paying off the principal debt and the interest, though the stipulated time for payment had been allowed to pass by, and in a suit for possession by the mortgagee, the Court was bound to give a reasonable time to the mortgagor to pay the amount due under the mortgage. VENKATAREDDI v. At the first regular settlement P, claiming through B, sued C in respect of the mortgages. He described his claim as one for redemption. He alleged that he had tendered the mortgage-money to C and that C had refused to receive it. He asked "that redemption be allowed after an investigation." On the 31st July, 1866, the Settlement Court passed a decree in the following terms:—"Ordered that the plaintiff's claim be decreed against the defendant on condition of his (plaintiff's) paying from his own pocket Rs. 775-8-0 in the month of Jeth, fallow season, that then he shall be entitled to possession of the mortgaged shares, but if default be made on his behalf in the fulfilment of either of these conditions, the decree shall be incapable of execution and the order for redemption shall be deemed not to have been passed." The plaintiff, claiming through B brought a suit to redeem the mortgages. In his plaint he described the decree dated the 31st July, 1866, as a declaratory decree. The defendants pleaded that the suit was barred by ss. 13 and 244, Civ. Pro. Code, a decree hav-

(21 C. 37, 30 C. 463, 17 A. 522, F.) In a joint Hindu family governed by the Mitakshara, a son is not deprived of his equity of redemption by virtue of a sale prohibited by law. (22 M. 372, F.; 22 B. 624, Appl.; 32 C. 296, F.) A suit for redemption is not barred merely by reason of silence or acquiescence on the part of mortgagor unless there is a release of the equity of redemption. The only modes in which a mortgagee can extinguish the right of redemption are either by getting the mortgagor to execute a release of the equity of redemption in his favour, or by a proper suit under the Transfer of Property Act. A mortgagee by erroneously representing himself as owner of the mortgaged premises cannot make his possession adverse to the true owners. *JHABBA LAL v. Where, for the purposes of res judicata, the plaintiffs put in evidence a judgment containing secondary evidence of a mortgage, this would not absolve the defendants from the duty of proving their mortgage by original evidence or of making out a case for the admission of secondary evidence. Where the defendant's claim under art. 134, Limitation Act, did not ripen, and the plaintiff was not bound to redeem at the time of the former suit, the defendant is not debarred from subsequently putting forward his claim under that article. The Court declared that the mortgage was good to the extent of Rs. 300, but the plaintiff being unwilling to pay that amount, his suit was dismissed. Then the plaintiff brought this second suit for redemption on payment of Rs. 300. The Lower Courts found that, as the plaintiff had ignored the mortgage in the previous suit, the defendant became a trespasser from the date of the mortgage, and that plaintiff's present claim was barred. Held, that the plaintiff's claim in the prior suit to declare the mortgage bad did not have the effect of enabling the defendant prescribe for title by adverse possession from the date of the mortgage to the extent of the interest, and that the present suit was not barred under art. 144 of sch. II of the Limitation Act. Held, also, that the present suit was not barred as res judicata by reason of the previous suit. SANGAMMA NAICKER v. RAMASAWMY NAICKER, 5 Ind. Cas. 478=8 M. L. In such a mortgage, the rights and liabilities of the parties should be determined by their contract as evidenced in the mortgage-deed and, so far as such contract does not extend, by local usage. Where, in a kanom, the demisor says "you shall obtain a renewed demise on the expiration of every 12 years" and, in the corresponding kychit, the demisee says "I shall obtain a renewed demise on the expiration of every 12 years," held, that this stipulation was inserted for the protection of the demisor, not for the benefit of the demisee, and that the demisor does not thereby bind himself to grant a renewal every 12 years. The receipt of a renewal fee would evidence an agreement for a renewed kanom and such an agreement, accompanied by possession would in equity be considered as placing the kanomdar in the same position as if he had obtained a renewed kanom. This principle of equity can, however, only be given effect to in this country, so far as it is compatible with the Transfer of Property Act. A kanom being a mortgage, it requires registration under s. 59 of the Act. Consequently, possession under an agreement for a mortgage cannot be relied on, in the absence of a registered agreement, and the demisee, even if in possession, cannot resist the suit for redemption, unless he has actually obtained a renewed demise duly registered (29 M. 336, F.B., F.). Per WALLIS, J.—A kanom partakes of the nature of a lease as well as of a mortgage. The validity of a covenant for perpetual renewal in a lease having been long established in England, such a covenant in a kanom may be enforced, at any rate, in the case of kanoms entered into since the coming into force of the Transfer of Property Act. Such a covenant is, however, a serious derogation from the rights of the landowner, whether he is regarded as mortgagor or as lessor. And the authorities have imposed upon any one claiming such a right the burden of strict proof and are strongly against inferring it from any equivocal expressions, which may fairly be capable of being otherwise interpreted. It cannot be contended that, the kanomdar having been allowed to hold over after the expiration of the kanom period, he must be treated as a tenant from year to year and cannot be ejected except on due notice. Although the kanom may partake of the nature of a lease, that is no reason for importing into it the rules of English law as to holding over. V.Y.L. GOPALAN NAIR v. P. KUNHAN MENON, 2 M.L.T. 131=17 M.L.J. 189=30 M. 300. (3 M. 382, 16 M. L. J. 462, 24 M. 449, R.)

did not appear and the second defendant set up another mortgage from the same illam. Held that the Court, on finding that the first mortgage had not been proved, could grant a decree for the redemption of the mortgage, under which the second defendant was in possession. The othi-holder's right of pre-emption under the Malabar Law cannot be pleaded as a bar to the right of the purchaser at Court-auction of the illam to redeem without an offer to purchase that right. The othi-holder's right of pre-emption cannot be allowed in a suit brought to redeem him. SANKARA MOOSAD v. (418)—Malabar mortgages—Kanom, redemption of—Irredeemable or perpetual tenure—Anubhavam or Anubhogam—Purushantaram—Construction of deeds—Limitation Act, art. 134—Purchaser.—Suit for redemption. A deed recited that the plaintiff granted to the defendant "a renewed writing" in respect of certain lands and added "The rent due by defendant for holding the land on lease is 55 paras. The prior Kanom and the value settled for the reclamation effected hitherto and credited to the defendant's accounts is 700 fanams. The interest on the 700 fanams is 35 paras and the amount allowed for anubhavam is 5 paras; the balance left after deducting these (35 plus 5) 40 paras from the aforesaid rent of 55 paras is 15 paras." The tenant (defendant) agreed to pay rent calculated on this 15 paras and contested the plaintiff's right to redeem. Held, that no irredeemable tenure was created and that the defendant was entitled to recover 5 paras annually from the land, if the plaintiff should redeem the Kanom. The word "Anubhavam" or "Anubhogam" literally means "enjoyment." In grants, it ordinarily implies hereditary and therefore perpetual enjoyment; and when used as descriptive of tenure of land, it prima facie implies a hereditary or an irredeemable tenure; but, when used with reference to an allowance of money or grain to be deducted from the rent due to the grantor, it will not imply any tenure in favour of the grantee. In such a case, though the allowance may be perpetual or may operate as a rent charge of the land, it by no means follows that the tenure is irredeemable. Whether the word implies an irredeemable tenure or only a perpetual rent charge depends on the language of each document. If the amount of the grant is not specified and if the terms of the document indicate that only a fixed rent is reserved for the grantor and the rest of the produce is given as "Anubhavam" or "Yavana," the Court may treat it as creating an irredeemable tenure, so as to secure to the grantee the benefits intended for him by the grant. In order to have the benefit of art. 134, Limitation Act, the purchaser must show that he is the purchaser of an absolute title and not simply of the mortgagee's rights in the property. VYTHILINGAM PILLAY v. mortgage is governed by s. 1, cl. 15 of Act XIV of 1859. KRISHNAJI alias BABAJI KESHAV v. RAVJI SADASHIV, 9 B.H.C. 79. [Commented on, 1 M. 1, P.C.]

(423) — Dekhan Agriculturists' Relief Act (XVII of 1879), agriculturist mortgagor under—Right to redeem before time fixed for payment.—The general rule that the right to redeem is co-extensive with that of foreclosure, and that, consequently, the right to redeem is postponed until the time fixed in the mortgage-deed for the payment of the mortgage-debt cannot be applied to cases falling under the Dekhan Agriculturists' Relief Act. It is competent, therefore, to a mortgagor who is an agriculturist under the Act to redeem the land mortgaged by him, before the period fixed for payment of the mortgage-debt. BABAJI v. VITHU, 6 B. 734.

(424) — Suit for redemption of mortgage, amount of mortgage determines jurisdiction for—Mortgages—Gahan lahan clauses of conditional sale, whether affect right to redeem—Several mortgagees—One suit for redemption—Dekhan Agriculturists' Relief Act (XVII of 1879), s. 13, construction of.—In this suit brought to redeem two mortgages for Rs. 1,250 and Rs. 3,000, objection was taken on first appeal that the District Judge had no jurisdiction to entertain the appeal, as the value of the subject-matter of the suit, calculating it as the amounts remaining due on the mortgages, was over Rs. 13,000, and that the Court of the Second Class Subordinate Judge had had no jurisdiction in the original suit before him; but it was held that, for the purpose of determining the value of the subject-matter of a suit for redemption, it is the amount of the mortgage the rights connected with which are the subject of contention in the suit, that must be taken as the basis, and that therefore the objection as to jurisdiction was untenable. [R., 14 C.P.L.R. 154.] The plaintiff's right to redeem was denied by the defendant who alleged that, by virtue of the gahan lahan clauses contained in the mortgages, the mortgaged lands had become his absolute property, but the lower Court had rightly recognised the plaintiff's right to redeem in spite of the gahan lahan clauses, the ruling in 1 B.H.C.R. 199, laying down that gahan lahan clauses are themselves of no avail, being in force in the Presidency of Bombay with regard to mortgages with conditional sale clauses. [F., 14 B. 78; Appr., 6 Bom. L.R. 38; R., U.B.R. 1897—1901, Vol. II, 502.] Another objection raised in this case, against the account of the two mortgages being taken as one, was upheld. The mortgages were perfectly distinct transactions relating to different lands, and there is nothing in s. 13 of the Dekhan Agriculturists' Relief Act of 1879, which could be taken as enabling the Court to treat the mortgages as one. The mere fact of their having been included in the same suit for redemption could not affect the question. RAMACHANDRA BABA SATHE v. JANARDAN APAJI, 14 B. 19. [F., 34 B. 260 = 12 Bom. L.R. 137.]

(425) — Regs. XV of 1793 and I of 1798—Redemption—Mortgage—Account—Mesne profits—Costs.—The estate in dispute was mortgaged to the defendant in the form of a zur-i-peshgee lease to continue so long as the mortgage-money remained unpaid. The mortgagee, having been evicted by the mortgagor, sued and obtained a decree for possession and wasilat (the latter to be assessed in execution). He never obtained possession under the decree, but recovered wasilat by execution. Two persons (the plaintiffs in these suits) claiming separate shares in the entire estate by purchase from the mortgagor subsequent to the mortgage, sued separately each to redeem his own share upon payment of a proportionate share of the mortgage-money. Held that the plaintiffs, as representing the original mortgagor, were entitled to redeem, but that, as the mortgage was of an entire estate, neither of them could redeem upon payment of less than the full amount of the mortgage-money. Held, also, that the defendant, having been wrongfully dispossessed, was not bound to account for the wasilat recovered under his decree, the wasilat or damages so recovered being different from the usufruct enjoyed by a mortgagee. They brought the suit for redemption on the 16th of October, 1901, and obtained a decree, with a direction that the mesne profits should be determined by the execution Court. Application for ascertainment of mesne profits was made in October 1907. The judgment-debtors objected, among other things, that the decree-holders, being guilty of laches in instituting the suit, were not entitled to interest on mesne profits prior to the institution of the suit, and that they (the judgment-debtors) were entitled to a deduction of collection charges from the gross profits: Held, that the definition of mesne profits, in s. 2 (12) of Act V of 1908, included also the interest on mesne profits, and that the decree-holders were entitled to interest on mesne profits from the date of the deposit of the mortgage money in Court to the date of realization. Held, further, that, under s. 76 (i) of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882, the mortgagee-judgment-debtors were liable to account for the gross receipts from the mortgaged property from the date of the deposit, and were not entitled to any deduction on account of collection charges. II, art. 132*—Whether a mortgage paid off is extinguished or kept alive depends upon the intention of the parties. A man having a right to act in either of two ways shall be assumed to have acted according to his interests. The purchaser of an equity of redemption in immoveable property situated in India, who, having notice of a second mortgage, paid off a first mortgage upon the property without an assignment of the first mortgage to him, must be assumed, according to the rule of justice, equity and good conscience, to have intended to keep the first mortgage alive, and consequently was entitled to stand in the place of the first mortgagee and to retain possession against the second mortgagee until re-payment. Where a mortgagee, who was made a defendant to a suit on a mortgage prior to his own, omitted to set up his rights under his mortgage and also under another mortgage, which was prior to the one sued on and which he had paid off, held that a suit subsequently brought by him to enforce those rights was barred under the Civ. Pro. Code (Act XIV of 1882), s. 13, Expl. II. On November 20, 1874, a mortgagor executed a Zarpeshgi deed in favour of a mortgagee, thereby mortgaging and hypothecating as security for the Zarpeshgi debt among other properties the property in suit. A condition of the Zarpeshgi deed was that, when the mortgagor should re-pay to the ticcadar, who was entitled to hold and be put in possession of the hypothecated properties, the Zarpeshgi debt in one lump sum at the end of September 1887, the ticca transaction should be cancelled and the mortgagor should bring the leased properties into his direct possession, but in the case of the non-payment of the Zarpeshgi debt at the end of the stipulated period, the ticca transaction should stand good with all its conditions until the payment of that debt. On January 7, 1888, the mortgagor executed a simple mortgage of the property in suit. On February 17, 1888, the mortgagor executed in favour of one MA. a simple mortgage of the properties included in the Zarpeshgi deed. The mortgage-debt was repayable in two years and the money lent by MA. was, as previously agreed between the parties, applied in discharging the Zarpeshgi debt, and on July 15, 1888, the holders of the Zarpeshgi deed quitted possession and gave up the Zarpeshgi deed, which was delivered to MA. On September 6, 1888, the mortgage of January 7, 1888, was put in suit by the mortgagee, but he did not make MA. a defendant to it. In execution of the sale decree made in that suit, the representative of the defendant in the present suit purchased and was put in possession of the property in suit. On September 22, 1900, the plaintiffs, who were assignees of the heirs of M A, brought the present suit on the mortgage of February 17, 1888, and claimed inter alia that the properties covered by the mortgage deed and by the Zarpeshgi deed of November 20, 1874, were liable for the decretal amount. Held, that the charge created by the Zarpeshgi deed of November 20, 1874, was kept alive for the benefit of M A, who was, under s. 85 of the Transfer of Property Act, a necessary party to the suit of the mortgagee on the mortgage of January 7, 1888, and as MA was not made a defendant to that suit, the rights of MA, were not affected by it and s. 13 of the Civ. Pro. Code, did not bar the present suit. Held, also, that, as the Zarpeshgi debt was payable in September, 1887, and the present suit was not instituted until September, 1900, the claim of the plaintiffs to priority was barred under art. 132, Limitation Act, 1877, and all that they were entitled to was a decree entitling them to redeem the mortgage of January 7, 1888, on payment to the purchaser of the amount of the principal and interest in respect of which the property in suit was sold to him under the decree for sale in the mortgagee's suit of September 6, 1888. SYED MAHOMED IBRAHIM HOSSEIN KHAN v. The decree was finally affirmed by the Judicial Commissioner on 9th July, 1906. On 8th July, 1909, the decree-holder deposited in Court the amount payable under the decree, and prayed that notice might be issued to the respondents requiring them to withdraw the money. On 13th July, 1909, he presented an application praying that he might be placed in possession of the mortgaged property. Held, that, up to the passing of Act V of 1908, the appellant had a right to redeem the mortgage at any time before the passing of an order absolute for sale without obtaining an extension of the time limited by the decree, and that his right to do so after the passing of that Act was saved by s. 6 of the General Clauses Act, 1897. Held also, that the application of July 13th, 1909, was governed by art. 182, Limitation Act of 1908. Held also, that the application to the Court to send notice to the respondents requiring them to withdraw the money was an application to the Court to take a step-in-aid of execution, and therefore the application of 13th July, 1909, was within time. JAGESHAR SINGH v. (438)—Redemption, suit for possession to be treated as one for—Zuripeshgi lease—Usufructuary mortgage—Transfer of Property Act, s. 62—Discretion of Court in decreeing redemption in suit for possession—Mortgage.—The defendant No. 2 (the owner of the village in suit) executed in May, 1895, a zur-i-peshgi lease of the village in favour of the defendant No. 1, which authorized the latter to pay himself the money lent by him to the former, principal and interest, from the rents and profits of the property. The defendant No. 1 obtained possession of the village. In August, 1897, the second defendant executed an ordinary lease of the village in favour of the plaintiff. The term of the zur-i-peshgi lease having expired, the plaintiff brought a suit against the defendants Nos. 1 and 2, praying for the following reliefs: (1) a decree for possession of the village, (2) a decree for the amount, which he alleged was due by the defendant No. 1, under the zur-i-peshgi lease, and (3) a decree for possession on payment of such amount as might be found due to the defendant No. 1 under that lease. The Court of first instance decreed possession; the District Judge dismissed the suit, holding that it was not maintainable, inasmuch as it was not a suit for redemption. The zur-i-peshgi lease was treated by the parties in both the Courts as a usufructuary mortgage. Held, that the zur-i-peshgi lease amounted to a usufructuary mortgage, and that, upon a reasonable interpretation of the plaint, the suit could be regarded as one for redemption of a mortgage. Under s. 62 of the Transfer of Property Act, in the case of a usufructuary mortgage, the mortgagor has a right to recover possession of the property, where the mortgagee is authorized to pay himself the mortgage-money from the rents and profits of the property, when such money is paid. Held, further, that, even supposing that the suit, as brought, was not one for redemption and was not treated as such a suit by the parties, the District Judge would have exercised his discretion wisely in allowing the plaintiff to redeem. RIASAT HUSAIN v. (439)—First and second mortgagees—Redemption—Mesne profits.—The plaintiff, who was a second mortgagee, brought the rights and interests of the mortgagors to sale and purchased them himself, but without making the defendant, who was a prior mortgagee, a party to those proceedings. He then brought a suit for redemption against the defendant and obtained a decree conditioned on his paying into Court the sum of Rs. 12,000. That sum was paid in on the 22nd June, 1885. The defendant appealed, and, under the circumstances of the case, a conditional decree was given in his favour. The condition was not fulfilled and the plaintiff's decree accordingly became final. The plaintiff obtained actual possession of the mortgaged property on the 15th June, 1887, and on the 22nd June, 1887, he sued the defendant for two years' mesne profits. Held, that the plaintiff's title to the property being good at any rate from the time of payment into Court under his decree for redemption, the defendant was liable for mesne profits just as much as if he were a trespasser being sued in ejectment, and his liability extended to the amount of the normal profits of the property, and not merely to the actual sums which had come into his hands. He was not, however, liable for interest on such profits. SAMI UDDIN KHAN v. KUAR MAN SINGH, A.W.N. 1891, 38.

(442)—Mortgage—Mortgagee to pay prior incumbrances and balance to mortgagor—Balance not paid to mortgagor—Right of mortgagee to sue for redemption.—Plaintiff was a mortgagee. The mortgage-deed provided that the mortgagee was to discharge the prior incumbrances on the property and pay the balance of the consideration money to the mortgagor. The mortgagee did not pay the balance to the mortgagor as agreed. He now instituted a suit for redemption of one of the mortgages. Held, that the mortgagor was not a necessary party to the suit. Held also that the plaintiff was under his mortgage entitled to redeem the prior mortgages. There was at all events consideration for the mortgage deed to the extent of the undertaking there given to redeem the prior mortgages. The fact that the mortgagee did not pay the balance of the mortgage money did not prevent him from maintaining a suit for redemption. MANGAB THUPPAN v. KADIR KUTTI, 13 M.L.J. 1.

the mortgagee was to enjoy the allowance of the mokasa mortgage up to a certain period in full satisfaction of the mortgage-debt. The agreement came to under s. 43 of the Dekkhan Agriculturists' Relief Act, 1879, was filed in Court under s. 44 of the same Act and thereupon took effect as a decree. Neither B nor his brothers were parties to such proceedings. The lower Courts, however, held that the mortgage having become merged in the decree the plaintiff was bound by it and was not therefore entitled to redeem. Held that, by the agreement set up by the defendant, plaintiff's father was in effect giving up the right to redeem the mortgage before its fixed period ceased, as well as the right to the surplus profits that might remain with the mortgagee over and above the mortgage amount. Such an agreement by a Hindu father could not bind his sons in respect of ancestral property and consequently the decree against the father based upon such agreement was not binding upon them inasmuch as they were no parties to the suit in which it was passed. The fetter upon redemption imposed by the proceedings of 1890 upon the father of the plaintiffs was not binding upon them as co-parceners and they were therefore entitled to redeem. BALA v. decree for redemption obtained by a mortgagor contained no clause as to the time for payment of the mortgage-debt or foreclosure in default of payment. Several darkhasts were presented by the mortgagor from time to time and thus the decree was kept alive. In the twelfth year of his decree, the mortgagor again presented an application for execution and paid the mortgage-debt into Court. The mortgagee contended that the decree for redemption was barred by limitation. Held that the mortgagor could execute it inasmuch as the decree was kept alive by him by the several darkhasts. NARAYAN GOVIND v. RESHAL SINGH, 1 W.R. 7. [F., 2 Agra 122.]

(449)—Mortgage—Deposit in Court—Protest against validity of mortgage—Tender, if valid—Notice—Interest.—A mortgagor deposited the full amount of the mortgage-money into Court accompanied by a protest against the validity of the mortgage itself. He expressed also his intention to sue for its cancelment. Held that the protest or perhaps threat of the mortgagor, to the effect that he should take legal measures for procuring the cancelment of the mortgage, imposed no condition upon the acceptance of the money; nor did it render the tender invalid. Where a deposit is once made, even though the Court-fees have not been paid, the mortgagor's equity of redemption is saved, quite irrespective of whether the mortgagee had received notice of the deposit or not. But if the mortgagee's delay in taking the money out of Court is due to the negligence of the mortgagor in not doing his best towards ensuring prompt notice of the deposit being given to the mortgagee, the latter may be entitled, on the equity of Regulation XVII of 1806, to hold the deed against the accruing interest. HETHAN SINGH v. XVII of 1806, s. 8—Foreclosure—Right of redemption.*—The plaintiffs sued to redeem certain properties which they had mortgaged to the two defendants, on the ground that the defendants had, after mortgage, held possession of such properties and had, from the usufruct of those properties, not only repaid themselves the amount with interest due upon the mortgage, but had also received something over and above. It was found that the defendants, thinking that the mortgagors had not paid the money within the prescribed period, without waiting to foreclose the mortgage, had brought a suit and obtained a decree and taken possession of the mortgage share. The mortgage was found to be a conditional sale. Held that the mortgagors were entitled to redeem the property as the mortgagees took possession before the final foreclosure, and could do so on payment of the money advanced, whether that payment was made in cash or out of the usufruct of the property mortgaged. ISHAN CHUDER BANERJEE v. JUGGUT CHUNDER DOSS, 13 W.R. 44.

(451)—Mortgage—Default in payment of interest—Provision for entry by mortgagee—Equitable relief.—Where a mortgage-deed provided that, on non-payment of interest regularly, the mortgagee has the right to enter into property and dispossess the mortgagor, held that, in case a default was made, the Court was competent to grant equitable relief to the mortgagor if he could pay the interest due with interest thereon. In the present case, the Court granted the mortgagor three months time for the payment. SITARAM DANDEKAR v. GANESH GOKHLE, 6 B.H.C. A.C. 121.

The tender of the mortgage money to the mortgagee before he sued would only affect his right to recover costs. DINONATH BUTOBYAL v. WOMACHURN ROY, 3 W.R. 128.

(453)—Mortgage—Lease to mortgage—Sale of equity of redemption—Right of purchaser to redeem—Validity of lease as against purchaser.—A purchaser of the equity of redemption brought a suit to redeem the mortgage. The mortgagee disputed the plaintiff's right to recover possession, in the event of his redeeming the mortgage, of the mortgaged lands, on the ground that the lands had already been granted to him by the original mortgagor on perpetual lease. It appeared that the plaintiff had on a former occasion contended that the lease was a forgery and fraudulent. Held that the plaintiff was not bound by the lease, although a long period had elapsed since it was granted, and as the mortgagee was then entitled to possession under his mortgage, no acquiescence in the lease could be inferred from the mere fact of the mortgagee having remained in possession, there being no allegation that the rent was ever paid to the plaintiff. SUBRAO MANGESHAYA v. XVII of 1806—Mortgage—Mortgagee in possession—Right of redemption—Deposit of principal only.*—Where the plaintiff-mortgagee stated that he had been in possession of the property in dispute under a mortgage, that he had received rents and paid some outgoings (the Government revenue) and that, in this way, he had left in his hand a sum of Rs. 41 odd and there was thus matter of account as to the profits of the mortgaged property between him and the mortgagor, held that the case was one falling within the second of the two classes of cases mentioned in s. 2, Reg. I of 1798, and that, consequently, a deposit of the principal sum only, without interest, would be sufficient to preserve the borrower's right of redemption, if the deposit be made according to the Regulation within the period stipulated in the mortgage-deed, and, therefore, according to Reg. XVII of 1806, within such extended period as would expire upon final foreclosure. It was an immaterial question in this matter how long the mortgagee had been in possession of the land. ABDULLA KHAN v. UPENDRA CHANDRA, 6 B.L.R. App. 53=14 W.R. 278.

(460)—Mortgage—Surety—Assignment of mortgage to surety—Right of redemption of mortgagor.—Certain property was mortgaged with a condition that, if it be not redeemed within a certain time, the mortgage should be converted into a sale; a third person also stood as surety for the same, agreeing to pay the mortgage money and to take the mortgaged property if it were not redeemed by the mortgagor within the time fixed. On default of the mortgagor, the surety paid the amount and took possession of the land and got it transferred to his name in the Revenue books: Held that the mortgagor was entitled to redeem the property from the hands of the surety, because the surety having paid the money to the mortgagee in his character as surety, cannot be regarded as holding the land absolutely as purchaser. GORAKI KANOJI v. NATHU APPAJI, 1 B.H.C. 135.

(461)—Agreement—Account stated—Mortgage—Redemption—Consideration.—Plaintiff sued to recover possession of a certain house upon an agreement executed by the defendant which provided that, in the event of defendant going to live with any man, or in the event of her death, the house should become the plaintiff's property. The consideration for the agreement was stated to be Rs. 550, being the money expended by the plaintiff for taking care of the defendant during her minority, of giving instructions in dancing and singing, and of paying for certain debts due by the defendant. Held that the agreement, being for a consideration which was not illegal, was in the nature of an account stated, and of a mortgage of the house to the plaintiff to secure the amount found due. Held, further, that plaintiff was entitled to possession if the defendant did not pay Rs. 550 and interest thereon within a period of 6 months from the date of decree. HUSEN BEG BAI'S HEIRS v. Subsequent to the assignment, the mortgagor had been put into possession of the land by the mortgagee, on the payment of the mortgage debt. Held that no action for rent could be brought in a Revenue Court by the assignee against the mortgagor, as the relation of landlord and tenant never existed between them.

The rent payable by the mortgagee fell into arrear, and the holding was put up for sale in execution of a decree for arrears of rent, and it was purchased by the defendant. The plaintiff tendered the mortgage-money to the defendant in accordance with the conditions of redemption but he refused to accept. The Court of first instance dismissed his suit for redemption, with reference to s. 27 (b) of the Specific Relief Act on the ground that the defendant was a bona fide purchaser for value without notice of the mortgage. On appeal, the Court affirmed the decision holding that the plaintiff was bound to have given notice of his right in respect of the land at the time of auction-sale. On appeal to the High Court, held that cl. (b) of s. 27 of the Specific Relief Act was not applicable to the case and that the plaintiff was not bound to notify the mortgage to the defendant at the time of the auction-sale. Held, further, that the plaintiff could not be made for that omission to lose his right of redemption. SAMPAT v. The plaintiff was relieved from the payment of assessment over the lands in consideration of his performing the service of Walikar. In the famine of 1876, the plaintiff left the village and as the service was not performed by him, the Government appointed some one else to perform the service and demanded from the defendant payment of the full assessment of the lands. This the defendant paid and continued in possession paying it since then. In 1895, the plaintiff brought a suit to redeem the mortgage: Held, that the Government merely demanded the payment of assessment in lieu of the performance of service, that there was no change of title and that the plaintiff consequently had the right to redeem. BHIMA v. Courts, Procedure of.—The plaintiff alleged that, since 1252 Fasli or 1840 A.D., the defendants and their ancestors had possession of his zamindari share in lieu of Rs. 751-8-0 mortgage-money, the property being redeemable on payment of Rs. 50 on the principal as interest or Rs. 1,126-8-0 in all; and that under a judgment of the Settlement Court, dated the 15th February 1869, between the plaintiff's father and the defendant's ancestor, it was settled that redemption would take place on payment of the aforesaid amount. The defence was, that as the decree of the 15th February, 1869, was not executed, no fresh suit would lie. Held, that whatever be the wording of the decree, like all similar decrees of the Settlement Court, it was, in its nature, merely declaratory of the rights of the parties, and was no bar whatever to a subsequent suit. Held, further, that it would be contrary to justice, equity and good conscience to apply the technical rules now prevailing in the Civil Court to the state of facts which existed 30 or 40 years ago, and to Courts specially created in order that they might be free from such technicalities, and which were in fact free from such technicalities. BHAGWAN BAKSH V. The puisne mortgagee is bound to pay the mortgage-money with interest at the rate specified in the mortgage to the prior mortgagee and any amount paid by the prior mortgagee in possession for the protection of the property or for redeeming any prior mortgage with interest as also the costs of the suit and appeal as in an ordinary redemption suit. An account was to be taken of the amounts realised from the property by the prior mortgagee as mortgagee in possession from the date of the possession taken by him (prior mortgagee). If on taking accounts any balance be found in favour of the puisne mortgagee, the prior mortgagee will be bound to pay the said amount to him; but if otherwise, then the usual decree in redemption suit will be passed. During the subsistence of the mortgage, the mortgagee brought to sale items Nos. 1 to 22 which were in the possession of tenants, for arrears of rent under the provisions of the Rent Recovery Act, ejected the tenants therefrom and obtained possession of the properties. Subsequently the first defendant mortgagee, assigned these items as well as item 23—a portion of a forest—to his undivided son, and caused pattahs to be registered in the latter's name. The plaintiffs, on redeeming the mortgage, were put in possession of all the lands except the said items. They then filed the suit, alleging that the lands acquired from tenants under process of the Rent Recovery Act were held by the mortgagee in trust for them, and were liable to be delivered to them at redemption. The mortgagee urged that they were not 'accessions' or 'accretions' but became his separate property. Held, (1) that the mortgagee was not entitled to include the lands acquired from tenants in his patta or to make any disposition of the mortgaged property in his own favour and of such a kind as to give rise to a possible conflict between his interest and his duty, (it being found on the facts that the assignment to the son was benami); (2) that, in respect of these properties, the mortgagee occupied the position of trustee to the mortgagors, and was bound to deliver them to the mortgagors at redemption. C. (481)—Purchase by prior mortgagee of mortgagor's rights in the subject-matter of the prior mortgage—Suit for redemption by puisne mortgagee. Held, that the purchase by a prior mortgagee of the mortgagor's rights in the subject-matter of the prior mortgage did not extinguish that mortgage and did not prevent a puisne mortgagee, from suing for redemption of the prior mortgage. RAM NIDH MISR v. they were entitled to redeem the whole mortgage although they might not have specifically sought to redeem the sub-mortgage; that the proper course was to ascertain what sum was due to the sub-mortgagees and to direct payment of that amount to the sub-mortgagees out of the amount payable for redemption of the whole mortgage. RAJA SETH GOKUL DAS v. (484)—Mortgage—Construction—Satisfaction of the principal money out of surplus profits.—The terms of mortgage-deed were that the mortgagee should realize the rents from the tenants of the land, should appropriate Rs. 7-8-0 to himself, and pay the balance of the rent amounting to one rupee to the mortgagor every year, and, on payment of the entire mortgage-money, the mortgagor would be entitled to redeem. The mortgagee did not pay the balance of Re. 1 to the mortgagor. Held, that, at the time of redemption, the mortgagor was entitled to deduction from the mortgage-money of Re. 1 a year. SAYID AMIR HUSAIN v. (485)—Court-sale at the instance of sub-mortgagee—Failure to describe property as mortgage interest—Effect—Suit by owner of equity of redemption to redeem—Whether equity of redemption subsists.—A, the purchaser of certain property from the original mortgagor, sued B to redeem the property. B was a sub-mortgagee, who brought a suit on his sub-mortgage and bought the property in a Court-sale held in execution of the decree. The decree in B's suit failed to describe the property as mortgage interest, and the vagueness in the description was retained in the sale proclamation and the sale certificate. B contended that he became the absolute owner of the property and that A was not entitled to redeem. Held, that the decree passed in B's suit must be construed as one against the mortgage interest (a); that the sale certificate ought to be read as comprising only the mortgage interest (b); and that A was entitled to redeem. ANA PATTAR v. SWAMI-NATHA PATTAR KARIAKAR, 7 M.L.T. 191=5 Ind. Cas. 935. (29 M. 84, 22 A. 442, 22 W. R. 408, 27 B. 334, R.)

There was also a prior mortgage on the same property which M redeemed. (487)—Decree in favour of mortgagee based on compromise under which he was to lose interest on certain contingency—Right of mortgagee to claim interest at redemption—Mortgagee's right to be recouped the expenses on repairs and improvements—Merger—Construction of decree.—One G, a mortgagee obtained a decree on the 6th January, 1896, against the mortgagor K based on a compromise, under which G was to lose interest on the mortgage-debt on his not paying a certain amount to K, by a certain date. K sued G for redemption, afterwards alleging that as G had not performed his part under the decree he was not entitled to any interest. G denied this and claimed inter alia certain additional sums as spent by him on repairs and improvements. The Divisional Court held that the mortgage had merged in the decree of the 6th January 1896, and that therefore the mortgagee was entitled to no more than his mortgage money. On appeal to the Chief Court: Held (1) that the decree did not operate as a merger and that it did not take away the mortgagee's right to be recouped for expenses alleged to have been incurred by him on repairs and improvements of the mortgaged premises. (2) That the decree must be construed with reference to the judgment and to the written sulenamah on which that judgment is based, and that on their true construction the mortgagee G must be held to have made the required offer within the period allowed, and that it was K, and not G who failed to carry out the terms of the compromise and that G was consequently entitled to the interest claimed on the mortgage. Such a tenancy is carved out of the landholder's interest in the land to which it relates, and a fixed rate tenant has no absolute interest in it. If the tenancy comes to an end it necessarily goes back to the estate, which it was carved out of, and lapses to the landholder. Where a fixed rate tenant, therefore, who had made a usufructuary mortgage of the tenancy, died without leaving heirs, and the zamindars offered to redeem the mortgage after his death, held that the plaintiffs were clearly entitled to redeem the mortgage made by the tenant. Query, if they were not entitled to possession of the holding without redemption. TULSHI RAM V. seeks to redeem, the mortgagee who has been in possession under the mortgage is, except under special circumstances, bound to account for and to restore the property in its entirety and he cannot be heard to say he does not know what has happened to a portion of the property mortgaged. It is the duty of the mortgagee or those who have held as his assignees to identify fully the property mortgaged and if he or they fail to do that, they come within the principle of Wake v. Conyers, namely, that, "the Court, in cases relating to confusion of boundaries, proceeds upon the same principle as it does where an agent, or bailiff, or any other person, who is under an obligation, express or implied, to keep his own property separate from the property of another, mixes them together, for under such circumstances he will have the onus thrown on him of distinguishing his own property, and, if he is unable to do so, the other person will be entitled to the whole property." (492 & 493) — Mortgagor demanding greater sum than has been advanced—Equity—Compound interest—Court—Discretion—Practice.—The principles of justice, equity and good conscience do not of necessity disentitle a mortgagee from insisting on his security for a greater sum than what has been actually advanced: in each case the question must be asked whether there has or has not been a hard and unfair bargain on the borrower, but when that is not established against the mortgagee, then the right to redeem still remains, though it is redeeming not on payment of the sum advanced, but of the sum which the parties agreed it was worth the mortgagor's while to pay in order to get a smaller advance when he was in want of money. The Courts do not lean towards compound interest, they do not award it in the absence of stipulation, but where there is a clear agreement for its payment, it is in the absence of disentiing circumstances allowed. HARI LAHU v. The defendant-mortgagee had previously obtained a decree for foreclosure and obtained possession of the mortgaged property. Plaintiff (mortgagor's son) had not been made a party to the previous suit. Held, the plaintiff had not, by the foreclosure decree against his father, lost his right to redeem. It might be that the son could not dispute the mortgage, but this does not preclude him from redeeming the mortgage. BALAJI v. TULSIRAM, 2 N. L. R. 90. (28 C. 517, F.; 4 M. 1, R.) [R., 5 N.L. (497) — Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), s. 99—Equity of redemption purchased by mortgagee—Sale voidable not void—Mortgagor, if may redeem without setting aside sale—Mortgagee, Trustee for mortgagor—Indemnity, right of mortgagee to, and to credit for amount paid for purchase.—It is a well established principle that a purchase by the mortgagee of the equity of redemption constitutes him a trustee for the mortgagor, and that he does not (unless there has been a release of the equity of redemption or other circumstance which in law would bar his right to redeem) acquire an irredeemable title. (32 C. 296, 9 C. W. N. 201, R.) The right to redeem which, according to this principle, would still subsist in the mortgagor, has not been affected by the decision of the Full Bench in Ashutosh Sikdar v. Behari Lal, (35 C. 61, 11 C. W. N. 1011, R.) where it was held that a sale in contravention of the terms of s. 99 of the Transfer of Property Act is not a nullity, but an irregular sale liable to be avoided merely on proof that the terms of the section have been contravened. The mortgagor is under no necessity to have the sale set aside first, in order to be entitled to redeem the property. He may sue for redemption within the period of limitation allowed by law, but, in such a case, the mortgagor would have to pay to the mortgagee the amount given credit for by the latter in respect of the sale, and the mortgagee would further be entitled to be reimbursed and to add to the mortgage-debt the amount which he has expended for the protection and preservation of the property. PANCHAM LAL CHOWDHURY v. appellants compromised, and withdrew from the suit so far as it concerned their one-third share of the estate, and, in consideration of a further advance of Rs. 500 and Rs. 3,019-10-11 found to be their share of the former mortgage-debt, executed a mortgage in favour of B on the 14th January, 1867. The terms of the mortgage were (1) that the mortgage would be redeemable after 30 years in the month of Jeth on payment of the principal and interest at the rate of 2 per cent; (2) that the mortgagee would receive and retain the profits of the mortgaged property; (3) that the mortgagors at the time of redemption would pay to the mortgagee takavi advances and other arrears which would then be due. The appellants sued the respondents, the representatives of B, for redemption of the mortgage of the 14th January 1867. In their plaint, the appellants stated that, under the mortgage, it was stipulated wrongfully that the mortgagee should receive 2 per cent. per mensem in addition to the profits of the property, and that respondents were not entitled to both. The respondents pleaded that the appellants had no interest in the property in suit as the former mortgage had become irredeemable when the mortgage of the 14th January 1867 was executed, and Rs. 75,000 were due on the mortgage on account of principal, interest, arrears of takavi, etc. Held that B having admitted that the mortgage of 1838 was redeemable, and by that admission having induced the appellants to withdraw their suit, the respondents, as his representatives, were estopped from denying that that mortgage was redeemable in 1867. Held further, that, under the terms of the contract made on the 14th January 1867, the appellants were not liable to pay anything more than 2 per cent. on the principal for the whole term of the mortgage. Had there been an agreement to pay interest at the rate of 2 per cent. per mensem, there would be no sufficient reasons for finding that such a bargain was unconscionable and should not be enforced. CHAMPAT SINGH v. plaintiff at time of argument.—On the 17th May 1881, the widow of one Ishri Singh mortgaged to the appellants certain lands belonging to her husband for ten thousand rupees at 12 per cent. per annum. There was a stipulation that if the interest were not paid, when due, it should be added to the principal and carry interest at the rate above mentioned. There was also a stipulation that if all the interests were not paid within three years the mortgagees should be entitled to the possession of the mortgaged property. Out of the mortgage money, the widow paid off nine thousand and nine hundred rupees to one B on account of her husband's debt, which carried interest at the rate of 15 per cent per annum, and Rs. 100 to the mortgagees by way of commission. The mortgagees obtained a decree for possession of the property on the 17th April, 1885, against the widow. In accordance with the terms of the mortgage, the decree provided that the mortgagor should be entitled to redeem in the khali fasl of Jeth on payment of the principal sum together with interest due thereon from the 17th May, 1881, to the date on which the mortgagee obtained possession which was the 22nd April 1885. Subsequently, the respondents as reversionary heirs of Ishri Singh sued the appellants for possession and redemption of the mortgaged property. The appellants claimed a certain sum on the mortgage, but subsequently they abandoned part of their claim. The issue relating to the mortgage ran, "Was the mortgage dated the 17th May, 1881, for consideration and for payment of Ishri Singh's debt?" In the course of the argument, the respondents were allowed to urge that, even if the issue were found in the affirmative, the mortgage was invalid, inasmuch as, there being no danger of the property being sold in satisfaction of Ishri Singh's debt due to B and no necessity for paying it, as B was taking the profits in lieu of interest it was not beneficial to the estate. Held that the respondents should have been limited to the case which was made by their pleadings, and the issue as to the validity of the mortgage, their case being that no consideration passed for the mortgage, and it was not made to pay off Ishri Singh's debt, and that the mortgage was therefore invalid, and that they should have been allowed to make at the last stage of the suit the further new case that the mortgage was invalid as it was not necessary or for the benefit of the estate. Held, further, that the mortgage was one which a prudent owner might make in order to benefit the estate, and that it was therefore a valid mortgage. Held, therefore that the appellants were entitled to be paid compound interest for the period between the date of the mortgage and the date on which they obtained possession in accordance with the conditions of the mortgage. Held, further, that the amount of Rs. 100 taken by the appellants by way of commission did not benefit the estate, and they were not entitled to claim it from the respondents. Held, further, that on payment of mortgage money within the six months' time fixed by the Court the mortgage would be redeemed, and the respondents would be entitled to possession, any stipulation as to their taking possession in the Khali fasl of Jeth notwithstanding. Held, further that in suits for redemption unless there are special reasons to the contrary the parties should pay and be paid costs in proportion to their success and failure as regards the amount alleged to be due on the mortgage. KALKA SINGH v. (501)—Purchase of mortgagor's equity of redemption—Further mortgage by mortgagor subsequent to purchase, if binding on purchaser.—A mortgagor, who has sold away his equity of redemption in the mortgaged property could not, by creating subsequent to such sale any further charge or mortgage, impose any additional burden on the vendees so as to derogate from their rights under the purchase and to render them liable to pay such further debt also before exercising their right to redeem. By their purchase, the vendees had acquired a title which, under the provisions of s. 91 of the Transfer of Property Act, gave them a right to redeem the whole of the mortgaged property by paying off the mortgage in existence at the time of their purchase, and in that way to acquire full proprietary possession of the portion of it as to which they had acquired the equity of redemption. BHAGWAN DAS v. [R., 6 Bom. The day after the execution of the usufructuary mortgage the mortgagor executed a lease deed for four years in favour of the mortgagee and agreed to pay a fixed rent annually, making the rent a charge upon the property. The terms of the mortgage and the lease-deed were not coincident. At the date of execution of the mortgage, one of the mortgaged villages was the subject of a suit for pre-emption, which was ultimately successful and the pre-emptor obtained possession of the same. No steps were taken by the mortgagees to obtain an equivalent of that village; they remained satisfied with the rest of the security. A suit for redemption was brought by the representatives of the mortgagor. It was contended by the defendants (1) that the plaintiffs should be compelled to pay off the rent due by them as a condition precedent to redemption and (2) that they should recoup the loss incurred by the defendants on account of the deprivation of the village, the subject of the suit for pre-emption. Held, that the mortgage and the lease-deed were separate and independent transactions and that, as there was nothing to show that the mortgage should not be redeemed unless the charge created by the lease was also paid off, the defendants were not entitled to claim the amount due to them under the lease, (16 A. 295, R.) and that the defendants were disentitled to claim anything for the loss of the village, as they had acquiesced in the loss of that security and remained content with the other villages in their possession. KHUDA BAKHSH v. years, nor any acquiescence by the mortgagor not amounting to a release of the equity of redemption, will be a bar or defence to a suit for redemption, if the parties are otherwise entitled to redeem. A mortgagee, who purchases, the equity of redemption benamiee in the name of another, cannot set up his possession as adverse to the right of the mortgagor. The view that a mortgagee should not acquire the equity of redemption, directly or indirectly by purchase at a Court-sale, except by a suit brought on the mortgage, on account taken and time specially allowed by redemption, is based on a misapplication of a sound principle of equity. The true principle is that a mortgagee cannot by obtaining a money decree for the mortgage-debt, and taking the equity of redemption in execution, relieve himself of his obligations as mortgagee, or deprive the mortgagor of his right to redeem on accounts taken, and with the other safeguards usual in a suit on a mortgage. Where a mortgagee purchases, at a Court-sale, the equity of redemption without a suit brought on the mortgage, such sale is not a nullity for want of jurisdiction, but only irregular in procedure. Sale in execution of a decree cannot be treated as void or be avoided on the ground of any mere irregularities of procedure in obtaining the decree or in the execution thereof. But a Court has no jurisdiction to sell the property of persons, who are not parties to the proceeding or properly represented on the record. As against such persons, the decree and sale would be a nullity and might be disregarded without any proceeding to set it aside. (Marsh 647, F.) Where a Judge accepted, without a question and without applying his mind to the matter, a statement that a particular person is the representative of a deceased person, passed decree against such representative and, in execution of that decree, sold the property of the deceased, such sale is without jurisdiction and null and void, it not being a case of erroneous decision. *KHAIRAJ MAL v. s. 99.—A certain person mortgaged the suit property to the father of the appellant and subsequently mortgaged the same to the respondent. The appellant, subsequently, purchased the property in execution of a simple money decree of his. The respondent puisne-encumbrancer brought the present suit for sale upon his mortgage and offered to redeem the prior mortgage, alleging that the Court-sale in execution of the simple money decree was illegal. The appellant defended the suit, and stated that he was entitled to redeem the subsequent encumbrancer and offered to redeem him. The lower Appellate Court gave the plaintiff a decree for sale, holding that the appellant, the prior mortgagee had no right of redeeming the subsequent mortgagee. Held that the appellant, the prior encumbrancer, who had purchased the equity of redemption in execution of his simple money decree, was entitled to redeem the respondent, the subsequent mortgagee whose incumbrance was created prior to the purchase. Held, also, that, although the sale of the appellant was in direct contravention of the provisions of s. 99, Transfer of Property Act, the sale was final, as the mortgagor took no objection to the sale, and that neither the mortgagor nor the puisne encumbrancer could dispute the title which the prior mortgagee obtained by the purchase. *MANGALI PRASAD v. (b) The plaintiff purchased the mortgagee's rights and the equity of redemption in the remainder of the property not covered by the defendant's decree. (c) The defendant was entitled to redeem the plaintiff by paying off the proportionate amount of the plaintiff's mortgages due on the property purchased by him. (508)—Mortgagor — Right of redemption—Effect of laches—Duty of mortgagees to furnish accounts.—This was an action to redeem from mortgage and recover possession of a field alleged to have been mortgaged to the defendant. In the mortgage which was effected in 1844, there was a stipulation that if the mortgagor failed to pay a moiety of the mortgage-money within three years, or wholly to redeem within five years, the property mortgaged should be considered as sold to the mortgagee. Possession of the mortgaged property remained with the mortgagor for three years, at the end of which it passed to the hands of the mortgagee, who then, according to the law of mortgage as recognised at the time, became the absolute owner. Subsequently to 1847, the property changed hands. The absolute right was sold in 1855, and then, on two occasions in 1862, and the representative of the latter purchaser of 1862 was the defendant in the present suit. This case was held by the High Court to differ from ordinary redemption cases in this, that there was here absolute delivery of possession to the mortgagee by the mortgagor, who, when he gave up that possession, fully knew that, as the law was then understood, he thereby lost all right to the property, and, subsequently, though fully aware that the field was sold over and over again, he stood by in silence, and so led purchasers to believe that they were purchasing an unincumbered estate. Under the above peculiar circumstances of the case, the mortgagee was held not liable to be called upon to furnish accounts of the rents and profits on the one hand and of the amount of the mortgage on the other. RAM SHET BACHA SHET v. PANDHARI NATH, 8 B.H.C.A.C. 236. [F., 14 B. 78; R., 9 B.H.C. 69, 1 M. 1, P.C. = 2 I.A. 241.]

(509)—Land taken by mortgagee in exchange for mortgaged land—Right of mortgagor to redeem—Forest Act (VII of 1878), s. 10 (d).—Certain lands had been mortgaged by the plaintiff to the deceased brother of their present holder H. The Forest Department wanted to acquire the lands of which H admitted he was only the mortgagee. It was arranged between H and the Forest Department that he should allow the assessment to fall into arrears, upon which Government would forfeit the holding, and that then H should receive another plot in exchange. The present suit was by the mortgagor's heir to redeem the land so acquired in exchange. Reversing the decree of the special Judge and restoring that of the Subordinate Judge, the High Court held that by non-payment of the assessment, the whole building became liable to forfeiture, and such forfeiture extinguished the rights of the mortgagor who could no longer maintain his equity of redemption against Government in whom the land became vested. H was, however, a trustee for the mortgagor of the latter's equity of redemption which he had lost out of his hands by his own fraud. He obtained the plot now sought to be redeemed as the compensation or price of the lands previously mortgaged and as the rights of the parties in the latter lands were thereby transferred to the former, he obtained the former only to hold it just as he held the latter, viz., as mortgagee for the plaintiff and his heirs who were therefore entitled to redeem the said land taken in exchange. *BABAJI v. (510)—Mortgage with possession—Mortgagee bound to pay Government revenue—Sale for arrears of revenue—Purchase by mortgagee—Right of mortgagor to redeem not affected.—The general rule that a Government sale for arrears of revenue gives a title against all the world is subject to the exception that a person cannot take advantage of his own wrong. So, where certain property was mortgaged with possession and the mortgagee was under the mortgage to pay the Government-revenue, and owing to his default the land was sold for arrears of revenue and he himself purchased it, held that the right of the mortgagor to redeem the mortgage and to recover the land was not affected. *KALAPPA v. and 4 who traded as a firm. He gave a second mortgage on the same property to the second defendant only for a loan advanced by him personally, the mortgage-deed containing a stipulation to the effect that the debt due thereunder must be paid off before the prior mortgage-debt. The plaintiff, as purchaser of the equity of redemption from the heirs of the mortgagor, brought this suit for redemption of the prior mortgage only against the defendants. The latter contended that the plaintiff could not redeem the earlier mortgage without redeeming the subsequent one. Held that the plaintiff was entitled to a decree for redemption. The later mortgage-debt in the second defendant's favour being a personal one, the firm, as such, had no equity to insist on its being paid before redemption of the earlier mortgage, whatever rights the second defendant himself might have to insist on it. The present suit being one against the firm and the second defendant being a party thereto (not in his individual capacity but as a member of the firm), he could not, in this suit for redemption of the earlier mortgage, resist the plaintiff's right to redeem for any reason based on the stipulations contained in the later mortgage-deed executed to himself alone in his individual capacity. CHHOTALAL GOVINDRAM v. (513) — Adverse possession — Payment of revenue by mortgagee—Possession obtained by mortgagee—Land Revenue Code, Bombay (Act V of 1879), ss. 56, 57, 153.—Plaintiff executed a mortgage-deed in favour of the defendant in 1870. The latter obtained a decree on it in 1876 but did not execute it. In 1876, the mortgaged property was about to be sold for arrears of assessment. The defendant paid the arrears and prevented the sale. Thereupon he was put in possession of the property by the Mamlatdar. Since then he continued to be in possession and pay the assessment. Now, the plaintiff sued him for redemption and the defendant pleaded adverse possession. Held that the plaintiff was entitled to redeem. There was nothing in the Mamlatdar's report on the defendant's possession to show that the land was declared to be forfeited by the Collector, as contemplated by ss. 56, 57 and 153 of the Land Revenue Code. All that could be gathered from it was that the defendant prevented proceedings under s. 56 by himself paying the arrears. That could not make the defendant's possession adverse or affect the original relationship of mortgagor and mortgagee between the plaintiff and himself, which remained still in existence after the decree of 1876, subject only to the mortgagee's right under the decree to sell within three years from the date thereof. DASHARATHA v. in another to which proprietor not a party—Effect of such decree on proprietor's right to redeem mortgage.—The plaint lands were originally the janmam property of the first defendant's family, by whom they were sold to the plaintiff. After her purchase, the plaintiff established her proprietary right to them as against the first defendant's family and a mortgagee thereof with possession. Subsequently, the first defendant himself sued this otti mortgagee and obtained a decree against him in a suit to which the plaintiff was not a party, since which time the second defendant who had obtained a transfer of the rights of the first defendant held possession. The present suit by the plaintiff was for redemption of otti mortgage and was brought more than twelve years after the decree in favour of the first defendant. Held that the relation of things created by the decree in favour of the plaintiff as against the first defendant and the otti mortgagee in possession could not terminate by mere lapse of time. Unless the plaintiff was aware or might, by ordinary diligence, have been aware of the suit by the first defendant, the claim of the plaintiff was not barred, though twelve years may have elapsed from the date of the decree in the latter suit to the institution of the present suit. PUDIYAKOVILAGALLA v. (515)—Suit for redemption — Decree on a different mortgage set up by defendant, propriety of.—In this suit for redemption, the defendant, in his written statement, admitted that he held as mortgagee, but alleged that he did so under a previous mortgage different from the one sued on by the plaintiff. Reversing the decree passed by the Court of first instance in favour of the plaintiff, as on the mortgage admitted by the defendant, the lower appellate Court dismissed the suit on the ground that the plaintiff, having failed to establish the mortgage relied on by him, should not be given a decree based on a different mortgage and a state of facts inconsistent with the case set up in his plaint. The High Court held that the decree made by the Court of first instance did not in any way proceed upon a cause of action different from that made in the plaint. There was no contravention of the rule that a plaintiff ought not to be allowed to alter his case "so as to convert a suit of one character into a suit of another and inconsistent character." The cause of action remained the same, namely, the right of a mortgagor to redeem from a mortgagee. LAKSHMAN BHISAJI SIRSEKAR v. (517)—Suit to redeem by purchaser in execution—Absence of certificate of title—Production of certificate at hearing.—In this case, the lower appellate Court dismissed the suit for redemption brought by the plaintiff, on the ground that the certificate of sale from which he derived his title was not in existence when the suit was brought and that, consequently, the plaintiff had not then a complete title, but the High Court remanded the case for the usual decree for redemption being passed in favour of the plaintiff. The plaintiff and his assignors had successively purchased and paid for the equity of redemption, although the certificate of sale was not issued until after the suit had begun, and there is no reason why, if a party (whose title may, to some extent, be imperfect) sues for redemption and is able to prove a perfect title at the hearing of his cause, he should not be given a decree for redemption. *KRISHNAJI RAOJI GODBOLE v. (522)—Conditional sale clause in mortgage deed, effect of, on mortgage.—In 1884, the plaintiffs sued to redeem a mortgage made by their father in 1854, stipulating that the mortgaged land was to be considered as sold if the mortgage money was not paid within five years. The mortgagee had brought a suit in 1866, to recover certain sums due by the plaintiff's father on the above and certain other mortgages and account was taken therein on the basis that the land had become the mortgagee's property and decree passed for the balance due on the other mortgages. The lower Courts held that the present claim for redemption was too stale for admission, the conditional sale having been made prior to 1864, but the High Court decided that the rule in Ramji v. Chinto was in force in the Presidency of Bombay with regard to mortgages containing clauses of conditional sale, whether executed before or after 1864. The lower Courts were also wrong in having held that the mortgage had merged in the decree passed against the mortgagor in the suit of 1866. That suit had been brought to recover a different mortgage-debt and the question of the subsistence of the present mortgage, though mentioned therein, was not directly and substantially in issue at that time. Nor could it be contended that the plaintiffs were prevented from redeeming the property merely because, up to 1866 the understanding of the parties was that the mortgage had been converted into a sale and that the property had passed to the defendants by purchase. Mere admissions of such an understanding, even when made in depositions and pleadings, have been held not to operate as estoppel or prevent

Where, in such a case, after the cancelment of the sale at the suit of his sons, the vendor, a Hindu father, sued the mortgagee for possession of the property on the ground of such cancelment, and his suit was dismissed, on the ground that he could not be allowed to retain the purchase-money and eject the mortgagee-purchaser, and that he was also estopped from setting up the invalidity of his own sale; and the property, which thus continued to be in possession of the mortgagee, was attached in execution of a decree, held by a third party, against the mortgagor and his sons; and the mortgagee objected on the ground that the judgment-debtors had no saleable interest in it, and his objections were overruled under s. 246 of the Civ. Pro. Code, and the property was sold to the decree-holder; held, in a suit by the decree-holder as purchaser of the equity, for redemption of the mortgage, that he was entitled to such relief, and that the mortgagee, not having prosecuted, by means of a suit, his disallowed claim, could not urge, in this suit, the plea of res judicata, or his claim for a lien for his purchase-money, or any other plea to the effect that he was anything more than a mortgagee. In such a case as well as in the case when the personal decree in execution of which he purchases is a decree obtained by himself, he must be equally looked upon as availing himself of his position as mortgagee to obtain an undue advantage over the mortgagor or otherwise to be acting mala fide in the eye of the law (whether there be actual fraud or collusion or not), and in contravention of the principle underlying s. 99 of the Transfer of Property Act. *ERUSAPPA MUDALIAR v. The judgment-debtor's son, who was born after the decree and before the sale, sued to set aside the sale or to have it declared that the sale did not affect his share in the annuity. Held, that although a sale in contravention of s. 99 of the Transfer of Property Act is not absolutely void for all purposes, it is void against all persons who are not parties to the suit in which the decree for money was obtained. In the present case, the sale did not affect the share of the plaintiff in the annuity, and the plaintiff was entitled to a decree for the redemption of his share. *MUTHURAMAN CHETTY v. In 1902, another mortgage was executed over the same property in favour of R. The second mortgage was a registered one and the mortgagee had no notice of the first. The second mortgagee had, therefore, a priority over the first. The second mortgagee brought a suit for sale of the property, without making the first mortgagee a party to it, and bought the property himself. In the sale proclamation, the mortgage of C was notified. Subsequently the puisne (i.e., 1st), mortgagee, Charni, brought a suit for sale of the property: Held, that, as subsequent mortgagee, he could bring the equity of redemption to sale, subject to the rights of the prior mortgagee. (29 A. 385, R.) A prior mortgagee, by making a purchase at a sale in execution of his own decree to which the puisne mortgagee is no party, becomes possessed of the equity of redemption belonging to his mortgagor, subject to the rights of the puisne mortgagee. (10 A. 520, R.) The prior mortgagee by making such purchase stands in the shoes of the mortgagor, and can redeem the puisne mortgagee. CHARNI v. RAJ BAHADUR, 2 Ind. Cas. 495. The second mortgage provided that the property should not be redeemed except upon payment of the additional advance. Held, that, there being nothing in the transaction which could be regarded as delivery of the property, the deed should have been registered. Held further, that a purchaser of the property subject to the mortgage was not bound by the stipulation postponing redemption till payment of the additional advance. Held, also, that the stipulation could not be enforced because the subsequent deed being inadmissible in evidence under s. 49 of the Registration Act could not be used to fetter the equity of redemption. *SADA SHEO v. Para 12, s. 17, of the Punjab Civil Code, however lays down a different rule, and grants one of several joint-mortgagors the right to redeem only his own share. RULLIA RAM v. ENAYAT SHAH, 95 P. A mortgagee built a house in the land mortgaged to him, without any objection from, but also without the consent of the mortgagor. Held that the mortgagor could redeem the property, but that he must also pay the mortgagee a fair and reasonable sum for the house he permitted him to build, or to the building of which he made no objection at the proper time. GANSHAM v. The Tahsildar refused to consider defendant's plea regarding improvements and gave plaintiffs a decree for redemption and possession. Held, that the question of compensation raised should have been made an issue in the case, but that the suit itself was beyond the jurisdiction of the Tahsildar's Court as the amount of compensation claimed was beyond his powers. The Tahsildar ought to have dismissed the suit leaving plaintiff to bring a suit in the proper Court. BUDHA v. MUHAMMAD KHAN, 20 P.R. 1879. [R., 82 P.R. 1888, 1 P.R. 1887; D., 63 P.R. 1887.]

(537)—Mortgage—Redemption—Acknowledgment by one of several mortgagees, effect of—Limitation Acts XIV of 1859, IX of 1871, and XV of 1877.—A right to sue barred under the earlier Limitation Act XIV of 1859 is not revived by the later Act IX of 1871 which came into operation on 1st April, 1873. A mortgage which had been executed 69 years before date of suit, 5th February 1878, was acknowledged in 1857 by one of the mortgagees. A suit for redemption having been instituted, the question was whether that acknowledgment saved the right to redeem, and this depended on whether the suit was governed by the new law, or by the former law as enacted in Act IX of 1871, or Act XIV of 1859. Held that, if the period prescribed by the old law had expired when Act XV of 1877 was passed, the old law was still applicable though the suit was instituted subsequent to the 1st October 1877, and that, as under Act IX of 1871 as well as under Act XIV of 1859, an acknowledgment only served to revive the mortgagor's right of redemption when it has been made in writing by the mortgagee or some person claiming under him, the alleged acknowledgment not having been signed by the mortgagees in person or by those claiming under them, the suit was barred 9 years before suit and the claim was extinct when Act XV of 1877 was passed. HAKIM DEVI DYAL v. (540)—Mortgage—Redemption—Value for purposes of appeal—Interest two per cent. compound—Zamindar and money-lender—Undue influence—Mortgagee not taking possession at once—Punjab Courts Act (XVIII of 1884) as amended by the Punjab Act (I of 1912), s. 40 (b).—For the purposes of s. 40 (b) of the Punjab Courts Act (XVIII of 1884) as amended, the value of a suit for redemption is the sum found by the first Court to be payable to the mortgagee, and the fact that the lower appellate Court has reduced that sum is immaterial. (23 P.R. 1909=37 P.W.R. 1909, F.) In the absence of any previous dealings between a Zamindar and a money lender, no question of undue influence can arise. Consequently two per cent. compound interest payable under the terms of a mortgage-deed of landed property cannot be reduced on the ground of the former being under the undue influence of the latter. Where mesne profits after payment of revenue are to go towards compound interest, and the mortgagor fails to give possession, the mortgagee is entitled to his full compound interest as agreed. But where the mortgagee neglects to execute the decree for possession, he should get only simple interest at the agreed rate. In this case Rs. 241 were added to a principal of Rs. 100 in about 13 years. BIRJ RAJ v. TIRKHA, 100 P.W.R. 1912=130 P.L.R. 1912=16 Ind. Cas. 119. (23 P. R. 1909=37 P.W.R. 1909, F.)

(44 P.R. 1888, 5 P.R. 1911=9 Ind. Cas. 676=59 P.W.R. 1911, F.) A suit for redemption was filed in the Court of a Subordinate Judge, having civil jurisdiction without pecuniary limits. The plaintiff prayed for redemption on payment of Rs. 400. The Subordinate Judge gave a decree for redemption on payment of Rs. 3,770. From this decree, both sides appealed to the Divisional Court, which decreed redemption on payment of Rs. 14,000. Held, further, that the Divisional Judge had jurisdiction to entertain the appeal when first presented and to pass a decree for redemption on payment of a sum exceeding five thousand rupees. (106 P.R. 1895, F.; 16 P.R. 1908=13 P.W.R. 1907, D.) A mortgaged certain land to B. B was already in possession of the land as a tenant and had made considerable improvements during the period of his tenancy. When A sued for redemption, B pleaded that he could not be ousted before he was awarded compensation for the improvements effected during the term of his tenancy. There was no clause in the mortgage-deed providing for payment of compensation to the mortgagee in the form of value of the improvements before redemption. Held, that the Civil Court had no jurisdiction to entertain the plea of B as regards his rights in respect of the improvements effected under the conditions of B's tenancy. The mortgagor was entitled to redeem what was mortgaged and to be put in the same position as regards the mortgagee qua the mortgage as he was at the time when he had entered into the mortgage. If the mortgagee had any rights under the conditions of his tenancy and could claim to retain possession as a tenant until paid full compensation for the trees, he could plead that, when the mortgagor sought possession through the agency of the Revenue Courts, or, if he had any claim which he could affirmatively urge before a Revenue Court, he could sue in the Revenue Court. DYAL SINGH v. The provisions of the Transfer of Property Act do not in terms refer to a case where the mortgagor claims to split up the mortgage in consequence of the mortgagee having become the owner of the equity of redemption, or to a case where there are disputes between the parties as to the subsisting interest of the mortgagor in the equity of redemption, so as to compel the mortgagee to take upon himself the task of deciding such disputes rightly for himself at the risk of losing interest on money due to him and becoming accountable for mesne profits. (5 E. and B. 639, R.) A statutory right of the character mentioned in s. 76 (i) of the Transfer of Property Act should not be extended where there are disputes between the parties of the kind that existed in this case, so as to throw an undue amount of responsibility on the mortgagee. VENKATARAMA IYER v. In a suit for redemption of mortgage, the mortgagee pleaded that the property had been sold to him by a registered sale-deed and not mortgaged. The contention on behalf of the plaintiff was that, though the deed was executed by him, it was a fraudulent one, inasmuch as he had been induced to sign it by a false representation that it was a mortgage deed. Held, that the suit was governed by art. 148 of the Limitation Act and that the plaintiff was entitled to prove the fraud and the fact that the transaction was a mortgage. Held, further, that art. 91 or art. 142 of the Limitation Act was inapplicable to the case. NGA PAW v. The mortgagee did not pay up the prior incumbrancers, and the plaintiffs, the vendees from mortgagors, sued for redemption of the mortgage before the expiry of ten years. Held that, on equitable grounds, the defendants not having performed what was a most reasonable part of the contract, the plaintiffs should be allowed to redeem

In the prior suit which was governed by Regulation XVII of 1806, the notice required by s. 8 of that Regulation was served upon the plaintiff's father, who was then a minor, through his mother, M, who acted as guardian. Held that A's suit for redemption must fail and that his interests in the former suit were sufficiently represented by his grandmother M. If the person who would naturally be the manager of the family is incapacitated by minority from acting as manager, and the other members are incapacitated by still greater minority the person who is the guardian of the minor who would naturally be the manager takes the place of that manager as regards the other minors and fully represents them. BAJI RAO v. (547)—Suit by prior mortgagee for redemption—Puisne mortgagee not impleaded therein—Subsequent suit by puisne mortgagee for redemption—Amount payable by latter.—The puisne mortgagee cannot treat the prior mortgagee as a mortgagee for one purpose and as a decree-holder for another. So where a prior mortgagee obtained a decree for sale in a suit on the prior mortgage, without impleading the puisne mortgagee, and the puisne mortgagee subsequently seeks to redeem the prior mortgage, he must pay the prior mortgagee interest at the mortgage-rate and not at the decree rate. PON-NAMBALA CHETTI v. if not a sale. A registered instrument is necessary to evidence it. It is not a compromise amounting merely to acknowledgment or adjustment of existing rights. Suit not barred by limitation. Sadasiva Iyer, J.—The Transfer of Property Act exhaustively deals with all known kinds of transfer of immoveable property. Conveyances are either sale, exchange or gift. They require registered instruments to evidence them. Price paid means not only money but includes cases of vendor's claim for price being satisfied by his acceptance of what is tantamount to payment. In cases of compromise where only existing rights are recognised, registered writing is unnecessary. Title by prescription cannot arise by mere assertion of possession as owner under an invalid sale. Art. 144 of the Limitation Act cannot be invoked in favour of the mortgagee if the mortgagor is not barred by art. 148 from redeeming. S. 92 of the Evidence Act does not preclude oral evidence of payment in extinguishment of mortgage rights, but not for proving an invalid oral conveyance of the equity of redemption by virtue of such payment. *ARIYAPUTHIRA PADAYACHI v. Pending the appeal the mortgagors had deposited the amount of the decree of the Judicial Commissioner which however the mortgagees did not withdraw, as they might have done without prejudice to their pending appeal either by arrangement or with the sanction of the Court in India or the sanction of the Board which would have been given as a matter of course. Held, that, if the amount deposited has lapsed to Government under the Rules owing to the same not having been withdrawn in time, the mortgagees must give credit for the amount. A person who obtains an ex parte judgment is responsible for any slip in the order founded on the judgment. *CHAMPAT SINGH v. JANGU SINGH, 16 C.W.N. 793, P. C.=12 M. L. liable to pay assessment—Mortgagee cannot deny mortgagor's title to redeem.—The plaintiffs' ancestor executed in 1855 a usufructuary mortgage of certain lands which were their Deshbat Inam, to the defendant's ancestor. In 1856, the Inam lands were made Khalsa and the order was communicated to the mortgagee who was in possession. The mortgagee, however, after the forfeiture, continued in possession and went on paying assessment in respect of the lands to Government. In 1901, the plaintiffs sued to redeem the mortgage. The defendant resisted the claim on the ground that the order of forfeiture deprived the plaintiffs of all right to the lands and that the title thereafter became vested in the defendant by reason of the fact that he was allowed by Government to continue in possession and pay the assessment:—Held, (1) that the order of forfeiture had not the legal effect of depriving the plaintiffs, who were the Desais, of all right and title to the lands; and that the resumption had merely the effect of converting the land from a service tenure into land liable to pay assessment to Government; (1 B.H.C. 22, 9 B. 419; F.); (2) that the defendant who came into possession of the property as mortgagee of the plaintiffs could not turn round after the order of forfeiture and take the benefit of it and challenge the validity of the mortgage, in virtue of which his title to the land as mortgagee had begun. *GURBASAPPA v. He claimed to redeem it for Rs. 246. B admitted the mortgage, but alleged that the original mortgage-money was Rs. 270. He further alleged that further advances had been taken by various persons who were heirs of the mortgagor and that the total mortgage-money amounted to Rs. 820 which B had agreed to reduce to Rs. 770. The first Court dismissed the suit on the ground that A should have sued for partition. The lower Appellate Court held that this was wrong and remanded the case for a finding as to the amount of mortgage-money. The first Court placed the burden of proof upon B and held that he had not discharged it and, therefore, found that the amount was Rs. 246, the sum for which A claimed redemption. In second appeal it was contended that the burden of proving the amount of mortgage was wrongly placed on the defendant-appellant. Held (1) that, before B could be called upon to prove the amount of mortgage-money, A must prove something and that he had established nothing. (U. B. R. 1892—1896, Vol. II, 350, D.); (2) that the ordinary rule must be applied and that, as A could not succeed without relying on B's admission, that admission must be taken as a whole and that it must be held that the original mortgage-money was Rs. 270; (3) that, as regards some of the further advances, as the person, to whom they were made, had no interest in the land at all, A was not bound by such advances; (4) that, as the other advances were made by documents which were unstamped and unregistered, and were not produced, they could not be proved, and that, therefore, they did not affect the land; (5) that, therefore, A was entitled to redeem the land for Rs. 270. If a mortgagee gives an advance to a person other than the mortgagor without the latter's consent, the mortgagor is nevertheless entitled to redeem the mortgaged property for the sum for which he mortgaged it, and the mortgagee then retains a charge on the interest of the person to whom he made the subsequent advance. NGA SHWE PA V. (552)—Old mortgage—Subsequent agreement subjecting the right of redemption to certain conditions—Suit for redemption of mortgage in the absence of breach of compromise, maintainability of.—This was a suit for redemption of a mortgage executed by the plaintiffs' ancestor in 1846 in favour of the predecessor in title of the defendants. There were certain proceedings inter partes during the first regular settlement in the course of which certain razinamahs were entered into between the parties under which the representatives of the mortgagor agreed to subject their right of redemption to certain conditions. The razinamahs were filed in the Settlement Court which passed a decree subject to the conditions set forth in the razinamahs. Held, that there was nothing in law to prevent the parties to a mortgage from coming to any arrangement afterwards qualifying the right to redeem. Held, further, that, as it was not alleged that there was any breach of the covenants contained in the deed of compromise, the suit for redemption was rightly dismissed. SHANKER DIN V. (553)—Mortgagee's right to pre-empt sale of equity of redemption becoming time-barred—Suit for redemption—Pre-emption as a defence.—In 1897, A mortgaged his estate to B, a co-sharer. Subsequently in 1906, A sold his equity of redemption to C. B allowed his rights to pre-empt the sale of 1906 to become time-barred. C then sued B for redemption of the mortgage: Held, that, under the circumstances, C was entitled to redeem the mortgage of 1897 and that B could not plead in defence that he had a right of pre-emption. WAJID ALI V. to account for rents and profits received during the period—Expenses of management, necessarily incurred—Costs of taking accounts and striking balance against redemption money—Costs of special leave application.—Where a suit for redemption of a mortgage in respect of property, of which the mortgagee took and kept possession from 11th February 1864, was commenced on 30th May, 1888, and a preliminary decree for accounts, &c., was passed by the Subordinate Judge on 29th June, 1889, and the decree, subject to certain modifications in favour of the plaintiffs, was affirmed by the High Court on 10th September, 1890, and the decree of the High Court was affirmed by the Privy Council on 27th July, 1895; and the plaintiffs having applied in the meanwhile for the taking of accounts in pursuance of the decree of the High Court, the same was taken and a final decree for redemption was passed by the Subordinate Judge on the 29th July, 1902, declaring that a sum of Rs. 3,31,162-0-11 was due, from the plaintiffs, to the defendant, at that date, and decreeing that, on payment into Court, within six months from that date, of the said sum with interest at 12 per cent. per annum, on the sum of Rs. 2,86,886 from the 29th July, 1902, to the date of payment into Court within such six months, the plaintiffs should have a reconveyance, free of incumbrances, of the property under mortgage, &c., and the plaintiffs appealed to the High Court and the defendants also filed cross objections, but both were dismissed by that Court, and upon appeal and cross-appeal by both parties to the Privy Council, the decree of the Subordinate Judge of 29th July, 1902, was maintained by the Board's judgment, dated the 13th June, 1912, but the Privy Council found that, in the action, the defendants had been obstructive and oppressive and they had unduly and intentionally prolonged the litigation to their own advantage and to the serious detriment of the plaintiffs: Held by the Privy Council, that no further sum as interest beyond the interest on the sum of Rs. 2,86,886 decreed by the Subordinate Judge for the period from 29th July, 1902, to the 28th January, 1903, should be allowed to the defendants in the accounts which the High Court was directed to take of the rents and profits which the defendants had received since 29th July, 1902, and it was ordered that the expenses of taking such account and all procedure incident thereto and to the striking of the balance upon payment of which redemption might be made, was to be borne by the defendants, that allowance should be made in taking the accounts for money, if any, necessarily spent by the defendants after the 29th July, 1902, in the proper management and preservation of the mortgaged property, but no interest should be allowed on the money so spent, but that simple interest should be allowed to the plaintiffs on the balance or excess of each year's receipts over expenditure at a rate to be fixed by the High Court, and that the sum of money found to be due to the plaintiffs should be deducted by the High Court from the amount which would have been payable by the plaintiffs into Court on the 28th January, 1903, if payment had been made under the decree of the Subordinate Judge of 29th July, 1902, and that the plaintiffs should be allowed to redeem on payment by them into the High Court within a time to be fixed by that Court of the balance to be ascertained in the manner indicated. In the appeal and cross-appeal, the respective parties were directed to bear their own costs, except those in connection with the application for special leave to cross-appeal, which, in accordance with the order granting such leave, was to be paid by the cross-appellants. *GANGA BAHU DEBI v. (555)—Mortgage—Suit by puisne mortgagee to redeem prior mortgage—Decree in prior mortgagee's suit reducing rate of interest—Puisne mortgagee not party to such suit—Whether he can claim benefit of interest.—A puisne mortgagee suing to redeem prior mortgage is not entitled to get the benefit of a reduction in the contract rate of interest from the date of the prior mortgagee's decree obtained in a suit to which the former was not a party. *AWATMAL v. (556)—Prior suit for redemption—Second suit—Res judicata—Bar—Time for redemption—Power of Appellate Court to fix.—One redemption suit operates as res judicata to bar a second redemption suit (25 M. 300, 28 A. 1, P.C., 21 A. 251, 7 B. 377, 20 B. 467, R.). The fact that a redemption decree does not extinguish the equity of redemption, which subsists until an order for sale is made on an application by the mortgagee, does not prevent the remedy by way of a second redemption suit becoming barred by the operation of res judicata (25 M. 300, 28 A. 1, P.C., 21 A. 251, 7 B. 377, 20 B. 467, R.). If the period fixed for redemption had not been indicated by a date, but were expressed as a specified period of time, that time would have to be counted from the appellate decree, because the Appellate Court draws up the decree of the lower Court and gives it existence as if made on the day upon which it was thus adopted (11 B. 172, R.). The mere fact that the first Court fixed a date makes no difference to the principle, and the Appellate Court, when making its own decree, is at liberty to fix a fresh date for redemption with reference to the date of its own decree. BIKHOMAL v. RAJALMAL, 6 S.L.R. 140.

(1)—Suit on hypothecation-bond—Proof of debt—Sale of property.—No Court of equity ought to direct the hypothecated property to be sold, and its proceeds applied to the satisfaction of a debt, without first taking care to ascertain that the debt is due. It is not enough that it should be stated in the security bond itself to be due. It is quite open to the defendant to dispute such a statement, if the facts are such as to justify his doing so, and ask the Court to inquire what is equitably due from him to the plaintiff on the bond before it orders the mortgaged property to be sold. AMRITH NATH JHA v. DHUNPUT SINGH BAHADOOR, 20 W. R. 253.

(2)—Ss. 70, 82, Tr. P. Act, 1882—Accession to mortgaged property, incorporated with original subject of security—Sale-proceeds, distribution of.—Where an accession to mortgaged property takes place, it becomes incorporated in the original subject of the security as though it had been in existence at the time when the original security was given. A mortgagor, after executing two simultaneous mortgages in respect of certain property, erected some more buildings on it and subsequently executed several mortgage-deeds in respect of that property. A suit having been brought by one of the subsequent mortgagees it was held (a) that so far as the first two mortgagees were concerned, the newly erected buildings should be considered as accession to the original mortgaged-property and, (b) that the sale-proceeds of all the properties being insufficient to pay off all the mortgagees, the mortgagees were respectively entitled only to such surpluses after payment of the first two mortgages as might be attributable to the property subject to their respective mortgages. KRISHNA GOPAL SADHARI v. MILLER, 29 C. 803.

(3)—Sale of hypothecated property by one other than hypothecatee—Fresh suit.—Hypothecation of property in bonds on which a decree in favour of a party so secured is passed, gives such party a right to the application of the hypothecated property, or its sale proceeds, to the satisfaction of his claim decreed in his favour, although he could not, after the sale of the property in execution of another's decree, have caused it to be re-sold in satisfaction of his own, without bringing a fresh suit and obtaining a decree for that purpose. *GAJHA-DUR PERSHAD v. (9)—Mortgage bond—Right of mortgagee, nature of—Suit on mortgage bond—jurisdiction.—The right which accrues to a lender of money under a mortgage-bond which provides that the amount borrowed thereunder should be repaid on a specified date, is to have his mortgage lien on the land declared and the property sold in satisfaction of his debt, and, if the proceeds be insufficient to satisfy the debt, to proceed against the debtor for any balance of the claim. A suit on such a bond as the above is not cognizable by the Small Cause Court, because the Court could not give to the plaintiff such a decree as the one mentioned or the remedy which alone he is entitled to. LLOYD'S BANK v. RINCHIDIN, 14 W. R. 214.

(11)—Mortgage—Instalment bond—Default—Sale—Surplus—Lien.—A mortgagee of an instalment mortgage bond who brings to sale the entire mortgaged property on one of the instalments becoming due, does not lose all lien over the surplus proceeds. *RAM KANT CHOWDHRY v. (12)—Bond giving separate lien on each of several pledged mouzahs—Right of obligee to elect any mouzah for sale—Sale of portion of property mortgaged—Obligee entitled to purchase a portion.—The plaintiff's bond, in this case, gave him a separate lien on each and all of the mouzahs charged with the debt. Although he might undoubtedly have made the representatives of all defendants, and have recovered his dues by the sale of all, one after the other, unless his debt had been sooner extinguished, yet, the terms of the bond were at the same time held to leave him free to elect which of the mouzahs he thought most likely to satisfy his claim. It was also contended in this case that the mere fact of the plaintiff having bought three of the mouzahs pledged to him and broken up his lien on the others, and had changed the mortgage into a simple unsecured debt, but it was held that there was nothing to prevent the plaintiff from purchasing any of the mouzahs pledged to him, and he bought them at the risk of lessening his own security; nor was there any law preventing a transaction of such a nature between a mortgagor and a mortgagee. MUSSAMUT HOOLAS KOOREE v. MUSSAMUT BIBEE SUFEEHAN, 8 W.R. 379. [R., 4 C. 72=2 C.L.R. 580.]

(13)—Mortgage—Equity of redemption—Purchase by mortgagee—Trustee.—Where a creditor lent money under an agreement and afterwards took a mortgage from the debtor and then sued and obtained a money decree on the original agreement and attached and purchased the mortgaged property in execution of this money decree, he became a trustee for the mortgagor and was liable to be redeemed in a suit brought four years after the sale. A mortgagee cannot, properly, in execution of a simple decree for money, the re-payment of which is secured by mortgage, attach and sell the mortgagor's equity of redemption in the property mortgaged; but if he does so, and purchases it himself, he becomes a trustee for the mortgagor, against whom he cannot acquire an irredeemable title. S. M. KAMINIDEBI v. RAMLOCHAN SIKKAR, 5 B. L. R. 450. [Diss., 30 M. 362=17 M. L. J. 325; F., 3 C. L. R. 237, 1 Ind. Cas. 952=3 S. L. R. 17; R., 23 W. R. 338, 4 C. 817, 5 C. 265=4 C. L. Mortgage—continued.—10.—Sale of mortgaged property—contd.

(14)—Power of sale—Purchaser from the mortgagee—Practice.—A mortgagee in exercising his power of sale is not (except as to the balance of the purchase money) a trustee for the mortgagor even if the mortgage is in the form of a trust for sale. A mortgagee having a power of sale, provided he acts bona fide and takes reasonable precautions to obtain a proper price, has a perfect right to realize his security by sale in such manner as he thinks most conducive to his own benefit. A mortgagee may sell under special conditions even of a stringent character if not unreasonably depreciatory. A depreciatory condition is one which tends to deter persons from bidding or to deter those who do bid from bidding up to so high a figure, and a condition which has that tendency has it because it tends to cripple the rights of a purchaser and to put a fetter on him. The question is whether the condition would tend to the detriment of mortgagor or of an absolute owner or be prudent in an absolute owner. If it would be prudent in an absolute owner it is not imprudent as affecting a mortgagee. Under a power of sale, although a purchaser is relieved from all obligation to make inquiries, yet if circumstances which put in question the propriety of the sale or brought to his knowledge and he purchases with that knowledge he becomes a party to the transaction which is impeached. A proviso relieving a purchaser under a power from inquiring as to the regularity of a sale does not protect the purchaser who knows of an irregularity which cannot have been waived. The mortgagee must sell as if he were a prudent man. He is, however, not at liberty to look after his own interests alone and it is not right or proper or legal for him either fraudulently or wilfully or recklessly to sacrifice the property of the mortgagor. CHHABILDAS v. DAYAL, 5 Bom. L.R. 247 O.C.J., modified on appeal, 6 Bom. L.R. 557; confirmed by Privy Council at 9 Bom. L.R. 1062=31 B. 566=4 A.L.J. 750=11 C.W.N. 1109=6 C.L.J. 674=17 M.L.J. 465, P.C.

(15)—Mortgage in English form—Mortgagor in possession—Mortgagor wilfully making default—Sale for arrears of revenue—Purchase by mortgagor benami—Criminal misappropriation.—Where a mortgage is in an English form in which the property is, in point of law, in the mortgagee, if the mortgagor in possession, who is entrusted by the mortgagee with the dominion over the mortgaged property, wilfully defaults and causes the property to be sold at a Revenue sale for the purpose of defrauding the mortgagee and purchases it benami, he is liable to be punished for criminal misappropriation under s. 405 of the I.P.C. RAM MANICK SHAHA v. BRINDABUN CHUNDER POTDAR, 5 W.R. 230.

(16)—Mortgage decree—Execution of money decree—Sale proceeds—Lien—Election.—A mortgage decree-holder objected to the sale of the mortgaged property in execution of a money decree without reserving his rights. Consequently the sale was held subject to the mortgage. Then the mortgage decree-holder claimed a lien on the surplus sale-proceeds left after satisfying the money decree. Held that he, having satisfied his mortgage-lien, and procured the sale of his debtor's estate subject to that lien, was bound to recoup himself from the mortgaged property and could not get any part of the sale-proceeds, unless it were shown that the mortgaged land had not produced enough to satisfy his claim. KALEE DASS GHOSE v. LALL MOHUN GHOSE, 16 W.R. 306.

(17)—Sale of property subject to mortgage—Mortgagee not entitled to surplus sale proceeds.—A mortgagee of property which has been sold subject to his mortgage is not entitled to have the surplus proceeds paid out to him in satisfaction of the decree which he had obtained upon his mortgage and upon which he had issued execution. MIRZA FUTEH ALI v. MR. A. A. GREGORY, 6 W.R. Mis., 13. [Appr., 14 W.R. 209; Expl., 8 W.R. 301; R., 8 W.R. 291, 16 W.R. 306.]

(18)—Successive mortgages of same property—Sale in execution of money decrees obtained by mortgagees—Rights of purchasers.—Where property which was mortgaged first to A, and then to B, was first sold in execution of a money decree obtained by B for his debt, and subsequently, A also having obtained a money decree caused the rights and interests of the mortgagor to be again sold. Held, that the purchaser under the second sale did not get the estate, but only his judgment-debtor's right, title and interest, which had become extinct by reason of the first sale, and that he could not sue for possession of the property itself. DURPO NARAIN MAHATAH v. NULEETAH SOONDUREE DOSS, 11 W.R. 332.

(19)—Civ. Pro. Code, Act VIII of 1859, s. 259—Mortgage decree—Sale of mortgaged property—Nature of interest sold.—Where, in execution of a mortgage decree, the mortgage property is sold, what is sold is the entire interest of the debtor in the property as it stood at the time of the mortgage. The purchaser takes the property subject to such incumbrances as existed at the time of the mortgage, and he is not bound to discharge subsequent mortgages or charges on the property. The subsequent incumbrancers would, however, be entitled to share in the surplus proceeds of the sale. In applying s. 259 of Act VIII of 1859 to cases of this description, the words "the right, title and interest of the defendant in the property sold" meant the right, title and interest which the decree ordered to be sold, i.e., the right, title and interest which the judgment-debtor had in the property at the time of the mortgage. KASANDAS LALDAS v. PRANJIVAN ASHRAM, 7 B.H.C. A.C. 146. [Appr., 5 B. 2, 5, 16 B. 486, 20 B. 158; R., 11 B.H.C. 139, 5 B. 8, 8 B. 481, 10 B. 224, 20 B. 399, 22 B. 945, 28 B. 153 = 5 Bom. L.R. 892.]

(20)—Mortgagee taking possession under money decree—Rights of puisne mortgagee.—A mortgagee obtained a money decree upon a deed of mortgage hypothecating lands for the payment of money due and bought the mortgaged property in execution of the money decree and entered satisfaction of the decree. Subsequent to this, a puisne encumbrancer under a usufructuary mortgage created before the money decree brought a suit against him for recovery of possession and obtained a decree. Held, that the prior mortgagee could not maintain a suit to recognize his lien under the mortgage bond. KASIMANNISSA BIBI v. HURANNISSA BIBI, 7 B.L.R. App. 8 = 15 W.R. 195. (4 B. L. R. App. 35, F.)

(21)—Mortgage—Mortgagee electing to take money decree—Prior conveyance by mortgagor—Subsequent suit for declaring mortgaged property liable.—Where a mortgagee having the option to take either a decree binding on the property or a simple decree for money, chose the latter and in execution himself became the purchaser and got possession, entering up at the same time satisfaction of his decree, and was afterwards ejected on a suit by a party claiming to hold the mortgaged property on a prior conveyance, from the judgment-debtor, he could not then bring a suit to have the mortgaged property declared liable or saddle it with the money due on his decree at the expense of an innocent third party. KUSEEMOONNISSA BIBEE v. HUROONNISSA BIBEE, 15 W.R. 195. [Diss., 23 W.R. 460]

(22)—Money-decree, property hypothecated for debt sold in execution of—Rights of purchaser.—In this case, admittedly, the defendant had purchased the property in execution of a decree obtained by a person for a debt due under a bond hypothecating for the said debt the property itself, before the hypothecation of the same to the plaintiff under his deed. Plaintiff urged that there being no order in the decree to enforce the lien on the property, defendant had purchased only in execution of a decree for money, and so had purchased only the rights of the debtor as existing at the time of the sale, before which time there was the hypothecation to the plaintiff, and therefore defendant did not purchase any rights as existing in the debtor before the execution of the first bond. The High Court however held that when property hypothecated is held by the debtor and is sold in execution of a money-decree (passed under a bond hypothecating it, without any additional order in the decree for enforcing the lien on the property, the purchaser at the sale is not in such a case competent to plead his previous lien with a view to obtain the property, when a holder of a subsequent bond seeks to enforce his lien decreed against the property. The purchaser in such a case not only stood in the shoes of the debtor, but had purchased all rights in the property as hypothecated by the debtor when the first hypothecation was made and thus also acquired the rights of the decree-holder. SHEO PROSUN SINGH v. BROJOO SAHOO, 7 W.R. 232. [R., 11 W.R. 332, 12 W.R. 260, 19 W.R. 83, 23 W.R. 187, 24 W.R. 94.]

(23)—Decree—Simple money decree—Purchase by decree holders—Possession—Rights of parties.—The plaintiffs respondents obtained a decree for sale and an order absolute under a mortgage executed by one R. H. H. C., a son of R. H. on the sole ground that he had not been impleaded by the mortgagees, obtained a decree, dated the 6th July, 1898, declaring that his share in the family property was not liable to sale. Notwithstanding the latter decree, the plaintiffs sold the entire mortgaged property and themselves purchasing, obtained possession. Next J. K., the holder of a simple money decree against R. H. and H. C. brought to sale a six-pie share together with the equity of redemption of certain land in one of the mortgaged villages and purchased himself. J. K. then sued the plaintiffs for possession, obtained a decree on the 17th December, 1903, subject to any rights which the plaintiffs in the present case might have over the property, and in execution of his decree, was given possession of the six-pie share. Held, that although the plaintiffs' purchase in respect of the property, covered by J. K.'s decree must be treated as a nullity, their general rights as mortgagees were safe-guarded by the terms of that decree, and s. 73 of the Code of Civil Procedure could not bar the plaintiffs' right to bring the present suit. Held, also, that the fact that the plaintiffs had purchased a portion of the mortgaged property did not limit them to a right to sue for a proportionate part only of the mortgage-debt. JAGAL KISHORE SAHU v. HARBANS CHAUDHRI, A.W.N. 1906, 208 = 3 A.L.J. 791 = 28 A. 700. (22 A. 284, D.)

(24)—Mortgage — Money-decree—Execution.—Where the decree in a suit to recover money under a mortgage-bond simply directs the payment of so much money, this is not a decree for the sale of the mortgaged property; and where the property has been alienated by a bona fide conveyance for value received, a decree binding the property cannot be obtained without making the new holder a party to the suit, or showing that he took with notice of the claim, and that the vendor had bound himself not to alienate. *SOOBUNS SINGH v. (25)—Mortgage—Sale of mortgaged property in execution of decree for money—Mortgages executed before Transfer of Property Act, —Transfer of Property Act, s. 2, cl. (c), ss. 67 and 99.—The appellant, to whom three separate and distinct shares in a village had been mortgaged by three separate deeds, obtained a decree for money on a claim not arising under any of the mortgages, and attached the mortgaged property. The question was whether he was entitled to bring such property to sale in execution of the decree for money. The mortgages were severally made at different dates before the Transfer of Property Act came into force. It was contended that under s. 2, cl. (c) of the Act, s. 99 was not applicable where the mortgage was made before the Act came into force. The decree was passed after the Act came into force. Held, that s. 99, Transfer of Property Act, disentitled the appellant to bring the property to sale, otherwise than by instituting a suit under s. 67; and that s. 2, cl. (c) did not bar the application of the provisions of s. 99 to the case.—On the contention that s. 99 was not applicable, because the relation of mortgagor and mortgagee had ceased to exist, as the mortgagee had sub-mortgaged the property and a decree for sale had been made against him on the sub-mortgage, held, that the mortgage did not cease to exist and s. 99 was applicable. It was further contended that the mortgages were purely usufructuary mortgages, that the mortgagee had no right to sell under the Transfer of Property Act, and that s. 99 was only applicable, where, at the time of attachment, the mortgagee could institute a suit under s. 67 and could do so at once. There was no evidence that mortgages were purely usufructuary. Held, that, even if the suit required by s. 99, were one on the mortgages and even if such suit, did not lie under s. 67, the mortgagee could not bring the property to sale, but could only proceed in a certain way before he could sell the property, and that if he could not proceed in that way, he could not sell, as s. 99 did not make any exception. RAMPARSHAD v. RAM PARSHAD SINGH, 4 O.C. 231.

(26)—Mortgagee, Purchase by, of half-share of mortgaged property subject to entire mortgage-debt—Equity of redemption, Purchase of, by mortgagee at sale in execution of money-decree —Mortgagor, Suit for possession by.—In August 1866, the respondents made a usufructuary mortgage of an entire village to the appellant and another co-mortgagee to secure the payment of Rs. 3,000. In August, 1874, the respondents borrowed Rs. 4,500, from the mortgagees, the payment of which was secured by a further charge on the mortgaged property. In 1881, the appellant obtained a money-decree against the respondents and caused an undivided half-share of the village to be attached and put up for sale in execution of this decree. The share was sold subject to the entire mortgage-debt of Rs. 7,000 and the equity of redemption was purchased by the appellant, who, sometime after, paid his co-mortgagee what was due to him on the mortgages and obtained possession of the entire village. The respondents sued the appellant for possession of the remaining eight-annas share on the allegation that the mortgage-money had been satisfied by the sale of the moiety sold. Held, that the purchase by the appellant of a half-share of the mortgaged property subject to the entire mortgage-debt satisfied the entire mortgage-debt; it having been paid to the appellant, he had got all he had a right to; and that the respondents were entitled to recover possession of the other half share without being called upon to pay anything. AMIR HASSAN KHAN v. CHAUDHARI HADI HASAN, 4 O.C. 341. [Rel. on, 10 O.C. 280.]

(27) — Purchaser of equity of redemption at sale in execution of money-decree, neither certificate of sale nor possession obtained by—Sale in execution of decree on prior mortgage, priority of rights of purchaser under.—Plaintiffs' predecessor-in-title purchased the interest of the judgment-debtor in the property in dispute at a sale in execution of a decree on a simple debt. Decrees were subsequently obtained on the prior mortgages thereon. The purchaser of the equity of redemption had not either got possession or obtained a certificate of sale at the time when the sale under the mortgage decree took place. On the inchoate title of the plaintiffs, neither the mortgagee nor the purchaser had any notice. Had the plaintiffs got into possession or obtained a certificate of sale and registered it, there would have been notice sufficient to put all persons interested on enquiry as to the rights of the plaintiffs. The purchase here having been made without notice of the plaintiffs' equitable title, the purchaser under the mortgage-decree acquired a right as good as the plaintiffs and, fortified by possession, his title became a complete one. NANJUNDEPA AND GURULINGAPA v. HEMAPA, 9 B. 10 [R., 17 B. 375, 2 Bom. L.R. 32.]

(28) — Suit on mortgage—Prayer for sale of mortgaged property and for "any other relief to which plaintiff may be entitled"—Subsequent application for money-decree—No inconsistency in granting subsequent prayer.—A mortgage deed contained the usual covenant for payment besides the covenant securing the property, and the mortgagee brought a suit on the mortgage praying for sale of the mortgaged property and also that "any other relief which the plaintiff may be entitled to may be granted, because the mortgaged property is at present under kham management." The suit was heard out and had proceeded up to judgment and decree, when the plaintiff by a fresh application withdrew his prayer for the sale and asked for a simple money decree. Held that the Court was competent to grant the money decree asked for, because when the mortgage covenants were entered into, both parties contemplated the possibility of a simple money decree, and because the decree for sale pre-supposes and gives specific time for payment of the money. Held, further, as to the contention that it would be allowing the plaintiff to alter his suit for sale into a suit of another and inconsistent character, that it was not so, because, looking to the words in which the relief was couched, it was clear that the plaintiff all along asked for a simple money decree, if for any reason the (30 & 31) — Property burdened with debt, sale of, in execution of money decree—Right of purchaser subject to lien.—Defendant obtained a simple money decree and took out execution upon the property in suit, as he might have done upon any other property in the possession of his judgment-debtor. At the time of the sale, the property was admittedly burthened with a debt due to the plaintiff. Held that the defendant should be taken to have bought subject to that lien and to be entitled to retain possession only on paying off the plaintiff's claim under it. SOONEY RAM MARWAREE v. BYJNATH KOOR, 10 W. R. 88. (1 W. R. 315, F. B., F.)

(32) — Bengali mortgage—Plaint—Suit for money-decree on mortgage.—An application was made for leave to file a suit brought to recover the sum of Rs. 2,300 on a Bengali deed of mortgage containing a provision that "if I should fail, within the term of six months, to pay off the whole of your money with interest, in that case you will have recourse to law, and by sale of the said huts recover with interest the whole of your money. Should the whole of your money be not thereby realized, in that case you will get it by the sale of whatever other property I may have elsewhere. Should even then all the money be not realized, I shall in that case be held responsible for the remainder,—that is to say, I shall myself pay. If I should make any objection thereto it shall be false and inadmissible." The plaintiff prayed for a money-decree. Phear, J., refused to admit the plaint. *SRIMATI UMA SUNDARI DAS v. (33) — Act IV of 1862—Bank of Bengal—Loans on security of landed property—Deposit of title-deeds, with written authority to sell—Equitable lien.—The prohibition by s. 30, Act IV of 1862, of the Bank of Bengal entering into loan transaction on the security of immoveable property, does not necessarily include a prohibition against taking such security as a protection against loss in respect of a debt due. A written authority given to the Bank by a debtor to sell his immoveable property, of which the title-deeds are in deposit with the Bank, and to apply the proceeds towards payment of liabilities, creates an equitable lien upon that property even if the circumstances

(34)—Mortgage—Fraud—Priority—Lien.—Where the defendant advances a sum of money upon a simple mortgage, the plaintiffs fraudulently concealing the fact that they have themselves made a prior advance on the same property, the effect is to make the defendant first mortgagee, his purchase of the property at an execution sale, after notice of the plaintiff's mortgage, not affecting his rights as mortgagee. BHARAT LAL BHAGAT v. GOPALSARAN LAL BHAGAT, 3 B. L. R. A. C. 1 = 11 W. R. 286.

(35)—Mortgage of revenues of village executed by a firm—Suit by partner against co-partners for his share of assets—Attachment against estate in execution—Suit by mortgagee for removal of attachment.—The question in this case related merely to the construction of a mortgage-deed by which the revenues of a village were mortgaged by a firm in which the respondent was a partner. By the mortgage-deed it was stipulated that the holders of the mortgage shall station a mehta or clerk of their own in the said village for the purpose of making the collections; so long as the property remained in mortgage, the mehta was to receive his salary from the mortgagors. The instrument was executed on account of the partnership of which the respondent was member, so that though he had not himself executed it, he was cognizant afterwards of its execution, and was bound by its contents so as to be considered as being a mortgagor. This respondent, having obtained a decree against his co-partners for his share of the assets of the firm, got attachment to issue against the estate in execution of his decree. Thereon, the mortgagee instituted the present suit for the removal of such attachment. Their Lordships were of opinion that, on the facts in evidence, actual possession should be deemed to have been taken by virtue of the mortgage and that the transaction was valid up to the time of the notice of the respondent's claim, because, until the attachment was executed there was no notice to the mortgagee of any adverse claim on the part of the respondent. But, when the attachment was placed on the village, the mortgagee had notice of the adverse claim so that if, after that time, he permitted the mortgagor to receive any portion of the profits of that estate, then he ought, with respect to the monies so received, to be postponed to the respondent who was to be regarded as a second incumbrancer, only from after his having proceeded to enforce his claim by attachment and not before. JUGJEEWUN DAS KEEKA SHAH v. third party—Suit to enforce mortgage lien.—A mortgage-decree, against properties situate in different districts, upon a suit instituted in the Court of one district, without the sanction of the High Court, though it could not be enforced against the property in the other district, would, however, have the effect of changing the original bond-debt into a judgment-debt for the mortgage money and interest. Though the mortgagee could not enforce his lien against the property in the other district under the decree, he would be at liberty to establish his lien for the mortgage-debt and interest in a suit against a third person who had purchased the property. BOLAKEE LALL v. (39)—Sale—Hypothecation by vendor before sale—Suit on hypothecation, decree, and sale—Subsequent suit by vendee—Mortgagee's claim, still subsisting.—A in 1862 bought a house belonging to B which was already hypothecated to C. In 1863, C sued B in the Small Cause Court for the debt on account of which the hypothecation had been made and got a judgment. He then had the house attached and put up to auction, bought the right, title and interest of the judgment-debtor in the premises, and entered and continued in possession. In a suit brought by A to recover possession by right of his purchase in 1862, held that as B had no interest whatever in the property at the date of the purchase, C's purchase was not a purchase from the debtor in part satisfaction of his debt, C's claim still existed, and he could pursue his remedy either against the person or upon the property; and that, as he was in possession, he had a right to demand the liquidation of the debt due to him before submitting to be turned out, and also that the obligation of B gave C a two-fold cause of action and a two-fold remedy, one against the person and the other against the thing. MUNI REDDI v. VENKATA REDDI, 3 M.H.C. 241.

(40)—Mortgage—Purchase of mortgaged property by one of two joint-mortgagees, effect of, on the debt under the joint-mortgage—Guarantee for personal default of the obligors—Extent of surety's liability.—One Z and his son I executed a bond, in favour of B and H, hypothecating 6½ out of the 10 biswas of their village. On the same date, the 3rd of May 1872, one S executed a surety-bond guaranteeing Z's payment of the above loan and charging as security certain rights in property belonging to S. In December 1872, Z made another bond (No. 2) in favour of B, the plaintiff-appellant, in which he hypothecated the above-mentioned 10 biswas of his village. In execution of a decree obtained by B on bond No. 2, he brought to sale and purchased, on 20th July, 1877, the 10 biswas which he sold subsequently in 1883 to M, defendant-respondent. The questions which arose in this appeal related to the 6½ biswas, previously hypothecated to B and H, out of the 10 biswas in the hands of M, B's vendee, and, to the right of the plaintiffs to enforce the surety-bond given by S, against the property charged thereunder. The effect of B's Court-purchase of the 10 biswas on 20th July 1877, on the joint-bond of the 3rd May 1872, was as effectually to extinguish the joint-encumbrance thereon, as if H, his co-obligee, had been associated with him in buying it. On B's sale to M, he therefore passed to her a clean title free of all encumbrance under the bond of the 3rd of May 1872, and it was competent to M to assert such title as a complete answer to the present suit in regard to the said 6½ biswas. As to the question of the liability of the heirs of S, to suffer the 10 biswas charged under the surety-bond to be brought to sale, the obligation of the surety under his bond being confined to the personal default of Z, and the present plaintiff not praying for any personal decree against Z, the heirs of S had been wrongly impleaded in the present suit by B and H, seeking only to enforce the hypothecation of their joint-bond against the property hypothecated therein. *BHUP SINGH v. (42)—Payment of prior mortgage by conditional sale—Decree for sale obtained by intermediate simple mortgagee—Foreclosure of conditional sale—Intermediate mortgagee cannot sell without paying first mortgage.—A zamindar made two mortgages in favour of P, of his zamindari property. Some time afterwards he mortgaged a portion of the property in favour of another Z, the defendant. Subsequently, he made a conditional sale of the property to R, the plaintiff, to pay off the mortgages in favour of P. Then again he mortgaged the same portion of the property to Z for another amount. Z sued on his mortgages and obtaining a decree brought to sale the portion of the property mortgaged to him. Meanwhile, R had taken the necessary proceedings to foreclose his deed of conditional sale. In a suit by R for a declaration that the defendant Z was not entitled to bring to sale the property mortgaged to him, it was held that, by the conditional sale which became absolute, the plaintiff acquired all the rights that subsisted under the two mortgages and was entitled to press those securities in his aid as prior incumbrances to that of the defendant, for the purpose of stopping him bringing the property to sale in execution of his decree, unless he recouped the plaintiff for the amount which he (plaintiff) found to satisfy and discharge these incumbrances; held also that the only right which the defendant had was upon the strength of the decree obtained in reference to his first mortgage, because he could have no right whatever under the instrument of second mortgage in his favour. Therefore, the defendant should only be permitted to bring the property to sale under his decree in respect of the first mortgage to him, when he has satisfied and discharged the two mortgage-bonds held by the plaintiff. *ZALIM GIR v. (43)—Property of insolvent subject to mortgage—Purchase of property at sale by receiver—Mortgagee's rights when and how far affected—Civ. Pro. Code, 1882, ss. 353, 356.—S. 356 of the Civ. Pro. Code of 1882, contemplating payment of debts secured by mortgage out of the proceeds of the conversion of the insolvent's property in priority to the general creditors, must be read with s. 354 of the Civ. Pro. Code, and must therefore be understood as referring to those cases in which the mortgaged premises have been sold after coming to an understanding with the mortgagee, such mortgaged property not being saleable by the receiver without the consent of the mortgagee or paying him off. What vests in the receiver in such a case is merely the equity of redemption which is the only interest the insolvent has in the mortgaged property, and that alone the receiver is competent to convert into money. A purchaser from the receiver, under such circumstances, gets only the equity of redemption, and is therefore entitled only to claim to redeem the

(45)—Mortgage—Redemption of prior mortgage by puisne mortgagee—Sale decreed on certain terms—Attachment of future interest—S. 266, Civ. Pro. Code—Increase of judgment debtor's interest after attachment—Lis pendens—Parties to suit.—On a claim by a puisne mortgagee to redeem prior encumbrances and, in the alternative, for a decree authorising a sale of the property mortgaged, the sale was decreed, with application of the purchase money to pay encumbrances in their due order; and with redemption by the plaintiff of a prior mortgagee, who was to have an option to redeem. Previous to the mortgage, a fraction of the interest in the property (such interest being purchased by the plaintiff, at a judicial sale) had been the subject of a settlement by a Mahomedan on his second wife with the condition that, if he should have no child by her, it should go to his two sons by another wife. On his death, the second wife having no child, held, that the two sons had taken a definite interest, and that such interest was not a mere expectancy or other merely contingent or possible right or interest, but an interest capable of being attached and sold under s. 266, Civ. Pro. Code. [F., 22 C. 33, 143 P.L.R. 1905, 32 B. 172=9 Bom. L. R. 1152; R., 13 A. 432, F.B., 17 B. 503, 1 O. C. 109, 6 Bom. L.R. 625, 5 C.L.J. 315=11 C. W.N. 403, 9 Bom. (46)—Default in payment of assessment by mortgagee in possession—Purchase, under conveyance from mortgagor, by defendant paying arrears of assessment—Rights of purchaser—Mortgagee merely lying by, not estopped from claiming to recover—Mortgagee's suit for foreclosure.—On the plaintiffs, the registered mortgagees in possession of the land in question, having ceased to cultivate the land during certain years and declined to pay assessment for those years, the defendant, who paid the arrears of such assessment to the Mamlatdar, became the registered occupant of the land taking a conveyance of it from the mortgagor and cultivated it without any objection by the plaintiffs with regard to their interest in it, until the present suit was filed. The lower appellate Court decided that the purchaser-defendant had acquired a title to the land free from all incumbrances, and in any case, the plaintiffs were estopped from setting up their title, but the High Court reversed its decision holding that the purchaser could only acquire the mortgagor's interest by the conveyance. Even if the mortgagor had been in actual possession, the registration of the mortgage would have been noticed, to the purchaser, of the mortgagee's title. Also, the plaintiffs were not subject to any estoppel. They were under no obligation to see that outsiders were not led to believe that they as mortgagees were no more interested in the land and it was not suggested that they stood by whilst the negotiation with the mortgagor was going on, and, by so doing, led the purchaser to suppose that they were not interested in the land. CHINTAMAN RAMCHANDRA v. new Code)—Holder of two independent mortgages on same property—Decree for sale obtainable on each of them.—There is nothing in the Civ. Pro. Code or in the Transfer of Property Act which prevents a holder of two independent mortgages over the same property, who is not restrained by any covenant in either of them, from obtaining a decree for sale on each of them in a separate suit. S. 43, Civ. Pro. Code, has no application to such a case. Held that s. 43, Civ. Pro. Code, and s. 85, Transfer of Property Act, did not preclude a mortgagee (who had obtained a decree for sale of the mortgaged property in a suit brought by him, against the mortgagor only, on a mortgage bond executed in his favour in 1878), from instituting a second suit on a bond mortgaging the same property in 1882 in favour of a third party, who had assigned the mortgage to the plaintiff in 1883 before he instituted the former suit on the mortgage bond of 1878. In this case, no objection was taken by the mortgagor to the maintainability of the first suit, and in fact, no allusion whatever was made in that suit to the existence of the second mortgage; and a decree for sale was passed under s. 88, Transfer of Property Act. But the mortgagor resisted the second suit, pleading s. 43, Civ. Pro. Code, and s. 85, Transfer of Property Act, as a bar to the same, but the plea was disallowed. SUNDAR SINGH v. (49)—Mortgage—Purchase by mortgagee of part of mortgaged property in execution of money-decree—Liability of mortgagee to account for full value of portion bought.—Where a mortgagee purchases a portion of the mortgaged property which is sold subject to his mortgage, such purchase may have in certain cases the effect of discharging the whole of the mortgage-debt, but it cannot be taken to have that effect in every case, however insignificant the portion purchased may be, and whatever value may have been paid for it. For, where of two properties mortgaged to secure re-payment of one debt, one happens to be of very small value and the other of large value, and the value of the smaller property is less than the amount of the mortgage, the purchase of that property by the mortgagee cannot be held to satisfy the mortgage in full. Where, on the other hand, the portion of the mortgaged property purchased by the mortgagee is of a value higher than the amount of the mortgage, and the difference between that value and the price paid by the mortgagee is equal to or exceeds the amount of the mortgage, such purchase by the mortgagee has the effect of fully discharging the mortgage. In every case, therefore, of a mortgagee who has thus previously purchased, when he has to bring the mortgaged property to sale in execution of his mortgage-decree, he is bound to bring into account the full value of the portion

(50)—Mortgagee, general right of, to keep mortgage unsplit—Purchase of portion of mortgaged property by mortgagee—Splitting up of mortgage and rateable distribution of mortgage-debt.—The general rule is that a mortgagee has a right to insist that his security shall not be split up. In the following cases, however, there can be no objection to splitting the mortgage and rateably distributing the mortgage-debt:—(1) When the mortgagee himself does not press his right to insist on keeping the security entire. (2) Where the original contract itself recites that the mortgagors join together in mortgaging their separate shares. (3) Where the mortgagee has himself split up the security as by having brought a portion of the mortgaged estate, in which case he could properly be held to be estopped from seeking to throw the whole burden on the part of the property still mortgaged with him. So, when a mortgagee acquires the interest of some of the mortgagors by purchase, he can sue for partition only after the redemption of the entire security has been effected. Before urging the title acquired by him by reason of the purchase, he must surrender or restore the mortgage-security. NARAYAN v. GANPAT, 21 B. 619

(51)—Transfer of Property Act, s. 101—Mortgage in renewal of prior mortgage—Right of mortgagee to priority over subsequent mortgages.—A mortgagor does not lose his right to priority over subsequent mortgages by accepting another mortgage in renewal of his first deed. ALAN-GARAN CHETTI v. LAKSHMANAN CHETTI, 20 M. 274 = 7 M.L.J. 87. [R., 12 C.P.L.R. 70.]

(52)—Mortgage—Sale by mortgagor of part of mortgaged property—Effect.—The right of a mortgagee to bring any portion of the mortgaged property to sale is not curtailed by the mortgagor, subsequently to the mortgage, selling a portion of the mortgaged property to a third person. BHIKHARI DAS v. DALIP SINGH, 17 A. 434 = A.W.N. 1895, 83. (11 C. 258, 5 M. 387, 9 A. 690, R.) [Appr., 31 M. 419, F.B. = 3 M.L.T. 287 = 18 M.L.J. 229; R., 29 M. 217.]

(53)—Right of mortgagee purchasing equity of redemption—Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882)—S. 85—Right of sale of mortgaged property—Suit to bring mortgaged property to sale—Necessary parties—Prior and subsequent incumbrancers.—A and B, the joint owners of certain property, jointly gave two mortgages to X—one in 1882 and another in 1884. Then A alone mortgaged a portion to Y, and B alone mortgaged another portion to X, and lastly A mortgaged a portion to Z. In 1885, A and B jointly sold the whole property to X, and with the proceeds of that sale, X's three mortgages were paid off. In 1887, Y sued to bring the property mortgaged to him to sale, and for cancelment of the deed of sale to X. Held, that X, not having exhibited any intention of fore-going his rights under the first two mortgages, was entitled to use them as a shield against the claim of Y. (11 I.A. 126=10 C. 1035, 3 A. 682, 6 B. 404, 6 B. 651, 7 M.H.C. 229, 7 A. 568, 7 A. 577, 8 M. 246, R.) [R., 13 A. 581, 12 C.P.L.R. 70, A.W.N. 1907, 85=4 A.L.J. 349.] The provisions of the section are mandatory. A mortgagee has no right to bring mortgaged property to sale under his mortgage, without redeeming the prior mortgagee, if any, or affording the subsequent mortgagee, if any, an opportunity to redeem, i.e., a second mortgagee is not entitled to have the property sold subject to the prior mortgage. Consequently in a suit by a mortgagee for sale on his mortgage, the other mortgagees whether prior or subsequent, are necessary parties. MATADIN KASODHAN v. KAZIM HUSAIN, 13 A. 432, F.B. (54)—Prior usufructuary mortgage — Suit for sale on subsequent simple mortgage when maintainable.—A decree for sale under the Transfer of Property Act, cannot be a decree for the sale of the mere equity of redemption, but must be a decree ordering the sale of the mortgaged property itself. So, the holders of a subsequent simple mortgage cannot institute a suit for sale under their mortgage until a prior usufructuary mortgage over the same property has become capable of redemption. Such a suit brought before the time when the plaintiffs, the subsequent mortgagees, could ask for redemption of the prior usufructuary mortgage would be liable to dismissal as having been prematurely brought. *AKHARA PANCHAITI v. (55)—Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), s. 101—Payment of first mortgage by last mortgagee—Last mortgagee entitled to priority over intermediate mortgagees.—On the footing of a mortgage made in 1882 for the purpose of paying off a prior mortgage, of 12th February, 1877, which had itself been executed for discharging another earlier mortgage of 1876, plaintiff claimed priority over the mortgage to the defendant dated 10th February 1877. Plaintiff was held entitled to priority over the defendant to the extent to which the mortgage-money of the mortgage of 1882 went to discharge that of 1876. SEETHARAMA v. VENKATAKRISHNA, 16 M. 94. [R., 20 M. 274, 12 C.P.L.R. 70, 2 C.L.J. 202.]

(56)—Mortgagee or pledgee purchasing mortgaged property—Trustee—Leave to bid—Rights of mortgagee-decree-holder under the Code—Mortgagee whether trustee for mortgagor.—Neither the mortgagee, whether he claims under an ordinary power or under trust for sale, nor his trustee, can buy the mortgaged property, unless, when the sale is made by the Court, he has obtained leave to bid, and if the mortgagee be a trustee he will not have leave to bid where the cestui que trust objects, unless attempts to sell to others have failed and the same rule applies to a pledgee. The reason of this prohibitory rule is that it would be improper to place a person in a situation in which his interest as intending purchaser might conflict with his duty to secure the highest price for the property to be sold. But a hard and fast rule that the mortgagee can never become the purchaser is not only unnecessary but would be inexpedient, even in the interests of the mortgagor. [Expl., 18 M. 153.] The decree-holder under the Civ. Pro. Code, can only buy with the leave of the Court and when the mortgagee-decree-holder has bought the mortgaged property with such leave, there is no reason or authority for holding that he takes the property in trust for the mortgagor. A mortgagee in such a position can therefore take out further execution for any balance of the decretal amount that may be left after deducting the price for which the mortgaged property was sold, and is not bound to credit the judgment-debtor with the real value of the property to be ascertained by the Court. *SHEONATH DOSS v. (58)—Lien on land, suit to enforce—Mortgaged premises—Sale.—A suit is maintainable for the enforcement of a lien on land which has been mortgaged. The land as it stood at the time of mortgage free from subsequent incumbrances may be sold, though a decree for money due on the mortgage has been obtained, and the right, title and interest of the mortgagor

(59)—Sale—Purchase subject to lien—Suit for lien amount—Proper form of suit.—A suit will not lie against the purchaser of property subject to a lien, to recover from him personally the amount of the lien, but the lien is not lost by the sale and a suit may be brought against the purchaser with the object of obtaining a decree for the realisation of the lien by the sale of the hypothecated property. JUGERNATH v. (60)—Mortgage—Agreement to place mortgagee in possession on default in payment within limited time—Right of mortgagee to sue for mortgage money.—A mortgagor covenanted as follows:—"If I fail to pay the (mortgage) amount, then I will put you in possession of the land (mortgaged for the debt) and you may enjoy it; and, when I have the means, I will redeem the land and pay the debt with interest and take back the bond." Held that the mortgagee was entitled to enforce the obligation for payment of the mortgage money of which the defendant had made default in payment within the time named. He was not bound to sue for possession of the land. ANNASWAMI v. NARRANAIYAN, 1 M.H.C. 114.

(62)—Mortgagee electing to take money decree—Execution sale—Mortgagee, purchase by—Rights.—When a creditor who holds a bond whereby property is mortgaged, elects to take a money-decree, and in execution thereof brings the mortgaged property to sale, he by that sale transfers to the purchaser the benefit of his own lien and also the right of redemption of his debtor, transfers in a word everything that either mortgagor or mortgagee could convey. When, therefore, the decree-holder is himself the auction-purchaser and buys at the execution sale the rights and interests of his debtor, he obtains the right to have his lien on the mortgaged land satisfied. ARUTH SOAR v. (64)—Lien on mortgaged property—Form of decree.—A mortgagee, by way of simple mortgage, cannot assert his lien on the property mortgaged as against a subsequent mortgagee by way of conditional sale who had foreclosed, if the decree passed in favour of the former on his mortgage-bond does not provide for its satisfaction from the sale of the mortgaged property. RAM CHUNDER MISSER v. (65)—Possessory suit—Mortgage deed—Money decree—Proof—Remand.—Where a suit for possession of property was resisted by the defendant in possession on the ground that he claimed to be entitled to retain possession as purchaser under a sale in execution of a decree, against the vendor of the plaintiff's vendor on bonds which pledged the property, although the mortgage was not declared in the decree. Held that if the defendant in possession could prove that, by the bonds on which the money decree was given under which he bought, this property was mortgaged as security for the debts covered by them, he will be entitled to remain in possession as against the plaintiff. RAM KANT ROY v. RAJ KISHORE DEB, 24 W.R. 94. (17 W.R. 232, 23 W.R. 190, F.B., F.) [Expl., 7 C. 677; D., 6 C.L.J. 609.]

(66)—Mortgages—Priority—Sale in execution, by first mortgagee—Foreclosure by second mortgagee.—Certain properties were pledged to R as security for the rents of another property. There was a failure to pay the rents. R got a decree for the sale of the secured properties. In the meanwhile the same properties had been mortgaged in favour of U. The money due on this second mortgage to U not having been paid, notice of foreclosure was issued and U was about to take up possession when R sold the property in execution of his decree and it was purchased by B. U now sued to set aside the sale. Held that the sale could not be set aside. R had legal priority over U's mortgage and B therefore as purchaser has the lien which ought to be maintained. B's purchase was not in execution of a mere money-decree. J. BECKWITH v. UMESH CHUNDER ROY, 3 W.R. 110. [F., 7 W.R. 232; D., 10 W.R. 88.]

(67)—Zuripeshgi lease—Possession abandoned—Money decree—Lien.—Where a zuripeshgee-dar abandons his right to possession under his lease, and institutes a suit to recover the sum that he has advanced and obtains a decree in that suit, and allows that decree to be so framed as to give him no specific remedy against the property leased to him, his lien must be held to have terminated. GOUREE SINGH v. (69)—Money advanced on deed of conditional sale—Suit for refund of money—Money-decree—Rights of decree-holder—Lien.—M who had advanced certain moneys to A on a deed of conditional sale, bye-bil-wufa, not being able to get possession of the mortgaged property sued A for the return of his money. A having died pendente lite, M obtained a decree for money against A's personal representatives, and in execution purchased the property which formed the subject of mortgage. He then brought the present suit to set aside two mukurruree leases granted subsequent to the date of his mortgage by A's legal representatives. Held that M's decree, which was a simple money decree, would merely enable the decree-holder to follow the assets of the debtor into the hands of his heirs, as they existed at the time, but could not give a lien or charge on the land which once formed the subject of the bye-bil-wufa, and that the decree-holder had no title to insist on the lands being delivered to him free of incumbrances, merely because when the debt was contracted the property forming those assets was unburthened. MIRZA AKBUR ALI v. MUSSAMUT AMEERONISSA, 11 W.R. 225.

(70)—Hypothecation—Simple money decree—Regular suit against purchaser in execution of decree on another mortgage.—Plaintiff, a hypothecatee, purchased, at a sale in execution of a simple money decree obtained by him on the hypothecation bond, the rights and interests of his judgment-debtor in the property hypothecated. Defendant was the holder of a subsequent mortgage on the same property, who had, in execution of the decree obtained by him on the said mortgage, brought the property to sale and purchased it himself. Plaintiff brought the present suit to set aside the order passed in the summary department rejecting his objections to the sale of the property at the instance of the defendant. Held that the suit should be dismissed. The plaintiff had obtained only a money decree and was not entitled to follow the property hypothecated under his bond except by regular suit against the party in possession of the property. Plaintiff had purchased the rights and interests of his judgment-debtor subject to the rights of the mortgagee (defendant), and as such had the mortgagor's equity of redemption. So, if he satisfied the defendant's mortgage, he could obtain the properties unincumbered. Not having done so, his suit to set aside the purchase of the defendant should be dismissed. ACHUMBIT THAKOOR v. CHOONEE LALL CHOWDHRY, 10 W.R. 27. [Rel. on, 11 W.R. 149.]

(71)—Simple mortgagee obtaining mere money decree—Attachment and sale of property in execution—Previous bona fide purchaser not prejudiced.—The rights of a bona fide purchaser of property for valuable consideration cannot be prejudiced by the sale, in execution of a money-decree obtained by the holder of a simple mortgage, without any declaration that the money due formed a charge on the estate in question. The simple mortgagee possessing only a decree without any declaration as to the liability of the mortgaged property for the debt, is in the position of a mere ordinary judgment-creditor and is entitled only to seize the rights and interests of the debtor such as they are at the time of the judgment. Any lien he may yet possess over the property, he must enforce by a separate suit against those in possession of it. BINDABUN CHUNDER SHAHA v. JANE BIBE, 6 W.R. 312. [F., 11 W.R. 149.]

(72)—Suit on bond with mortgage clause—Money decree—Execution.—Where the bond upon which the suit was brought contained a mortgage clause, but the decree was altogether silent about it and an ordinary decree for money was passed against the judgment-debtor, the decree cannot be executed against any property which no longer belongs to the judgment-debtor. GOLUCK MONEE DEBIA v. RAM SOONDUR CHUCKERBUTTY, 9 W.R. 82. [F., 10 W.R. 468, 15 W.R. 27.]

(73)—Civ. Pro. Code, Act VIII of 1859, s. 270—Decree under s. 53 of Act XX of 1866 on specially registered bond—Attachment and sale in execution—Prior attachment at instance of another decree-holder—Right of latter to receive sale proceeds.—Plaintiff had obtained a mortgage of certain property by a specially registered bond and got a decree under s. 53 of Act XX of 1866. In execution of that decree, he attached the mortgaged property and had it sold. Prior to this attachment, the defendant, another decree-holder of the same judgment-debtor, had attached the same property; the Court acting under s. 270 of Act VIII of 1859 directed that the sale proceeds be paid over to the defendant by right of his prior attachment. Hence the present suit by the plaintiff to recover those sale proceeds from the hand of the defendant. Held, that the rule in s. 270 was a mere rule of procedure for the guidance of the Court in determining questions between rival decree-holders, and was never intended to alter or limit the rights to which a party might have become entitled by virtue of a contract independently of the provisions of the Code. Held, also, that the sale at the instance of the plaintiff conveyed away the entire interest of the judgment-debtor in the property. Consequently the plaintiff had nothing to fall back upon except the sale proceeds which represented the property. Plaintiff was therefore entitled to the sale-proceeds in preference to the defendant. RAJ CHUNDER SHAHA v. HUR MOHAN ROY, 22 W.R. 98. [D., 10 C. 567.]

(74)—Money-decree passed on a simple mortgage bond—Right of purchaser of decree.—The purchaser of a simple money-decree passed on a simple mortgage bond does not acquire a lien upon the property mortgaged. GANPAT RAI v. SARUPI, 1 A. 446. [D., 78 P.R. 1905 = 135 P.L.R. 1905.]

(75)—Mortgage—Sale—Prior auction-sale of mortgaged property in execution of money decree by mortgagee—Right of purchaser.—Registration Act—Summary procedure—Decree—Notice.—In execution of a money-decree obtained by the plaintiff, certain property which was subject to a mortgage in his own favour, was brought to sale and purchased by the defendant. The plaintiff now sued on his mortgage and sought to sell the property. It was not urged by the defendant that the plaintiff had committed a fraud upon him. Held that the plaintiff was entitled to insist upon his prior hypothecation right. A decree passed under the summary procedure prescribed by the Registration Act can only be a decree for money and not for the enforcement of a lien. JUGGUN NATH v. KOMAL SINGH, 3 N.W.P. 123.

(76)—Execution of decree—Amount not given in decree included—Sale-proceeds insufficient—Validity of proceedings—Prior and subsequent encumbrances on properties—Decrees—Sale—Possession—Priority.—Where, in the proceedings in execution taken by a decree-holder, he refers to his kistbundee as well as his decree, and includes in the amount to be levied what was not given by the decree, held that, though such inclusion was irregular and improper, the proceedings were not void, where the sale proceeds were not sufficient to cover the decree, and that the sale held in the execution proceedings was not invalid. Where, in execution of a decree obtained on a prior encumbrance, A purchases the mortgaged property, and B in execution of another decree obtained on a subsequent encumbrance purchases the same property and enters into possession, held that B could not retain possession as against A, who became owner of the property and prima facie entitled to possession, his purchase being at the instance of a prior encumbrancer. BABU KAMESSUR PERSHAD v. DOWLAT RAM, 19 W.R. 83. [R., 10 C. 567.]

(77)—Owner in possession of estate—Purchase from owner for valuable consideration—Previous unregistered mortgage not binding on purchaser.—In this suit the lower Appellate Court had given a decree to the plaintiff, a purchaser for valuable consideration of an estate from the former owner who was in possession of it. It had rejected the claim of a mortgagee under a simple mortgage of the same estate at a prior date. It was contended on special appeal that the mortgage was a prior lien on the estate and that the plaintiff's purchase was subject to the mortgage but the High Court refused to interfere. The mortgage was not registered, and the owner of the estate remained in possession of it. The purchaser consequently had no means of obtaining notice of the mortgage. If the mortgagee had not taken the proper legal steps to give notice of his mortgage by registering it, he has only himself to blame, if his interests were jeopardized by other parties dealing with the owner of the estate mortgaged (who was in possession of it) as if no such mortgage existed. SHAMA CHURN MOOKERJEE v. NOBIN CHUNDER MOOKERJEE, 4 W.R. 67.

(78)—Money-decree by mortgagee—Property with mortgagor and with mortgagor's alienee—Mortgagee's lien, enforcement of—Summary decree by mortgagee—Alienation by mortgagor—Suit against alienee.—A mortgagee, with a summary decree under the Registration Act (XX of 1866), whose effect is the same as that of a money-decree in an ordinary mortgage-suit, would not acquire a greater right by reason of the mortgagor's alienation, the purchaser not taking the property subject to a greater burden than the debtor himself; the lien is enforceable against the property, by execution, when it is in the hands of the mortgagor, and by suit in the other case. Where execution of a summary decree under s. 53 of the Registration Act of 1866 by a mortgagee has become barred, he has no better right to proceed by separate suit against the mortgaged property in the hands of a purchaser from the mortgagor, the right not at all being more extensive against the alienee than against the mortgagor. Quære.—Whether, if the suit stated above had lain, a suit by one only of two mortgagees for a portion of the debt due on the mortgage, would be maintainable. CALLY NATH BUNDOPADHYA v. KOONJO BEHARY SHAHA, 9 C. 651. (14 B.L.R. 408 = 23 W.R. 187, 7 C. 714 = 9 C.L.R. 353, R.)

(79)—Charge against immoveable property—Subsequent lease—Auction purchaser's rights.—When the holder of a simple mortgage bond, obtains only a money decree on the bond, in execution of which the property hypothecated in the bond is attached, brought to sale and purchased by him, and the debt is completely discharged, he cannot afterwards sue to enforce his lien on the collateral security for his debt, which no longer exists. Semble: Even if the debt had not been fully satisfied, he could enforce the lien so as to avoid a lease granted subsequent to the bond. *BALWANT SINGH v. (81)—Prior and subsequent mortgage on the same property—Sale under money-decree—Rights of purchaser and subsequent mortgagee—Notice.—Where, in execution of a money-decree obtained by him after notice of a subsequent mortgagee's lien over the mortgaged property, a prior mortgagee sells the rights and interests of the mortgagor in the mortgaged property, which are purchased by a third person, what the purchaser acquires by his purchase is only the equity of redemption of the mortgagor. The purchase has not the effect of extinguishing the subsequent mortgage. The purchaser may redeem the subsequent mortgage and become the absolute owner of the property. DEO CHAND SAHOO v. (82)—Mortgage—Possession, suit for, by purchaser at sale in execution of decree on mortgage, against holder of Mokurrari of subsequent date.—At a sale in 1871, in execution of a decree upon a mortgage, dated 3rd May, 1867, A purchased the mortgaged lands, the existence of a Mokurrari granted in 1863 having been notified at the sale. Held that a suit by A against the Mokurraridars for possession would not lie, the existence of the mortgage being no bar to the creation of a subsequent incumbrance carrying with it the right of possession. KOKIL SINGH v. DULI CHAND, 5 C.L.R. 243. (23 W. R. F. B. 187, 12 W. R. 522, 9 W. R. F. B. 171, 1 W. R. F. B. 315, discussed.) [F., 21 C. 116.]

(83)—Mortgage—Execution—Sale—Parties.—In 1868, A, the Mokurruridar of a mouzah, mortgaged 8 annas of the mokurruri to B and gave him a dur-mokurruri lease of the remaining 2 annas. In 1870, he again mortgaged the whole 10 annas to C, and, in 1875, sold a 1 anna share of the mokurruri to the predecessor in title of the defendants. In 1877, B obtained a decree on his mortgage and, in execution thereof, sold 6 annas of the property, and the plaintiff became the purchaser. In 1877, subsequent to the above sale, C obtained a decree on his mortgage and, in execution thereof, sold the remaining 4 annas of the mokurruri to the plaintiff. 2 annas of the 10 annas share mortgaged to C being subject to the dur-mokurruri lease to B, the plaintiff brought a suit for the rent of the remaining 8 annas, and in that suit the defendants, who were no parties to any of the previous suits, intervened on the ground that the plaintiff was not entitled to the 1 anna share which had been purchased by their predecessor in title in 1875. Held that the plaintiff was not entitled as against the defendants to the 1 anna share, but that, if the lower Court on remand should find the plaintiff to be in possession of such share, then, a decree for rent should be passed in the plaintiff's favour leaving the defendants to take any steps. MADHU SINGH v. ACHRAJ SINGH, 9 C. L. R. 369. (1 A. 240, F. B. Disappr.; 4 B. 57, 14 B. L.R. 408 = 23 W.R. 187, F.)

(84)—Mortgage—Sale of mortgaged property in execution of money-decree obtained by mortgagee, effect of, on mortgagee's lien.—The mere taking of a money-decree for the mortgage-debt does not extinguish the mortgagee's lien, but, when he proceeds to execute such money-decree upon the mortgaged property, a sale of it in such execution has the effect of passing the entire interest of himself and the mortgagor together. Whenever a mortgagee proceeds to sell, whether under a decree for sale or under a simple money-decree, what he really seeks is to obtain satisfaction out of his security,—in fact, to enforce his lien. So, it cannot be said that when such proceeding by the mortgagee is in execution of a money-decree only, he still retains his lien for enforcement, qua mortgagee, by a second sale of the same property in respect of the debt which might be left undischarged. NARSIDAS JITRAM v. G. JOGLEKAR, 4 B. 57. (14 B.L.R. 408, 1 C. 337 = 7 M.H.C. 229, F.; 1 A. 240, Diss.) [Not F., 29 C. 537; F., 10 C. 567; R., 5 B. 614, 9 C.L.R. 369, 7 O.C. 314; D., 8 C. 517, L.B.R. 1893—1900, 14.]

(85)—Execution—Money decree obtained by mortgagee—Ordinary money decree—Difference—Where a mortgagee is entitled to a personal decree against the mortgagor or his heir or representative, and takes a mere money decree against him upon the mortgage without any direction that the amount of the decree should be recovered by sale or otherwise from the mortgaged property, the mortgagee nevertheless would have the right to attach and sell that property under the money decree, and such sale would transfer to the purchaser the interest both of the mortgagor and of the mortgagee in the same manner as if the sale had been made under an express direction in the decree. (14 B.L.R. 408, p. 421 F.B., 4 B. 57, R.) Even though the officer of the Court may merely mention the right, title and interest of the mortgagor, as what is sold, the interest of the mortgagee who has promoted the sale passes by way of estoppel, although the mortgagee executes no conveyance to the purchaser. (1 B. 314, R.) The only difference, which can be made in execution between a money decree upon a mortgage and a money decree not upon a mortgage, is that, where the mortgaged lands are attached under the former, the sale of them is deferred until six months, or some other reasonable period expires in order to give to the mortgagor the opportunity of redeeming, which would be afforded to him in a suit for foreclosure or redemption. HARI v. of a mortgage-decree, the property cannot be sold reserving the mortgagee's rights over it, the very object of the sale being to satisfy such rights; and the mortgagee is precisely in the same position, as far as his own interest is concerned, even if the mortgaged property is sold under a simple money-decree. In either case, the mortgagee sells it freed from his lien. [R., 32 C. 891=9 C.W.N. 728=1 C.L.J. 371.] If, at the time of the sale of the mortgaged property, the mortgagor has no interest in the property, the execution-purchaser takes nothing by the sale. *RAMANATH DASS v. (87)—Purchase by mortgagee under money-decree—Enforcement of lien against prior purchaser.—A mortgagee, becoming himself the purchaser of the mortgaged property at an execution sale under a money-decree which he elects to take, may sue to enforce his lien against a purchaser of the right, title and interest of the same debtor in the same property, at a prior execution sale under a prior money-decree. *JONMENJOY MULLICK v. (91)—Mortgage—Decree of prior mortgage—Auction purchaser—Resistance by subsequent mortgagee with possession—Sale of "right, title and interest of mortgagor"—What passes by such sale.—The same property was subject to two mortgages, duly executed and registered in favour of two different persons, the prior being without possession and the latter with possession. The prior mortgagee obtained a decree for sale on his mortgage in a suit against the minor son of the mortgagor, who was represented by his mother as his guardian, although she did not obtain a certificate of administration under the Minor's Act, XX of 1864. The property was sold in auction, and the purchaser having been resisted, in his attempt to take possession of the property, purchased by the widow and heiress of the deceased second mortgagee, brought the present suit for possession. Held, that the auction-purchaser was entitled to possession, as his position was the same as that of the prior mortgagee before the sale, and as he therefore had a superior title to that of the defendant who claimed under a subsequent mortgage. The question whether, under the circumstances of the case, the minor son or the widow of the second mortgagee could sue the plaintiff (auction-purchaser) to redeem the mortgage was left undetermined. Although it is not the practice of the Mofussil Courts to require a mortgagee who sues for and obtains a sale of the mortgaged premises, formally to convey to the purchaser, and the latter must be contented with a certificate of sale to him of the right, title and interest of the mortgagor, yet in fact, the interest of the mortgagee, who causes the sale to be made, is held to pass to the purchaser, and that mortgagee is completely estopped from disputing that such is the effect of the sale. KHIVRAJ JUSRUP v. LINGAYA, 5 B. 2. (7 B.H.C. 146, A.C.J., R.) [R., 5 B. 5, 11 B.H.C. 139, 5 B. 8, 22 B. 686, 22 B. 945; D., 23 B. 290.]

(92)—Prior registered mortgage—Subsequent lease with possession—Right of lessee—Sale under mortgage decree—Effect.—Where there was a prior registered mortgage on the property, held that a subsequent lessee of the same property, although the lease was registered and possession given thereunder, took only what the mortgagor had to give him, viz., a lease subject to the registered mortgage. Where a decree is obtained upon his mortgage by a mortgagee, and the mortgaged property is sold under the decree for paying off the mortgagee, the interest of the latter as well as that of the mortgagor passes to the purchaser. The mortgagee is completely estopped from disputing that such is the effect of the sale so far as his interest is concerned, although the officer of the Court may only have described the sale as one of the right, title and interest of the mortgagor. It is not the practice in the Mofussil to require the mortgagee to convey to the purchaser. The transfer takes place by way of estoppel. SHESHGIRI SHANBHOG v. SALVADOR VAS, 5 B. 5. [R., 11 B.H.C. 139, 5 B. 8, 22 B. 686, 945; D., 20 B. 290.]

(93)—Mortgage decree—Execution sale of right, title and interest of mortgagor or his heir, what passes at—Non-joinder—Effect.—The usual mode in the Mofussil Civil Courts, of selling in suits on mortgages "the right, title and interest" of the mortgagor or his heirs, is not correct, if the right, title and interest so sold are deemed to be only his right, title and interest at the time of the sale. In fact the intention of the Court is to pass to the purchaser the right, title and interests of both the mortgagor and mortgagee; and therefore, "the right, title and interest" of the mortgagor, as it stood when he was making the mortgage (and not as it stood at the time of the Court sale), is what passes under the certificate of sale to the purchaser. [R., 5 B. 614, 10 A. 520=8 A.W.N. 210, 16 B. 486, 17 M. 247.] On the death of the mortgagor, the mortgagee instituted a suit on the mortgage against the widow of the mortgagor, without impleading his minor children as parties. A decree for sale was passed, and the property was sold thereunder. The purchaser at auction sale was resisted in taking possession of the properties, on the ground that his purchase did not include the share of the children, they not having been made parties to the suit. The purchaser sued to obtain possession of the entire property. Held, that, although the sale was not impeachable in other respects, it was defective in that the children of the mortgagor were not impleaded as parties to the suit, and that these children, therefore, were entitled to any relief which they would have obtained if they had been made parties to that suit, viz., the right of redeeming the property by paying off the mortgage. *SHAIK ABDULLA SAIBA v. (96)—Undertaking by debtor not to alienate property until satisfaction of debt—Lien of creditor, priority of.—The defendants Nos. 4 to 8, the Dutts, were indebted to the defendants Nos. 9 to 12, the Roys, in a large sum of money. By a razeenamah and a safeenamah filed by the parties, the Dutts bound themselves not to transfer by gift or sale or otherwise alienate a certain zemindaree until the debt due to the Roys had been satisfied. Some years after the razeenamah, the Dutts granted a putnee of two mouzahs in the zemindaree to defendants Nos. 1 to 3, the Seins. Plaintiffs claimed as purchasers of the rights of the Dutts, debtors in the suit above compromised. On going to take possession, plaintiffs found the Seins in possession of their putnee and consequently brought the present suit to cancel the same and to obtain khas possession of the mouzahs. On this state of things, the High Court agreed with the Principal Sudder Ameen who had held that the plaintiffs had no right to enforce the terms of the razeenamah, and to set aside the putnee created after the above deed, that the putnee was created long before their purchase and that they acquired the rights of the debtors, and not those of the creditors. *MESSRS. (99)—Two mortgages of same property—Merger when takes place—Intention of parties—Effect of not impleading subsequent incumbrancer in suit on previous mortgage.—Where there are two mortgages of the same property to the same person on different dates, the later comprising the earlier one, it depends upon the intention of the parties whether or not the earlier security has become merged or extinguished in the later one. In the present case, there was a simple mortgage in 1870, and subsequently in 1873, there was a mortgage with possession of the same land to the same person. The earlier mortgage was not given up to the mortgagor, nor was it cancelled at the time, but remained with the mortgagee. Held that there was nothing to show that there was any intention to forego the benefit of the security created by the prior mortgage. And when the mortgagee obtained a decree on his later mortgage of 1873, and had the property sold in auction, the purchaser was held to take the property free from all incumbrances even from the date of the earlier mortgage. (100)—Suit upon mortgage—Decree—Suit for redemption based on decree—Not maintainable—Act XXIII of 1861, s. 11—Second appeal—Suit cannot be changed in.—A suit was brought in 1825 by the mortgagee against the mortgagor on his mortgage of 1806; and a decree was passed in 1825 to the effect that an account having been taken of what was due on the mortgage, the mortgagor might at any time make a tender of the amount due, with the interest up to that time, and require that the land should be restored to him. No action seems to have been taken upon this decree, until its execution became time-barred. However, in 1877, the plaintiff as the representative of the original mortgagor brought the present suit claiming to redeem the mortgage, and basing his cause of action on the above said decree as regulating the rights of the parties from the time when it was made. Held that the decree of 1826 must be regarded as a decree and not as a mortgage, and that under Act

XXIII of 1861, s. 11, which provides that questions arising between the parties to the suit and relating to the execution of the decree must be determined by order of the Court executing the decree, and not by a separate suit, the plaintiff ought, if he wished to redeem the property, to have applied to the Court to execute the decree by putting him into possession after paying the money due on the mortgage; and that, inasmuch as the time limited by law for the execution of the decree had long since elapsed, there was no cause of action existing, and the suit was barred. (102)—Purchase of equity of redemption by prior mortgagee—Intention of retaining benefit of prior mortgage, nature of evidence necessary for.—The purchase of the equity of redemption by a mortgagee does not necessarily prevent the mortgagee from falling back upon his mortgage in a contest between himself and a puisne mortgagee. The question in such cases is whether the prior mortgagee and purchaser intended to retain the benefit of his charge, and this question may be decided in the affirmative if he has declared his intention by express words or necessary implication, that the mortgage shall continue to subsist, or if such continuance would be for his benefit. Generally, slight evidence will suffice to establish such intention. The circumstance that the mortgage-deed remained with the purchaser could be regarded as evidence that he intended to retain the benefits of his mortgage. SHANTAPA v. BALAPA, 6 B. 561. [F., 13 A. 432; R., 1 O.C. 105.]

(103)—Discharge of prior mortgage—Presumption as to keeping it alive.—The presumption, generally speaking, in the absence of any evidence to the contrary, is that a person, whose money goes to satisfy a prior mortgage, intends to keep alive for his benefit that prior mortgage; and a covenant in a mortgage-deed that the mortgagor will redeem the mortgage bond of a third person and deliver it to the mortgagee to his satisfaction, is an indication on the part of the mortgagee to keep alive that security in his favour. AMAR CHANDRA KUNDU v. ROY GOLOKE CHANDRA CHOU-DHRY, 4 C.W.N. 769. [R., 29 C. 25.]

(104)—Payment of prior mortgage—Presumption of keeping it alive—Intention.—A purchaser or mortgagee of the equity of redemption, who pays off a first incumbrance, is entitled, as against intermediate incumbrances, to stand in the place of incumbrancers paid off, even if no intention to keep it alive is expressed. *RUPABAI v. (105)—Attachment of mortgaged property—Equity of redemption, purchase of—Payment to prior mortgagee pending attachment—Code (XIV of 1982), s. 276—Presumption to keep alive the prior lien.—Where certain property subject to a mortgage was attached in execution of a money decree and purchased by D in Court auction and pending the attachment, the mortgagor created a subsequent mortgage of the same property for paying off the prior mortgage-debt in favour of plaintiff who discharged the prior mortgage the day after his mortgage, held, that, on the day of the attachment of the property, nothing more could be attached than the equity of redemption belonging to the mortgagor, and under s. 276, Civ. Pro. Code, the subsequent discharge by the mortgagor could not enlarge the subject of the attachment, as D purchased only the equity of redemption in the property. The mere fact that the mortgagor pays the money to the prior encumbrancer for his own benefit, namely, with the object of getting a reduction in the amount of the debt, cannot be taken as an indication of an intention on the part of the subsequent mortgagee not to keep alive the prior security for his benefit. *DINO BANDHU SHAW CHOWDHURY v. the mortgaged property to sale and purchased it in 1886. In 1888, T gave a second mortgage on the suit property (along with some other property) to the defendant and paid off G. The defendant thereupon took possession of the property in dispute. The plaintiff, as purchaser of the equity of redemption, went to take possession, when he was obstructed by the defendant. The present suit was thereupon instituted by the plaintiff to recover possession of the suit property. The defendant contended inter alia that, as he had satisfied G's mortgage lien, which was prior in date to plaintiff's purchase and had been put in possession and as the plaintiff was aware of that fact, the plaintiff must redeem him before claiming possession. Held that the defendant could have no defence to the plaintiff's suit for possession, as his mortgage in 1888 was subsequent to plaintiff's purchase at auction sale in 1886 of the equity of redemption, unless, at the time when G's mortgage was paid off, there had been a formal assignment thereof to the defendant, in token of the same having been kept alive in his favour. In this case there was nothing to show that there was any intention to keep G's mortgage alive for the benefit of the defendant. Held also that the plaintiff should give credit to the defendant for the sum paid by him in wiping off the mortgage of G, because in this case, plaintiff sought to recover property which, but for defendant's payment to G, would have been burdened with G's mortgage, and as the defendant, at the time he advanced money to T to pay off that mortgage, did not know that T was not the owner of the equity of redemption. Held, further, that, as the mortgage to the defendant comprised other properties besides the one in suit, the plaintiff should recover possession on payment to the defendant of a proportionate part of G's mortgage-debt having regard to the value of the suit property and that of the other mortgaged properties. *LOMBA GOMAJI v. In second appeal, plaintiff contended that, as the mortgage in question covered other properties than those purchased by him, the whole of its debt should not be made payable out of the lands he had purchased, and it was held that, although, if the plaintiff had prayed for it in the Courts below, he might have been entitled to the apportionment of the mortgage-debt, the matter not having been mooted in the Courts below nor suggested itself to either of the Judges, and the appellant being entitled to his proper remedy of a suit for contribution, it was not competent to the High Court to pass a decree as prayed for on second appeal, thus allowing the sum to be paid to be ascertained in execution. YADAO BABAJI v. SHAM NARAIN, 2 A. 142.

(110)—First and second mortgages—Purchase of mortgaged property by first mortgagee.—Where a first mortgagee of certain property purchases it subsequent to a second mortgage on the same property, the second mortgagee cannot bring such property to sale without satisfying the first mortgage. The fact that the first mortgagee has purchased the property will not extinguish his mortgage, which must be held to subsist for his benefit after the purchase. *HAR PRASAD v. of mortgaged property—Extinguishment of lien.—An alienation, in contravention of a covenant in a mortgage-deed not to alienate the mortgaged property so long as the mortgage is subsisting, is not absolutely void, but only voidable so far as it goes to defeat the mortgagee's right under the mortgage; saving the mortgagee's right, such a covenant does not bind the property so as to prevent the acquisition of a valid title by the transferee. (1 A. 126, 1 A. 610, 2 A. 826, Observed.) The purchase by a mortgagee of the mortgaged property does not extinguish the mortgage, when it is the manifest intention of the mortgagee to keep alive the mortgage, or when it is for his benefit to do so. *ALI HASAN v. (113)—Mortgage—First and second mortgages—Payment of first mortgage by purchaser of equity of redemption—Whether first mortgage extinguished—Right of second mortgagee to bring property to sale.—When the purchaser of the equity of redemption pays off a prior mortgage, such mortgage is not extinguished; the purchaser acquires an equitable right to its benefits, which could be used against a subsequent mortgagee. (10 C. 1035 = 11 I. A. 126, F.) Per Oldfield, J. (Mahmood, J., dissenting). Where, under the above circumstances, a subsequent mortgagee seeks to bring the property to sale, the prior mortgage is a good defence to the purchaser against such claim. (10 C. 1035 = 11 I. A. 126, F.) Per Mahmood, J. The ruling of the Privy Council in 10 C. 1035 explained. The purchaser in the above case did not acquire any right greater than those which the first mortgagee possessed. And the security of the intermediate incumbrancer, being a valid one, could be enforced against him as he held the equity of redemption. It could be enforced against him even without paying off the prior mortgage, provided such enforcement did not interfere with the rights under it. *SIRBADHI RAI v. In a suit by the holder of the earlier mortgage to bring the property to sale on his mortgage: Held by Oldfield, J., that the purchaser, having paid off the amount due under the registered mortgage, became entitled to the benefits of it which must be presumed to be kept alive, and therefore, to priority over the unregistered

(10 C. 1035=11 I.A. 126, Appl.; 2 A. 851, R.). Held by Mahmood, J., that, with reference to the circumstances of this case, "unregistered" in s. 50 of the Act of 1877 must be construed as meaning unregistered under the Act of 1871, and that, accordingly the later registered mortgage had priority over the earlier unregistered mortgage. But the purchaser who had acquired such priority by paying off the amount due under the registered mortgage, was in no better possession than the assignee of such mortgage, and could not, in virtue of it, claim to defeat the unregistered mortgage altogether. There was, therefore, nothing to prevent the sale of the property in enforcement of the plaintiff's mortgage subject to the right of priority acquired by the purchaser. JANKI PRASAD v. 25-6-1868, he sold one-half of the house to the defendant who obtained possession. On 24-9-1868, Y sued X on his mortgage and obtained a decree. Having made certain payments towards the decretal debt, X passed an instalment bond to Y in 1875, for the balance due under the decree, and executed a new mortgage of the house as security, which was registered. Satisfaction of the decree was entered up and certified. A suit was brought on the second mortgage in 1882 and a decree obtained. In execution, the house was sold in 1883 to plaintiff who sued the defendant to recover possession of one-half of the house. Held, rejecting the claim, that plaintiff's purchase in 1883 did not give him a title paramount to that of the defendant. All rights under the mortgage of 1864 had become merged in the decree obtained on the mortgage. Satisfaction of the decree was certified to the Court and entered up, when the second mortgage was passed. The fact that the debt secured by the second mortgage was the balance of the old debt was insufficient to justify the inference that it was intended to keep the decree alive. Consequently, no rights existed under the old mortgage which the plaintiff could put forward as against the defendant. RAM KRISHNA SADA-SHIV v. CHOTHMAL, 13 B. 348.

(121)—Mortgage of entire joint property—Subsequent mortgage of a share thereof—Partition of joint property—Sales in execution of decrees on both mortgages—Right of purchasers.—An entire joint property was first mortgaged to one person, and later on, an undefined portion of it was mortgaged to another by one branch of the joint family. In a family partition that took place subsequently, the share of the mortgagors under the second mortgage became ascertained. Both the mortgagees sued upon their respective mortgages and obtained decrees for sale. Neither of them made the other mortgagee a party to his suit. The second mortgagee, in execution of his decree, purchased the property which fell to the share of his mortgagors, and obtained possession of the plaint property through Court. The prior mortgagee executed his decree later on and purchased the right and interest of his mortgagors. Notwithstanding the obstruction of the second mortgagee-purchaser, the plaint property was ordered to be delivered to the first mortgagee-purchaser. Hence the suit for setting aside the above order and for an injunction restraining the defendant from taking possession. Both the lower Courts treated the suit as one for redemption. Held, that the suit could not be treated as one for redemption. The plaintiff having purchased and got into possession of the plaint land prior to the sale to the defendant, at the date of the latter sale there remained in the mortgagors no right or interest in the plaint land that could be sold. The defendant, as purchaser of the right and interest of the mortgagors, acquired no fresh right in the suit land over and above that already possessed by him as mortgagee. distinguishable from that of the owner himself, on account of the absence, in the purchaser's case, of any general personal obligation which can be fixed upon the whole property so as to override his own mortgage right in it. This distinction has led to the doctrine that, though the original owner cannot set up a prior incumbrance got in by him against a puisne charge, yet, a purchaser, whose money is expended partly or wholly in discharging an incumbrance may, at his option, set up such incumbrance as still subsisting for his own benefit as against the puisne incumbrances. The presentation, in Court, of the award obtained by the plaintiff, was equivalent to the presentation of a plaint for the specific performance of the contract of mortgage; and the proceedings consequent thereon constituted a lis pendens during which a mere money decree-holder could not, by any proceedings which he might take, defeat the object of the plaintiff's application in Court to file the award. PRANJIVAN GOVARDHANDAS v. property was mortgaged by the said mortgagors to M. defendant No. 2, who had full notice of the above Court-sale to plaintiff, No. 1. An application for possession made by the purchasers under s. 269 of Act VIII of 1859 had been rejected on resistance by N, a prior mortgagee in possession. In this suit for possession of the property brought by A and his vendees, it was contended on behalf of M. that N, the alleged prior mortgagee, having defeated the attempt of A to obtain possession of the property and A not having brought an action of ejectment within one year, M might have assumed that A had lost all title to the property, but it was held that there was nothing to prevent A from bringing a suit against N for redemption. But the defendant, having by his purchase become entitled at least to the equity of redemption in the house, ought to have been made a party to the original suit on the mortgage, and, not having been so impleaded, was held not to be bound by the decree in that suit, and to be entitled to a reasonable time to redeem the house from the plaintiff's mortgage. NARAN PURSHOTAM v. (134)—Mortgage—Registration—Notice—Sale of mortgaged property in execution of money-decree—Omission to state mortgage in proclamation of sale—Purchaser without notice—Right of mortgagee to enforce mortgage against property in hands of purchaser—Estoppel whether arises.—In the Bombay Presidency, it is settled law that registration of a mortgage-deed is notice to all subsequent purchasers, except in cases of a fraudulent concealment by the mortgagee (3 B.L.R. 407, 6 B. 165, ibid., 168, 8 B. 168, P.J. 1883, 83, 12 B. 678, R.). sale under a money-decree obtained in some matter other than the mortgage, and it was purchased by a person without any knowledge of the mortgage. The mortgage lien was not announced in the proclamation of sale as required by s. 287 of the Civ. Pro. Code, 1882. The mortgagee subsequently sued against the mortgagor and the auction purchaser, to recover the mortgage-debt by sale of the mortgaged property. Held, that the registration of the mortgage was notice to subsequent purchasers; that there was a mere omission and not a fraudulent concealment on the part of the mortgagee to mention the mortgage lien in the proclamation of sale; and that the property was, therefore, liable under the mortgage, and the auction purchaser was bound by it. [R., 22 B. 686, 134 P.L.R. 1904, 1 S.L.R. 44, 11 O.C. 206.] Nor does the omission of the plaintiff to declare his incumbrance in the proclamation of sale create an estoppel (9 B. 86 at p. 92, 6 B. 193 at p. 206, R.). An estoppel would have arisen only if the decree in execution of which the previous Court-sale occurred had been obtained on the mortgage (5 B. 2, Ibid., 5, R.). But in the present case, the previous sale was in connection with a decree independent of the mortgage now sued on. DHONDO BALKRISHNA KANITKAR v. RAOJI, 20 B. 290. grant—Execution sale of mortgaged property, interest passing at—Purchase of mortgaged property from mortgagor's grantee—Priority of purchaser in execution of mortgagee's decree.

—A mortgagor cannot, by a subsequent grant, derogate from the rights of his mortgagee to be paid his principal, interest and costs out of the property pledged; the proper, and indeed the only, mode for the mortgagee, to realise his money under an ordinary Bengalee bond pledging the land, is to get a decree for it and to bring the mortgaged property to sale by process of execution. (23 W.R. 338, 5 B.L.R. 450, R.) Where a mortgagee puts up mortgaged property to sale in execution of a decree, "he sells the entire interest that he and the mortgagor could jointly sell," and not merely the right and interest of the mortgagor, as they stood at the time of the sale. (23 W.R. 187 = 14 B.L.R. 408 F.B., Appl.). Where mortgaged property was leased to one and granted to another and was subsequently purchased, in execution of the mortgage-decree, by the lessee's transferee, it was held, in a suit by such auction purchaser against the vendee from the mortgagor's grantee, that the former was entitled to priority, in respect of the property, over the latter, and that he was not liable to pay rent to the latter. MUTHORA NATH PAL v. (138)—Suit on mortgage—Puisne mortgage not made party—Effect of decree.—To render a decree for foreclosure or sale effectual, the mortgagee must make subsequent purchasers or incumbrancers parties to the suit, at least if he have notice of them, or if circumstances exist which should have put him on inquiry as to the claim by them of an interest in the mortgaged property, and where they are not made parties they are entitled to redeem the first mortgage. VENKATA V. (140)—Mortgage—Suit by mortgagee for possession—Sale of mortgaged property by mortgagor—Pre-emption—Adverse possession—Purchaser for value without notice—Limitation Act, 1877, sch. II, No. 144.—Under a mortgage of the year 1869, the mortgagee was entitled to immediate possession, but by arrangements between the parties, the mortgagor was allowed to remain in possession, the right of the mortgagee to claim possession being kept alive. The property was sold by the mortgagor in the same year. A suit for pre-emption was brought in respect of such sale and decreed; and the plaintiff pre-emptor sold it in 1871. The mortgagee sued the purchaser for possession in 1883. The purchaser pleaded adverse possession for more than twelve years. Held that the position of a person who purchases property by asserting a right of pre-emption is not analogous to that of an auction-purchaser in execution of a decree. He merely takes the place of the original purchaser, and enters into the same contract of sale with the vendor that the purchaser was making. There is privity between him and the vendor, and he comes in under the vendor, and his holding must be taken to be in acknowledgment of all obligations created by his vendor. (14 M.L.A. 101 = 8 B.L.R. 122, D.) And in the absence of evidence that the purchaser had been by fraud kept out of all knowledge of the mortgage, his not having notice of it otherwise would not affect his liability; for the principle on which Courts of Equity in England refuse to interfere against bona fide purchasers for a valuable consideration, when clothed with the legal title, has no application to Courts in British India. DURGA PRASAD v. SHAMBHU NATH, 8 A. 86 = A.W.N. 1886, 11. [Diss., 141 P.R. 1907 = 93 P.W.R. 1907 = 57 P.L.R. 1908; R., 13 A. 28, 12 O.C. 45.]

(141)—Mortgage-decree on mortgage—Sale in execution—Conveyance of property—Second mortgage—Sale of equity of redemption.—Where a mortgagee sues upon his mortgage bond, the Court should pass a decree for satisfaction of the claim from out of the property mortgaged and not from the right, title and interest, which remained in the mortgagor. A sale in execution of a decree under the mortgage passed all the interest which passed by the mortgage to the mortgagee and any interest which remained in the mortgagor. Where there has been a second mortgage, all that passes under that is the interest that remained in the mortgagor after the first mortgage had been made, i.e., the equity of redemption. In a suit brought on the second mortgage, the mortgagee will only be entitled to a decree for sale of the equity of redemption, unless the first mortgagee has been made a party to the suit and his mortgage has been declared invalid as against the second mortgagee. DOOLAL CHUNDER DEB v. GOLUCK MONEE DEBIA, 22 W.R. 360.

(142)—First and second mortgages—Suit for sale of mortgaged property—Parties to suit—Decree.—Where there were two mortgages of the same property to different persons on different dates, and the second mortgagee brought a suit on his mortgage without impleading the former mortgagee, and purchased the property in execution of the decree therein, and the first mortgagee who had also sued on his mortgage and obtained a decree for sale, brought the present suit against the previous auction-purchaser for a declaration that the property might be sold, held that the plaintiff's suit should be allowed, but that the decree should be passed reserving a right to the defendant, i.e., the previous purchaser under the second mortgage, of redeeming the first mortgage within a certain fixed time. KANHAIYA LAL v. BANSIDHAR, A.W.N. 1884, 136. [Appl., 13 A. 288, F.B. = 11 A.W.N. 63; R., 8 A. 23 = 5 A.W.N. 310, 7 A. 888 = 6 A.W.N. 95.]

(143)—Suit by prior mortgagee—Second incumbrancer not made party—Decree—Auction purchaser.—Where a prior mortgagee brings a suit on his mortgage without making a second incumbrancer a party to the suit and a decree is passed therein, the latter is not bound by the decree. While the purchaser in execution of that decree must be treated as if he had bought privately the interests of the mortgagor and the first mortgagee, when the second mortgagee sues on his mortgage against the auction-purchaser, a decree should be made in the form in which it would have been made if the second incumbrancer and the purchaser had both been parties to the original suit. The position of the second incumbrancer should not be worse than it would have been if there had been no previous suit. Therefore it is open to him to question the account taken between the first mortgagee and the mortgagor, and he is not concluded as to the value of the property by the sale which has followed upon the decree. On the other hand, he cannot be in a better position, and therefore, before he can enforce his mortgage right against the property, he must still pay off the amount secured by the first mortgage, whether or not that amount exceeds the purchase-money. That would clearly be so, where the mortgagee himself is the purchaser, and it cannot be otherwise when the property is purchased by a stranger. The purchaser is supposed to take the interests in the property which the mortgagor and the mortgagee together could convey, and therefore, although money may still remain due to the mortgagee, no interest in the property is retained by him. *NAGAMMAL v. (145)—Decree for sale of mortgaged property—Subsequent lease by mortgagor—Execution of decree—Purchase by decree-holder—Suit for dispossession of lessee—Lis pendens—Transfer of Property Act, s. 52.—The respondents obtained a decree for sale of mortgaged property upon their mortgage. Subsequent to the decree, the mortgagor leased the mortgaged property in favour of the defendant appellant. In execution of the decree, the mortgaged property was sold and purchased by the respondents themselves. The suit was for dispossession of the lessee, defendant. The defendant pleaded that the lease was fair and binding on the plaintiff, having regard to the fact, that there was no active prosecution of plaintiff's suit for a number of years so as to entitle him to the benefit of s. 52 of the Transfer of Property Act. Held, that the plaintiff is entitled to a decree. It is unnecessary for the plaintiff to call in aid the provisions of s. 52 of the Transfer of Property Act, because in no event can the lessee, who derives his title from the mortgagor, acquire an interest in the leased property prejudicial to the rights of the mortgagees who become the auction purchasers of the property. A mortgagor, ordinarily, cannot, without the concurrence of his mortgagee, execute a lease which would be binding upon the mortgagee. He may execute a lease which may be binding upon himself, and so long as the mortgagee does not interfere with the possession of the lessee, so long may the lessee enjoy the benefits of that lease. *WAZIR ALI v. (148)—Mortgage—Sale of property subject to mortgage—Proclamation of sale, Recital of mortgage in—Civ. Pro. Code, s. 295.—The defendant No. 2 mortgaged a share of a village to the plaintiff for a certain sum of money. He subsequently mortgaged certain land, being part of that share, to the defendant No. 1. The first mortgagee brought a suit against the mortgagor and the second mortgagee for the sale of the mortgaged share and obtained a decree. The share was sold in execution of the decree and was purchased by the plaintiff, i.e., the first mortgagee. The proclamation of sale specified that the property was liable to the second mortgagee's mortgage. The plaintiff as purchaser of the share brought the present suit for possession of the land mortgaged to the second mortgagee. The latter pleaded that the plaintiff purchased the land subject to his mortgage and was bound to pay that mortgage. Held that, before it can be said that the purchaser of immoveable property at a sale in execution of a decree has purchased it subject to a mortgage i.e., has purchased only the equity of redemption, it must be quite clear that the Court sold him the property subject to the mortgage. *GANGA DIN v. Plaintiff obtained a decree on his first mortgage, to which M was a party being interested in redeeming B's share, sold the property and himself purchased it. The plaintiff then redeemed M's mortgage and brought a suit on his third mortgage claiming the whole amount against S's share. Held, that B's share, having been entirely swallowed up by the prior incumbrance, no right of contribution in respect of the second mortgage can be enforced against that property and the whole burden of the second mortgage must fall on the property of S. BALDEO PRASAD v. (161)—Selling under power of sale—Depreciatory condition—Auction—Conditions of sale—Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), s. 69—Principal and Agent—Knowledge of the agent—Silence.—A mortgagee in selling the mortgaged property under a power of sale, contained in the mortgage-deed, covenanted with the purchaser that "the purchaser shall accept such title as the vendors can give and shall not require the vendors to enter into any other covenant except a covenant that they have not incumbered and shall not raise any question or objection to the title and shall be held bound to accept such title as the vendors possess." Held, that this condition had a depreciatory tendency. A mortgagee exercising the power of sale is, both in honour and in law, under an obligation to sell the mortgaged property under such conditions as an owner would reasonably use in the sale of his own property. The conditions of sale at an auction should not be merely written, and read over at the time of sale; but they should be circulated in the auction room and widely distributed among the bidders before the sale. The power to sell under special conditions, though it may give in certain circumstances a mortgagee a wider discretion than he would otherwise possess, does not entitle him needlessly to use depreciatory conditions, while the protection afforded to a purchaser, by a clause which entitles a mortgagee to sell subject to any special or other stipulations, exempting the purchaser from any liability to enquire into the necessity, expediency, propriety or regularity of the sale, is qualified by the condition that he must not have purchased with notice. CHABILDAS v. mortgaged his holding to a third person, confessed judgment in a rent suit brought against him by the landlord and allowed the holding to be sold in execution of the decree. The landlord, himself, purchased the holding. A suit was brought by the mortgagee for a declaration that the decree and sale were fraudulently and collusively obtained and the mortgaged property was not free from the liability created by the mortgage in his favour. The Munsiff decreed for the plaintiff but the Subordinate Judge reversed the decree on the ground that, as against the landlord, there was no cause of action. On appeal, the High Court held, that if the decree and sale were bona fide the plaintiff would have had no cause of action against the landlord; if they were not bona fide, as in the present case, the mortgagee under the tenant would have the same right to proceed against the landlord as he would have against the tenant, his mortgagor. RAM SARAN DAS v. (169)—Sale of property on first mortgage—Purchase by decree-holder—Suit on second mortgage—One mortgagee the same as first—Sale of property for a second time.—The property in dispute was mortgaged first to M, then to M and S and then to the appellant. M brought a suit for sale upon the first mortgage, obtained a decree, sold the property and purchased it himself. M and S then brought a suit upon the second mortgage and obtained a decree. To this suit the appellant was a party. Held, that M and S could again sell the property which was sold in execution of the decree on the first mortgage, inasmuch as M, by his purchase, did not become full owner, as the property was subject to two other mortgages. MURLIDHAR v. (172)—Mortgage—Subsequent sale of portions in execution of simple money decree—Purchase of equity of redemption by mortgagee—His rights.—The appellant obtained a mortgage of fifteen biswas in four villages which represented the entire interest of the mortgagors. Some years subsequent to this mortgage the defendant-respondent sold under a simple money decree which had been obtained by him against the mortgagees, a five Biswa share of each of the four villages and purchased those shares himself. Two years after, the plaintiff-appellant instituted a suit for the sale of the mortgaged property including also the defendant-respondent as a party to the suit. Before the date fixed for the sale of the property, the mortgagors conveyed the mortgaged property to the plaintiff-appellant, who certified to the Court the discharge of his debt under s. 258. But the defendant-respondent, being no party to the sale, objected to the mutation of names in respect of the five Biswas in each village which had been purchased by him. The objection being allowed by the Revenue authorities, the plaintiff appellant applied for execution for his one-third decree as against the five Biswas so remaining recorded in the name of the defendant-respondent, and his application being rejected on the ground that his decree had been satisfied, he instituted the present suit. Held that the representatives of the mortgagors were necessary parties to the suit, and that the plaintiff-appellant was entitled to contribution to the extent of one-third of his decree against the defendants-respondents, with interest upon one-third of the decree up to the date of payment. SETH SHAPOORJEE v. in favour of the vendee, directing him to pay the purchase-money (in which was included the mortgage amount) into Court to the credit of the mortgagor. The decree was wrong. It should have provided for the payment of the mortgage-money to the mortgagee first. Neither the vendee nor the mortgagee applied to the Court to set right the decree. On being asked by the mortgagee, the vendee paid the mortgage-money into Court to the credit of the mortgagor, and the money paid into Court was dissipated without the mortgage having been paid off. Thereupon the mortgagee sued both the mortgagor and vendee for the mortgage-money. The question was whether the vendee or the mortgagee was to be the loser. Held, that, the mortgagee having drawn the attention of the purchaser to the fact that his mortgage had not been paid, it was the interest of the purchaser before he parted irrecoverably with the purchase-money, to have seen the property freed from all liability for the mortgage debt. The purchaser having failed to take proper care, he was liable for the consequences. The mortgage money having become dissipated he was liable to pay it over again. There was no law or equity which relieved him from the responsibility. KANDASAMI GRAMANI v. JAGATHAMBA AMMAL, 10 M.L.J. 353.

(175) — Mortgage — Decree against Hindu father only — Death of father before execution — Notice to sons — Consent of guardian — Petition to set aside sale. — A mortgage decree was obtained against a Hindu father in a suit in which his minor sons were made parties. Before the decree could be executed, the father died. The decree-holder executed the decree against the judgment-debtor's sons after a guardian ad litem was appointed and the mortgaged property was sold in auction. The sons through their guardian put in a petition to set aside the sale on the ground that no order absolute was obtained and that no notice was given to them. In the petition, no objection was taken as to the want of consent of the guardian before he was appointed as such by an order of the Court. Held (1) that the action of the Court in making such order was merely irregular and did not vitiate the sale, especially where no objection on that score was taken in the Courts below and the same guardian applied on the minors' behalf to set aside the sale; and (2) that no notice was necessary to the father's representatives. The suit was against a father and sons forming a joint Hindu family and it was quite unnecessary to join the sons as representatives of the father on his death. ODAYANASAMY TEVER v. The District Judge, on appeal, confirmed the order. Held, cancelling the order that set aside the sale, that the Civ. Pro. Code, does not provide that any consequences in derogation of the ordinary rights of judgment-creditors shall follow from a mere application by the judgment debtor under s. 344 of the Code. It is only when a receiver is appointed under s. 351, that the property of the insolvent vests in the receiver under the provisions of s. 354 and the rights of the creditors are interfered with, and such an order can under no circumstances have any retrospective effect. ISHWAR LAKHMIDAT v. (179) — Mortgage — Suit to recover mortgage-debt by sale of mortgaged property — Property sold to realize — Municipal taxes — Personal claim — Limitation Act, 1877, arts. 97 and 116. — This was a suit brought on the 7th August, 1896, by the mortgagee against the mortgagor, for recovery of the mortgage-debt by sale of the mortgaged property, and from the mortgagor personally, based on a registered mortgage deed, dated the 29th July, 1886, which provided that the debt was payable within two years. On the 15th August, 1890, the mortgaged property, then in possession of the mortgagee, was sold for non-payment of Municipal taxes and purchased by the son of the mortgagee. Held, that the plaintiff had no claim against the mortgaged property, which was sold for arrears of municipal taxes free from all incumbrances. Held, further, reversing the decisions of the Lower Courts, that, as regards the personal claim for the amount due on the mortgage, art. 97, Limitation Act, 1877, was applicable, and the plaintiffs had, under that article and art. 116, six years to bring their suit from the time when the mortgaged property was sold and they were dispossessed on the 7th November, 1890. HARNARAIN DAS v. of the defendants—Second suit to recover balance of mortgage-debt, maintainability of—Cause of action, accrual of—Transfer of Property Act, s. 90—Civ. Pro. In execution of a money-decree against the mortgagor, the house was sold and purchased by the defendants subject to the mortgage. Before the expiry of the term of the mortgage, the plaintiff brought a suit to recover the mortgage-debt by sale of both the shop and the dwelling-house. This suit was decreed against the representatives of the mortgagor, who confessed judgment, but it was dismissed as premature against the purchaser of the house. After the expiry of the mortgage, a second suit was brought by the plaintiff to recover the balance by sale of the dwelling-house. Held, that this second suit was not barred, the cause of action arising on the expiry of the term of the mortgage and on the proceeds of the sale of the shop proving insufficient for the satisfaction of the plaintiff's claim. It was not now open to the defendant purchaser to contend that the plaintiff's claim ought to have been included in the first suit, when he was allowed to defeat it on the ground that it was premature; and neither s. 90, of the Transfer of Property Act, nor s. 244, Civ. Pro. Code, was applicable to the present case. GANGA RAM v. KANHAIYA LAL, 27 A. 254 = A.W.N. 1904, 236 = 1 A.L.J. 649

(182)—Mortgage—Sale of mortgaged property suit by simple mortgagee—Transfer of Property Act, s. 67.—By a mortgage deed executed on the 28th May, 1885, one-third share of a village was hypothecated as security for payment of a loan with interest at Rs. 12 per cent. per annum. The mortgagor agreed to pay interest out of the profits of the mortgaged property every six months and the mortgage was for a term of three years. There was a further agreement that, on default in payment, the mortgagee would obtain possession of the mortgaged property. The mortgagee's suit, in which he prayed for a decree for a sale of the property, was instituted on the 8th November, 1900, when a suit for possession under the terms of the mortgage deed had become barred. Held, that in view of the provisions of s. 67 of the Transfer of Property Act, as the mortgage was not an usufructuary one, the mortgagee had a right at any time after the 26th May, 1885, when the money became payable, to him to institute a suit for sale. KUNAR BINDA BAKSH MINOR v. (184)—Application for re-sale of mortgaged property—Execution of decrees—Limitation.—In a suit on a mortgage-bond, the order for sale was made absolute on the 3rd November, 1894. On the 23rd November, the decree-holder applied to have the property sold and in January, 1898, it was sold. In October, 1898, the sale was set aside and on the 19th April, 1901, the decree-holder, setting out the above facts, applied for re-sale of the property. The judgment-debtors contended that the application was barred by limitation. The first Court dismissed, and the Court of first appeal allowed, the application. Held, that the application of the 9th April, 1901, was not a fresh application but one, to revive the proceedings on the former application from the time when they became irregular. The result of the order setting aside the sale was not to dismiss the application for sale but to annul the proceedings in the former application after they became invalid. The order allowing the application of the 19th April, 1901, was therefore a proper order. INAYAT ALI v. BHAYA GAYA PERSHAD, 6 O.C. 195.

—The plaintiff sued the defendant for the recovery of certain sums of money as principal and interest alleged to be due upon a mortgage executed by the latter in favour of the former on December 11th, 1888. He claimed to be entitled to recover these sums by sale of the mortgaged property. Held, that, having regard to the terms of the deed, the mortgage was an anomalous mortgage, that the parties did not intend that the mortgagee should, in any event, be entitled to a decree for sale in respect of the interest, that he was entitled by way of damages to interest for six years previous to the suit under art. 116, Limitation Act, and that, under the circumstances, the interest awarded as damages could not be held to be a charge on the land. RAM PARSHAD v. Subsequently the same person hypothecated his property B to the plaintiff. The plaintiff and the defendant respectively obtained decrees under their bonds and proceeded to sell. The defendant put up for sale and purchased properties A and B. The plaintiff, in execution of his decree, on the same day, also purchased property B. The plaintiff then brought the present suit to recover possession of the property so purchased by him on the ground that the defendant was not entitled under his deed to proceed at once against property A and against property B, but should, in the first instance, have proceeded against the former. Held that as the property A and the property B did not fetch a sufficient sum to satisfy the defendant's bond, it was immaterial whether the defendant should have proceeded first against A before having recourse to B, that the result showed that the sale of A would not have discharged the defendant's bond and that his lien would still have taken priority over that of the plaintiff, and that therefore the suit should be dismissed. BHAWANI PRASAD v. (189)—Suit for sale on a mortgage—Right of purchaser under decree prior to mortgage to use as a shield a lien created by compromise on which decree was based.—On the 27th of September 1867, a mortgage was made by the predecessors in title of Hushiar Singh and Badbu in favour of Baldeo Bharti. In 1871, the mortgaged property was sold at an auction sale under a decree dated the 24th of September 1858. That decree was a money decree, but was passed on a compromise by which a certain sum, agreed between the parties to be due to the plaintiff on an account stated, was made payable by instalments, and the property in suit was hypothecated as security for the due payment of such instalments. The property was purchased by one Gurdayal Jati, who was the decree-holder. In a suit by the mortgagee of the mortgage of 1867 for sale, it was held that the representatives of the purchaser under the decree of 1858 were entitled to use the lien created by the compromise upon which that decree was based as a shield to the extent of the price, which Gur Dyal had paid for the property, but no further. BALDEO BHARTI v. The defendant was the purchaser of Chandanpur at a sale in execution of a decree for sale on two mortgages of 1886. Before suit was brought on the mortgages of 1886 the plaintiff had paid off the amount due on an earlier mortgage of 1883. The plaintiff was not, however, made a party to the suit on the mortgages of 1886, in execution of the decree in which the defendant purchased. The plaintiff brought her suit on the mortgage of 1887, but in respect of Chandanpur sought only to recover from the defendant auction-purchaser of Chandanpur the amount due in respect of the mortgage of 1883, waiving her right to any relief directly dependent on the mortgage in suit. Held, that the defendant could not resist the sale of Chandanpur except by paying to the plaintiff the full amount due in respect of the mortgage of 1883; then only could he claim priority in respect to the mortgages of 1886, which were the basis of his title. SITAL PRASAD v. TUFAIL FATMA, A.W.N. 1904, 285.

(191)—Mortgage—Usufructuary mortgage and hypothecation bond—Right of mortgagee to sale of property.—Where, in a usufructuary mortgage-deed, it was stipulated that the mortgagor was to be left in possession on payment of a certain rent every year to the mortgagee; Held, that the terms of the mortgage must be understood to cover both cases of a usufructuary mortgage and those of an hypothecation charge and as such the mortgagee was entitled to bring the property to sale. UMRAO BEGAM v. VALI-ULLAH, A.W.N. 1888, 171. [R., 21 A. 4.]

(192)—Mortgage—Dispossession—Sale of hypothecated property.—Whenever a contract gives a pledge of property as security for money lent, there will always be a power of sale, unless a contrary intention is clearly expressed. Such is sometimes the case in usufructuary mortgages, when the mortgagee looks only to the usufruct for his principal and interest. Where the mortgagee was expressly empowered to recover the principal and interest on being dispossessed, either before or after the expiration of the term, held, that the mortgagee, on being dispossessed, was entitled to recover the debt by the sale of the hypothecated property, although the mortgage-deed did not in so many words provide that, in such a case, the money should be recovered from the property. RAM BAKSH v. NOHAR PANDEY, A.W.N. 1881, 63.

(193)—Mortgage—Sale in execution of decree enforcing second mortgage—Concealment by prior mortgagee of his lien.—Where the prior mortgagees of certain property were the sons of two brothers and the subsequent mortgagees of the same property were some of them, held, that the purchaser of the property in execution sale under the decree on the subsequent mortgage, in entire ignorance of the prior charge on the property, was protected, as, having regard to the relationship of the parties and the fact that the subsequent mortgagees were actually, though not in name, as much interested in the subsequent mortgage as in the prior mortgage, there was an obligation on them at the time of the sale to disclose the lien held by them under the prior mortgage. LACHMI NARAIN v. HUSAIN KHAN, A.W.N. 1881, 91.

Mortgage—continued.—10.—Sale of mortgaged property—contd.

(194)—Mortgagor and mortgagee—Covenant not to alienate—Sale of mortgaged property in execution—Right of purchase.—Where the rights and interests of a mortgagor were sold in execution of a decree declaring the mortgaged property liable for the mortgaged debt, it was held that a putneedar, who had obtained a pottah from the mortgagor subsequent to the mortgage and in violation of its conditions, had no right or title to hold possession against the purchaser. The purchaser in such a case buys the rights and interests of the judgment-debtor as they stood at the time of the execution of the mortgage, and not as they stood at the time of the sale. BRAJARAJ KISORI DAS v. MOHAMMED SALEM, 1 B.L.R.A.C. 152 = 10 W.R. 151. (7 W.R. 67, F.; 8 W.R. 292, R.) [R., 23 W.R. 187.]

(195)—Mortgage—Power of sale by mortgagor—Mortgage to be treated as sale if money not repaid within fixed time—Attachment—Effect.—A person mortgaged some property to the plaintiff with a stipulation that if the mortgage debt were not paid off within the prescribed time, the entire proprietary interest in the property was to pass to the plaintiff without further conveyance. It also provided that the mortgagor was competent, at the expiration of the time fixed, to sell the property and to apply the proceeds to the liquidation of the mortgage-debt; and that it was only on his failure to adopt this course that the proprietary right in the property was to pass to the plaintiff. Possession of the property continued with the mortgagor. In execution of a money-decree against him, some third person attached the mortgaged properties, and this was 23 days after the date fixed for payment of the mortgage-debt. The mortgagee then brought the present suit to raise the attachment on the ground that according to the stipulation in the mortgage the entire proprietary interest passed to himself on the failure of the mortgagor to pay the amount on the date fixed, and that the mortgagor had no interest in the property which could form the subject of attachment. Held, (i) that the stipulation in the mortgage to the effect that the mortgagor may, on the expiration of the time fixed, sell the property and pay the mortgage amount, implied that a reasonable time should be allowed to the mortgagor to dispose of the property. (ii) that the period of 23 days, which intervened in the present case between the date fixed for the payment and the date of attachment was not sufficient for the exercise of the power of sale, which remained with the mortgagor; (iii) that the mere fact that no sale was made within the interval cannot equitably be held to operate as a foreclosure; (iv) and that, therefore, at the time the attachment was made, the mortgagor had not lost the equity of redemption, and that, at the time the suit was brought, the plaintiff was at the most only a mortgagee, and not in a position to demand the removal of the attachment. KONER MANOHAR v. (196)—Execution of decree—Decree for sale on a mortgage—Decree subsequently modified in favour of a puisne incumbrancer in respect of a portion of property comprised in first mortgage—Application to execute original decree excluding property covered by puisne incumbrance.—A first mortgagee obtained a decree under s. 88 of the Transfer of Property Act in a suit to which he made defendants several persons interested in the mortgaged property, including a certain puisne mortgagee of a portion of the property mortgaged to the plaintiff. This puisne mortgagee did not appear to defend the suit, but subsequently proceeded under s. 108 of the Code of Civil Procedure, and eventually obtained a certain modification of the decree in her favour. To these proceedings she only, and none of the other defendants to the suit, was a party. The decree-holder, the first mortgagee, made an application for execution, which, after amendment, amounted to an application for execution of the original decree exempting that portion of the property which was dealt with by the second and subsidiary decree. Held, that this was a good application, and that the original decree, with the exception thus made, was capable of execution. MUNNA LAL v. RUKN-ALAM, A.W.N. 1900, 14. (25 C. 155, D.)

(197)—Sale of mortgaged property in execution of decree on puisne mortgage subject to prior incumbrances—Purchase by decree-holder—Prior incumbrances, declaration of invalidity of—Suit by judgment-debtor's representative to recover from auction-purchaser the amount due on the prior incumbrances—Equity of the claim.—In execution of a decree obtained by a puisne mortgagee in a suit on his mortgage, to which the prior mortgagees were not parties, the mortgaged property was sold subject to two prior incumbrances, which, on the representation of the decree-holder in the sale-proclamation were said to be then existing on it, and purchased the property himself. After confirmation of sale, the two prior mortgages were declared to be invalid in suits on those mortgages. The present suit was brought by the representatives of the mortgagor to recover from the auction-purchaser the amounts due on the two mortgages. Held, by Stanley, C. J., and Blair, J. (Burkitt, J. dissenting) that what the decree-holder purchased was only the equity of redemption in the mortgaged property, and not the whole of the proprietary rights therein. (14 I.A. 77, 14 I. A. 84, 31 I.A. 1, R.) That the whole interest in the property, other than that of equity of redemption belonged to the estate of the judgment-debtor. That, the prior mortgages having been found to be invalid, the plaintiffs, as the rightful owner of the property, was, in equity, entitled to recover from the decree-holder-purchaser the amount of the principal and interest as was proportionate to the value of the property purchased by the decree-holder. Per Stanley, C. J.—That the plaintiff-appellant was entitled to a lien on the property in respect of the amount found due to him. Per Burkitt, J.—contra.—That in this suit, which was framed as a suit for the recovery of unpaid purchase-money, no decree could be passed for the payment of the amounts due on the prior mortgages. That the words "purchase-money," used in the Civ. Pro. Code, import only the sum offered by the highest bidder and accepted by the Court conducting the sale and do not include the amount of any incumbrances existing on the property put up for sale. The execution Court, when selling immoveable property, does not guarantee that the incumbrances, notified in the sale-proclamation, are valid charges, or that they are the only charges on it; nor is there anything in the conduct of the auction purchaser which would estop her from denying the validity of the prior mortgagees. Consequently, the auction purchaser ought not to be deprived of the fruits of her bargain. INAYAT SINGH v. IZZAT-UN-NISSA BEGAM, 27 A. 97, F.B. = A.W.N. 1904, 174 = 1 A.L.J. 435. (198)—Decree exonerating defendants from personal liability—Sale of property not mortgaged, validity of.—A decree based on a mortgage directed that, in default of the judgment-debtor's payment of the decree-amount within a specified date, the property mortgaged should be sold. It also directed that the defendant should not be personally liable. A question arose as to whether the decree prohibited the sale of property not mortgaged, the proceeds of the sale of the mortgaged property not proving sufficient to satisfy the decree. Held, that the provision in the decree that the judgment-creditor should not be entitled to proceed against the person of the judgment-debtor implied that the Court did not prohibit the sale of the property other than that mortgaged, should it be necessary to sell such property for the realisation of the decree-amount. MUTHANA KONE v. (199)—Power of sale in mortgage-deed, whether entitles mortgagee to sell out of Court—English law.—Although, under the English Law, not only has the mortgagee power to sell, without the concurrence of the mortgagor, in cases where such power is expressly given by the mortgage-deed, but such power of sale has been made by statute incident to all mortgages, unless it be excluded or limited by the mortgage-deed, yet, there have been no decisions of the Courts in India on the subject of a mortgagee's power to sell, without the intervention of Court, in cases not governed by the English law. KESHAVARAV K. (201) — Assignment of gantee tenure by ganteedar — Agreement by assignee to pay zemindar rents and a yearly amount towards debts due to ganteedar—Mortgage of tenure by assignee — Sale by mortgagee—Liability of purchaser to pay rent and the annual sum.—Defendant was a ganteedar on the plaintiff's zemindari and, as such, had to pay plaintiff an annual gantee jumma of Rs. 525. Plaintiff alleged that under an ekrar executed by one H to the defendant, H stipulated to pay a debt due by defendant to plaintiff by instalments of Rs. 100 per annum, and instituted the present suit for the arrears of the instalments for some years. The widow and sons of H who were defendants in the suit pleaded that the payment of the Rs. 100 per annum was a liability of additional rent to that extent and such liability could last only so long as the gantee remained that of the ganteedar, and that when the gantee itself passed from the assignor, the liability for the payment in question as additional rent passed to the assignee. It was argued that similarly the liability was to cease with any transfer of the gantee, and that the payment was to be made only out of rent-profits of the gantee as long as it was in the hands of the assignee either. Held, the mere statements that the sum was to be paid out of the profits cannot make that rent which in fact was money due irrespective of the current rent. The defendant's gantee was in fact taken in mourose by H on his agreeing to pay Rs. 525 and Rs. 100. No subsequent mortgage could get rid of his mourose or of the agreement, and the liability of H and his heirs would not cease with the transfer of the ganteedar's right by the creation of the mortgage and the foreclosure which followed. On the contrary the purchaser could only have bought the tenure subject to the liabilities of the mouroseedar and his heirs to fulfil the conditions of the ekrarnamah entered into by him. MOHIMA CHUNDER GHOSE v. HUREE CHAND DOSS, 1 W.R. 64.

(204)—Mortgage—Foreclosure—Sale—Rights of mortgagee.—In a suit by a mortgagee for possession after foreclosure, it was found that the plaintiff had, in good faith, advanced the mortgage-money for the purpose of discharging a debt contracted by the original owner, that his (plaintiff's) present mortgage-security was, either wholly or in part, a substitution for the original mortgage which was a valid one, and that the defendant mortgagor was no stranger but a nephew of the original owner, claiming under an apparently valid Will from the latter, producing a certificate from the Court entitling him, to collect the debts due to the deceased's estate and actually remaining in possession of the property. It was also found that the defendant-mortgagor, as one of the heirs of the original owner, was the owner of the mortgaged property. Held that the plaintiff had a valid title as mortgagee, and was entitled to sue for possession having foreclosed the mortgagee previously. Held, further, that a person who had purchased the rights and interests of the original owner and of the mortgagor (as his representative) in the property in question at an execution sale, held only subsequent to the foreclosure proceedings, was not entitled to withhold the property from the plaintiff, because at the time of sale, the judgment-debtor had no interest in the property sold. MADHUB ANUND MOITRO v. (206)—Mortgage—Resumption by Government of portion of lands mortgaged, and subsequent sale to mortgagor—Equity—Waiver.—Government having, under the Land Acquisition Act, taken possession of portion of a certain land which had been mortgaged by the owner, subsequently, while the mortgage was still in force, resold the portion taken to the mortgagor, who sold it to a third person bona fide for value. In a suit by the mortgagee (who had taken no steps to obtain any portion of the money paid by the Government for the land) praying for the sale under the mortgage of the land resumed by Government, held that the plaintiff as mortgagee had waived his rights under the mortgage and that the purchaser from the mortgagor had acquired a title free from the plaintiff's incumbrance. RAM AWTAR SINGH v. (207)—Successive mortgages of same property—Sale under both mortgages—Priority—Redemption—Form of decree.—A person created successive mortgages upon the same property first in the name of A and subsequently in the name of A's husband, B. Suits were instituted on both the mortgages and judgments were given in both the suits on the same day. The decree on the second mortgage was first executed, the property was brought to sale and plaintiff became the purchaser of the same at the Court-auction. Subsequently, the decree in the name of A was executed and B's son C became the auction-purchaser of the property. In a suit by the plaintiff against A, B and C without impleading the mortgagor as a party, to set aside the sale to the son C, to have himself declared the purchaser and to be entitled to redeem, it was found that B, the husband or father was merely using the names of the others and that the purchase under the second sale was by B himself, who had himself caused the first sale to take place, and then purchased under the second sale. Held that the sale to C could not stand against the purchaser under the first sale, that it must be set aside and that the plaintiff was entitled to redeem. In such a case, it is quite unnecessary and irrelevant to say in the decree whether it is, as a second mortgagee or as a purchaser that the plaintiff is entitled to redeem the first mortgage. CHORAMUN SINGH v. —11.—Subrogation.

(1)—Subrogation—English and Indian Law—Reversioner—Transfer of Property Act, ss. 85 and 91—Person interested in the property—Contract Act, s. 69—Charge under mortgage executed by the daughters during the lifetime of the widows.—A person, who pays of a mortgage-debt on the properties of the deceased male owner, cannot claim to be subrogated to the rights either of the daughters or of the original mortgagee whose debt he discharges. The scope of the rule of subrogation in India is much narrower than in England or America (5 C.L.J. 611, 33 C. 1133, Disappr; 22 B. 164, D.) Mere payment of a mortgage-debt by a stranger would not entitle him to the mortgagee's right, by subrogation (2 I.A. 131, R.) A reversioner cannot voluntarily claim to redeem a mortgage made by the last male holder or institute a suit for that purpose, though, when a suit is instituted by the mortgagee for sale, he has a sufficient interest in the property to entitle him to discharge the mortgage to prevent the loss of the property to which he would be entitled to succeed on the death of the widow. In the latter case the reversioner is entitled, under s. 69 of the Contract Act, to be reimbursed by the widow in respect of the money which the latter was bound by law to pay. The scope of s. 69 of the Contract Act and of ss. 85 and 91 of the Transfer of Property Act is not co-extensive. Where a mortgagor died leaving a widow and daughters, held that the daughters had sufficient interest in the land to entitle them to discharge the mortgage-debt, when the property was brought to sale in execution of the mortgage decree. By so discharging they obtained a charge over the land which they were entitled to assign or charge in favour of the plaintiff who enabled them to discharge the mortgage-debt. *NARAYANA KUTTI GOUNDAN v. (2)—Subrogation—Purchaser of equity of redemption—Interest—Profits of property.—The purchaser of an equity of redemption, upon paying off prior mortgages, is subrogated to the rights of the mortgagees paid off, the mortgages paid being considered part of the purchaser's title to the premises. Such a purchaser is entitled to claim interest on the foot of the mortgages discharged; but he cannot be allowed to retain the profits of the properties. It is only his mortgage-character which can support his claim for interest, and it is only the status of full owner that can justify the enjoyment of the profits by him. He cannot simultaneously enforce his rights in both capacities. A person cannot claim a subrogation

(3)—Successive mortgages—English doctrine of tacking, not applicable in the mofussil of Bombay—Right of redemption.—For the plaintiff, appellant in this case, the objection was taken that the tacking of a later to an earlier mortgage was improperly allowed as against one of an intermediate date. The three mortgages in this case were all found to be valid and genuine, but, it was held that the special and peculiar English doctrine of tacking is not one fit for introduction into the mofussil on the ground of justice or utility and that, therefore, the obligations secured by the three mortgages ought to be satisfied in the order of priority and the defendant's right as against the plaintiff was only either to redeem his mortgage, if he will, or else to hold the mortgaged premises until his own first mortgage be redeemed by the plaintiff. *NARAYAN VENKOBA v. (5)—Suit for redemption of mortgage—Subsequent bonds by mortgagor—Tacking how far obtains—Rule of damdupat.—In this suit for redemption, the defence was that, besides the suit mortgage deed, two other bonds had been executed by the mortgagor, each of which was alleged to contain a further charge disentitling the plaintiff to redeem without paying off such charge. The High Court held that the language of the bonds did not create any further charge as claimed, but, had however, the effect of preventing the original mortgagor who passed the bonds from redeeming the original mortgage without paying the amounts of the subsequent bonds. As to the number of years for which the mortgagee could claim interest, it was held that, though the Limitation Act was to be applied for the purpose, yet, as the rule of damdupat was not affected by the Acts of limitation, the defendants could not be allowed, as for interest, anything more than the amount of the principal sum agreed to be paid. *HARI MAHADAJI SAVARKAR v. (6)—Mortgagee paying assessment payable by mortgagor—Tacking of assessment to mortgage-debt—Offer by debtor to pay debt made through letter, whether amounts to a valid tender.—A mortgagee in possession who has paid from his own funds, the Government assessment payable by the mortgagor in respect of the mortgaged land, has a lien on the estate for the amount, and has also the right to tack the amount of assessment paid by him on account of the mortgagor to his mortgage-debts. The lien for the extra assessment in such cases is not provided by the terms of the mortgage-deed, but is given by the general law. The mortgagee-defendant in this case was thus held to be entitled to a lien on the mortgaged property for the amount of the added assessment paid by him on behalf of the mortgagor. The mortgagor had by a registered letter made an offer to redeem. The lower Courts treated this offer as a tender and the defendant made no objection to its sufficiency. It was held, however, that a mere offer by letter to pay a certain amount cannot be treated as a sufficient tender and that in order to stop interest a strict tender would have to be proved. KAMAYA v. DEVAPA, 22 B. 440. [R., 14 M.L.J. 488, 18 M.L.J. 31, 32 A. 612 = 20 M.L.J. 890.]

(7)—Fresh loan from mortgagee—Condition of re-payment—Tacking.—A mortgagor, in consideration of having secured a fresh advance of money from the mortgagee, gave a bond in which he agreed that the amount should be re-paid before the mortgage is redeemed. Held that the bond bound the land which could not be redeemed by payment of the mortgage-money alone. PARABH DIAL v. KHARKU, 2 P.R. 1890. (4 A. 85, F.)

(8)—Mortgage—Mortgagor left in possession as lessee of mortgagee—Suit for arrears of rent compromised—Compromise including mortgage amount—Instrument of compromise not registered—Effect.—Suit to recover the amount due under a mortgage. The mortgaged property had been subject to a prior mortgage. The prior mortgagee, though entitled to possession, had leased the property to the mortgagor. The mortgagor-lessee failed to pay the rents, and the mortgagee sued to recover the arrears of rent and for possession of the land. The disputes were amicably settled and a compromise was put in. The compromise stipulated for payment of the mortgage amount also. The instrument of compromise was, however, not registered. Held, that the plaint mortgage was subject to the prior mortgage alone and, not to the amount specified in the compromise, as, in the absence of registration, no valid charge was created thereby. UNNI v. NAGAMMAL, 18 M. 368. [R., 9 C.W.N. 789, 11 O.C. 248.]

He has no right either of foreclosure or sale. Further the sale of his right of redemption by the mortgagor will not convert a usufructuary mortgage into a simple mortgage so as to enable the mortgagee to bring the property to sale. *LALAI RAM v. (2)—Usufructuary mortgagee—What he can assign.—A usufructuary mortgagee having no power of sale under his lease cannot give a third party power of sale. He can only assign his rights and remedies against the mortgagor, and these cannot be pursued in a suit to which the mortgagor is not party. MUSSAMUT CHOHA-RAO DHAMIN v. CHUMUN LALL, 21 W.R. 185.

(4)—Mortgage usufructuary—Covenant to pay—Payment after a fixed period—Option to pay within time—Sale of the property by mortgagee—Reg. V of 1827, s. 15, cl. 3.—A usufructuary mortgage, executed in 1869, provided as follows:—"The amount of Rs. 1,750, is borrowed on the said premises. We three of us shall, after paying off the said amount of debt after fifteen years from this day, redeem our premises. Perhaps any one of us three might within the period pay off at one time the amount of rupees according to his share, you should allow redemption of the premises proportionately after receiving the amount and you should pass a receipt for the monies received." The mortgagee sued in 1906 for recovery of the mortgage-debt. The first Court allowed the claim. The lower Appellate Court reversed this decree, holding that, where, in the case of a usufructuary mortgage, the mortgagor agrees to redeem by payment of the principal after a stated period, the mortgagor has no higher or better rights than he has under a simple usufructuary mortgage. Held, that the suit would lie, inasmuch as the mortgage in question was governed by s. 15 (3) of Reg. V of 1827 and there was nothing in the terms of the mortgage-deed which, either expressly or by implication, indicated that the property should not, by means of a civil suit, be applied in liquidation of the debt. PARASHA-RAM VISHNU DAHKE v. PUTLAJIRAO KALAVARAO SALVI, 11 Bom.L.R. 1315 = 34 B. 128 = 4 Ind. Cas. 593. (17 B. 425, F.; 16 B. 303, 20 B. 796, 10 Bom.L.R. 615, Expl.)

(5)—Deed of mortgage—Sale.—Where a mortgage is in other respects a usufructuary mortgage, the insertion therein of a personal covenant to pay the mortgage debt on demand unaccompanied by any hypothecation of the property the subject of the mortgage cannot alter the character of the mortgage and give the mortgagee a right to sell in the event of non-payment. *KRISHNA v. became barred. He subsequently got possession from the mortgagor. In an action by the mortgagor's representative for possession. Held, that the mortgage decree, which did not deal with the mortgagee's right to possession, did not put an end to his right until sale, and that the mortgagor, his representative or assignee could not oust him even though he had obtained possession after the date of his suit. KAVERI AMMAL v. (7)—Usufructuary mortgage-bond—Covenant to pay—Suit to recover money—Possession, delivery of—Subsequent dispossession—Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), s. 68, cl. (c)—Cause of action.—In a usufructuary mortgage bond, there was a hypothecation of the land, a covenant to re-pay the sum advanced as also an agreement, under which the mortgagees were entitled to take possession of the land and to enjoy the profits of the land in lieu of interest: Held, it was not a pure usufructuary mortgage and the mortgagees were entitled to sue for their money. Cl. (c) of s. 68 of the Transfer of Property Act is wide enough to include every instance of failure by a mortgagor to secure the mortgagee in undisturbed possession, at any time during the period for which the mortgagee is entitled to remain in possession. The subsequent dispossession of the mortgagee, after possession has been once delivered to him, is a failure on the part of the mortgagor to secure him in undisturbed possession. (16 A. 318, Appr.) Where possession was delivered to the mortgagee, but, on his calling on the mortgagor to give additional or substituted security, the latter entered into occupation and thus deprived the former of his possession. Held, the mortgagee had a cause of action under cl. (c) of s. 68 of the Transfer of Property Act. PARGAN PANDAY v. MAHATOM MAHATO, 6 C.L.J. 143. (2 C.L.J. 493, 25 C. 450, 21 M. 242, R.; 24 C. 677, D.) [F., 6 Ind. Cas. 153.]

(8)—Usufructuary mortgagee—Suit for money—Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), ss. 67, 68.—The remedy of a usufructuary mortgagee, to whom possession had not been given, is to sue for possession under his contract, or to bring, under s. 68 of the Transfer of Property Act, a suit for money. claiming under a purchaser from the mortgagor, the mortgagee's right is only to sue to recover the possession of which he has been deprived. He cannot sue for the mortgage-money and bring the property mortgaged to sale unless the dispossession was owing to the wrongful act or default of the mortgagor or the mortgagee had failed to secure the possession without disturbance by himself or some other person. GOKUL v. SHRIMAL, 6 Bom. L.R. 288.

(10)—Mortgagee's right to sue—Prior usufructuary mortgage and subsequent hypothecations held by plaintiff.—Where a person holds a usufructuary mortgage upon a property and two subsequent hypothecations on the same, such mortgagee is entitled to a decree for sale of the property with respect to the hypothecations, but subject to the prior usufructuary mortgage. RADHAKRISHNIER v. (11)—Failure to give possession—Suit to enforce lien—Suit for compensation for breach of contract—Suit for money lent or for money had and received for plaintiff's use.—Under a usufructuary mortgage, the mortgagor was to give possession of the property to the mortgagee, who was to set off profits against interest due on the mortgage money and the mortgage was to be redeemed by payment of the principal amount in a particular month of the year. But the property was not hypothecated for the amount. The mortgagor having failed to give possession, the mortgagee sued him for the principal and interest by enforcement of the lien. Held that though the claim for enforcement of the lien was unsustainable, yet it was inequitable to dismiss the suit as brought, and to relegate the plaintiff to a fresh suit for the money. The whole of the circumstances on the strength of which the plaintiff founded his cause of action being fully disclosed in the plaint and supported by the evidence, the claim for the money ought to be decreed, whether it was regarded as a suit for compensation in damages for breach of contract, or for money lent, or for money had and received for the plaintiff's use. SHEO NARAIN v. (12)—Failure to give possession—Suit to enforce lien—Suit for compensation—Measure of damages.—Under a usufructuary mortgage, the mortgage-money and the interest was to be discharged by the usufruct of the property, of which possession, was to be given to the mortgagee, but the property was not hypothecated as collateral security for the loan. The mortgagor having failed to give possession, the mortgagee sued for enforcement of the lien. Held that though the claim for the enforcement of the lien failed, it was inequitable to dismiss the suit for that reason, as the defendant having committed a breach of contract, the plaintiff was entitled to claim compensation; and though the suit was (13)—Decree on prior mortgage—Subsequent usufructuary mortgagee not a party—Execution sale—Sale certificate reciting prior mortgagee's undertaking to pay usufructuary mortgage—Resistance in obtaining physical possession by usufructuary mortgagee.—A executed a simple mortgage of his property in favour of B and a subsequent usufructuary mortgage of the same property in favour of C. B obtained a decree on his bond in the suit brought against A alone without impleading C, and in execution of that decree, purchased the mortgaged property and, having obtained the sale certificate, procured judicial possession. The usufructuary charge on the property was publicly notified and was well known to B at the time of sale. The sale certificate recited B's undertaking to pay off the usufructuary mortgage. When B tried to obtain physical possession of the property, he was met by C's claim to hold on to the estate till his charge was paid off. B claimed to get rid of C's charge on the allegation that it was false, fraudulent, and non-existing. Held that there was no substantial reason for holding that the certificate of sale, which B took with his eyes open, was full of false and fraudulent allegations, defeating his purchase, and creating evidence against his interest in connection with the property and that, apart from those considerations, it was clear that when B purchased the rights and interest of the judgment-debtor in the property in suit, he acquired the interest that the judgment-debtor had in the property and nothing more, and that this interest was only the right to redeem the mortgaged property from any or all the charges created by him on it, including that of the usufructuary mortgagee, that therefore B brought the property charged with C's charge, and that, consequently, the suit ought to be dismissed. MITHU LAL v. RAMCHANDAR, A.W.N. 1887, 125.

(14)—Usufructuary mortgage—Purchase by first mortgagee of equity of redemption—Extinguishment of first mortgage.—A, a usufructuary mortgagee, purchased from his mortgagor the equity of redemption also. Between the dates of his mortgage and his purchase, the mortgagor had given a usufructuary mortgage of the property to B for a term of years. Now A sued B for the recovery of possession of the land as purchaser, and offered to redeem B, if his mortgage was found to be genuine. In second appeal, the plaintiff-appellant contended that, in equity, the prior mortgage to him should not be deemed to have been extinguished by his purchase of the equity of redemption, but should be deemed to be alive, and that possession of the property should therefore be given to him as against the second mortgagee. Held that the position taken by the appellant in his plaint was inconsistent with the case made for him in second appeal. For, if he was a first mortgagee, there would be no obligation upon him to discharge a puisne incumbrancer, and his offer to do so was wholly unnecessary. Taking his claim as it really stood the appellant, who was occupying the position of the original mortgagor, could not compel the second mortgagee B, who was in possession of the property for a term of years yet unexpired, to accept his mortgage-debt at once. BALDEO PRASAD v. The defendant pleaded that part of the land had been diluviated and that he had paid the entire amount of the hukajiree agreed on. Both the lower Courts gave a decree for the plaintiff as they disbelieved the plea of the defendant. The defendant in special appeal to the High Court urged that the plaintiff had no cause of action. Held, that, as the defendant, without contesting the finding of the Court of first instance, accepted it and admitted that the plaintiff had ground for bringing his suit, by pleading to that suit as brought, and traversing the plaintiff's allegation as to non-payment of hukajiree, he was not entitled to set up an entirely different state of things in the High Court, or to deny what he had admitted in both the Courts below. SHEO GOLAM SINGH v. (20)—Lease by mortgagee to mortgagor—Remedy of mortgagee arising upon non-payment of rent.—One Husan Johan Begam mortgaged, by a usufructuary mortgage, certain immovable property to Kedar Nath, and put the mortgagee in possession. It was agreed that the mortgagee should take all the profits from the mortgaged premises in lieu of interest: it was also provided that should the mortgagee be disturbed in possession, or deprived of possession, or should it appear that the property was already mortgaged, the mortgagee should have a remedy by suit against the mortgagor and against the mortgaged property. On the day following the date of the mortgage, the mortgagee gave a lease for the mortgaged premises to the mortgagor for Rs. 150 per annum, payable half-yearly. The rent was paid for sometime, but afterwards fell into arrears, and the mortgagee lessor thereupon sued the mortgagor asking for sale of the mortgaged premises, and claiming to sell them, not only for the principal monies due, but also for the sums in arrear which were due as rent. Held, that the plaintiff mortgagee was only entitled to a money-decree for the principal amount of the mortgage-money. As to the rent, the plaintiff was entitled to a decree for three years' arrears. The plaintiff's remedy for recovery of the rent lay in a Revenue and not in a Civil Court; but the fact that an appeal had been preferred to the District Judge, rendered the question of jurisdiction (in view of ss. 206—208 of the N. W.P. Rent Act, 1881) in the present instance immaterial. HUSAN JAHAN BEGAM v. KEDAR NATH, A.W.N. 1901, 109. [R., 6 O.C. 18; Cons., 6 O.C. 26.]

(22)—Mortgage by tenant of absolute occupancy holding—Surrender by tenant of the holding to landlord—Landlord accepting rent from mortgagee in possession—Effect on equity of redemption.—The maxim "nemo potest esse tenans et dominus" (a person cannot be at the same time both landlord and tenant of the same premises) does not mean that a landlord cannot own the equity of redemption in respect of a holding as a separate interest. By effecting a valid mortgage a tenant splits his right into two parts, each of which being distinct from the other. It is competent to a landlord to take a mortgage direct from a tenant with an absolute occupancy right. (2 C.P.L.R. 16, 14 C.P.L.R. 9, R. & F.) Where an absolute occupancy tenant made a valid usufructuary mortgage of his holding, and afterwards surrendered his rights in the tenancy to the landlord, it was held that the landlord acquired the equity of redemption of such holding. Held, also, that the landlord's mere acceptance of rent from the mortgagee in possession did not extinguish his right of redemption. Mere acceptance of rent from the man in possession does not make that man a tenant. BALI RAM v. RAM RAO MAHRATTA, 4 N.L.R. 57. (15 C.P.L.R. 99, F.)

So in accordance with cl. (2), s. 55, the usufructuary mortgagee is entitled to be replaced in possession of the mortgaged property. He regains the right to collect the rents and profits, the effect of s. 43 being not to turn the usufructuary mortgagee into a simple mortgagee. Where the Court of Wards, on the death of the disqualified proprietor, releases the property from its superintendence and hands over to the usufructuary mortgagee, who was dispossessed under s. 43 of the Act, inter alia, certain promissory notes executed by tenants, for arrears of rent (due on the mortgaged property), in favour of the Court of Wards' Manager, held that, he having been replaced in possession of the mortgaged lands in accordance with s. 55 (2), is entitled to sue on those pro-notes without obtaining an endorsement from the Court of Wards, because, on the death of the ward, the power of the Court of Wards having ceased, there was no one who could legally endorse the notes. not bound to sue for possession. Where an instrument of mortgage recited that possession of the property had been delivered to the mortgagee; that the profits were to be enjoyed in lieu of interest; that the mortgagor was allowed at any time to redeem, without any covenant that the mortgagee might call in his money when he pleased; held, that the mortgagee was entitled to sue for his money if the lessee of the mortgagor in whose possession the property was and who was paying the rent to the mortgagee refused to give possession after the expiry of the lease. LALJI MAL v. MOHAN LAL, A.W.N. 1881, 71.

(28)—Usufructuary mortgage—Suit for recovery of debt.—In this case, there was no regular mortgage deed, and the terms of the mortgage were to be gathered from an entry in one of the plaintiff's books. According to that entry the plaintiff was put in possession of a shop in consideration of a debt, and he was to retain possession till the debt was repaid by the mortgagor; the mortgagor did not make himself personally liable for the amount. Held that this amounted to a purely usufructuary mortgage, and that the mortgagee could not sue for the payment of the debt. He was entitled to remain in possession of the premises till the principal and the interest of the mortgage-debt were defrayed according to the terms of the agreement. Assuming that the suit would lie, it was held, that the mortgagee could not claim interest as there was no provision for payment of interest, and the language of the entry made it clear that the intention of the parties was that the rent of the shop was to go against the interest on the debt. SOMAN MULL v. (30)—Usufructuary mortgage deed and agreement for rent executed by mortgagors on same day—Terms in both identical in several respects—Intention of parties—Same transaction—Suit for sale—Maintainability.—A mortgage deed contained the following provisions:—"We bind ourselves to pay to you or to those who may obtain your order, before the 25th of every month, Rs. 65—10—0, viz., Rs. 35/- for principal and Rs. 30/10-, being the interest accruing at 14 annas per cent. per mensem. You should let out the aforesaid house for rent and the rent derivable therefrom should be credited every month towards the aforesaid principal and interest. In case the rent derivable from the said house should fall short of the amounts to be paid to you every month, or if no rent should be derived therefrom, we bind ourselves to pay otherwise the amount due for principal and interest, before the 25th of every month. Should we fail so to pay, we bind ourselves to pay compound interest for the amount of interest due for each month. In case we do not pay the amount payable by us for five months on the whole, you shall recover the debt from us” On the day that the mortgage bond was executed, the mortgagors executed a rent deed in favour of the mortgagee containing the following terms:—“as we have taken out from you on rent at Rs. 30/10/ for each month..... we or our heirs bind ourselves to pay to you or to those who may obtain your order before the 25th of every month the aforesaid Rs. 30/10/-. If we make default in so paying, we bind ourselves to pay compound interest on the amount of each month in which default is made. If perhaps you require the aforesaid house and bungalow, we bind ourselves to deliver it over with the key to you.....”. The mortgagors having made default in the payment of the amount as stipulated above, the Nidhi instituted the present suit. Held that in cases like the present it was the intention of the parties, irrespective of the mere form of instruments executed between them, that determines their rights. The striking identities in the provisions of the two instruments clearly pointed to the view that what purported to be the mortgage was not distinct from what purported to be the lease, that the two instruments were executed as parts of one and the same transaction, and that the intention was that the rights and obligations of the parties were to be gathered from the provisions of both. Taking the two together it was clear that the transaction was one entirely of mortgage with an express covenant to pay the principal and interest in instalments, and conferring a power on the mortgagee to take possession of the property mortgaged and apply the usufruct in discharge of the interest and principal. It was, however, not obligatory on the mortgagee to enter into possession and liquidate the debt by the usufruct. The express covenant to pay precluded the mortgage being taken as a purely usufructuary mortgage as defined by the Transfer of Property Act. Consequently, plaintiff could sue for sale on default in the payment of the amount due. MADHWA SIDHANTA ONAHINI NIDHI v. VENKATARAMANUJULU NAIDU, 26 M. 662. (2 M. I.A. 487, F.; 21 C. 841, R.).

The Government enhanced the revenue during the currency of the mortgage. Held, that, under the terms of the mortgage deed, the mortgagor was liable to pay the enhanced revenue. Assuming that, s. 76 of the Transfer of Property Act applied to usufructuary mortgages, there was here a contract to the contrary within the meaning of the section. THIPPA RAMASWAMI v. KRISHNASWAMI, 8 Ind. Cas. 845=9 M.L.T. 206. (20 M.L.J. 640, M.W.N. 1910, 333, 8 M.L.T. 173, 7 Ind. Cas. 321, 17 M.L.J. 517, R.)

(32)—Usufructuary mortgage—Suit for recovery of money due upon a mortgage—Sale of mortgaged premises for Government revenue—Surplus sale proceeds, recovery of mortgage money from—Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), s. 73—Estoppel—Default to pay Government revenue, how to be determined—Covenant, how to be construed—Construction of lease.—The Court is bound to give effect to the intention of the parties to a contract, but that intention must be gathered from the language used in the document, and not from any extraneous considerations. Where an Ijara lease provided for the payment of the Government revenue in equal shares by the lessor and the lessee, the mortgagor and the mortgagee, and also provided as follows:—“If the property be, may God forbid it, sold by auction on account of any Government demands or for any other cause, and goes out of possession of the Ijaradars, they, the said Ijaradars, shall be competent to realize the entire peshgi money with interest, at rupee one per cent. per mensem, from the surplus sale proceeds and from the person and other properties of me, the declarant.” Held, that, upon a reasonable construction of the lease as a whole, it cannot be said that, if there was default in payment of the Government revenue in contravention of the earlier clause, the benefit of the second clause would be lost to the mortgagee. BIBI AZIRAN v. BIBI KASIMAN, 10 C.L.J. 488=4 Ind. Cas. 439.

(33)—Usufructuary mortgage—Interest not stipulated for—Construction.—Where there is no stipulation for interest in a usufructuary mortgage-deed, the mortgagee is not entitled to interest, but the usufruct goes in lieu of interest. GUNGA PERSHAD ROY v. EIBEE ENAYET ZAHERA, 16 W. R. 251.

(34)—Usufructuary mortgage—Construction of deed—Usufruct—Interest.—In the case of pure usufructuary mortgages, the mortgagee has no right to sue for the debt. Where the mortgage deed merely gave the mortgagee the right of holding and enjoying the property till the debt shall have been paid off, and no reference was made to interest, the proper construction was that the enjoyment of the rents, profits and the possession of the mortgaged premises should go not only to the liquidation of interest but also of the principal, and so the mortgagee is prevented from suing in respect of the original debt. RAMJEE DASS v. BABA KAKA NUND, 81 P. R. 1870.

(35)—Usufructuary mortgage—Mortgagee not in possession of a portion of the mortgaged property—Acquiescence of mortgagee in part performance—Stipulation for interest—Redemption without payment of interest.—Where the mortgagors covenanted that “we shall pay the whole mortgage-debt in a lump on Baisakh Sudi, 15th of any year and we shall pay the money out of our own pocket, and if there is any defect in the mortgaged property or in the mortgagee's possession thereof, then we, the executants, will pay the principal with interest at 2 per cent. per mensem and besides this, damages and penalties,” and possession was not obtained by the mortgagee of a portion of the mortgaged property for a certain period, and in the subsequent suit for redemption, the mortgagee claimed interest for a period during which he had been out of possession, held, that by reason of his acquiescence, the mortgagee was not entitled to claim interest in respect of that period during which he had not obtained possession of a portion of the mortgaged property. (29 I.A. 148=24 A. 521, P.C., 27 A 313, R.) Further, where the lower appellate Court, having expressed the opinion that the mortgagee was entitled to the interest for the period of his dispossession, referred the question as to the length of that period to the Court of First Instance for determination, and subsequently dismissed the claim, held, that the course adopted was justified, and, assuming it was not, the whole case being before the High Court, the respondents were entitled to support the judgment on the ground of acquiescence. JHUNKU SINGH v. CHATKAN SINGH, 6 A.L.J. 247=31 A. 325=2 Ind. Cas. 221.

(36)—Mortgage—Property security for interest—Personal liability—Effect of.—Where a usufructuary mortgage-deed provided for payment of interest at twelve annas per cent. per mensem if the rents and profits were not sufficient to pay up the whole amount of interest, held that the mortgaged property was security not only for payment of the principal but also of interest. Held, further, that the mere fact that the mortgagor took a personal liability to pay up the interest did not relieve the mortgaged property from liability to satisfy the deficiency. CHINTAMAN v. DULARI, 7 A. L. J. 1087=8 Ind. Cas. 570.

(37)—Personal covenant by the mortgagor to pay principal and interest within a certain period—Stipulation to pay interest.—A mortgage-deed provided that the property mortgaged was to remain in mortgagee's possession until the principal and interest was paid to him and that the mortgagor within two years from the date of the deed was to pay principal and interest and if he failed to do so he should pay interest. Held, that the mortgage constituted by the deed, was not usufructuary. simple mortgage into usufructuary mortgage by mortgagors taking possession of mortgaged property—Interest, obligations of mortgagor to pay, on mortgagees taking possession of mortgaged property, when so stipulated in deed—Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), ss. 58 (d) and 67 (a).—The defendants owned a 3 annas, 7 pies, and 4 karants share in a certain village, out of which, on the 15th March, 1877, they mortgaged to M a 2 annas, 7 pies, and 4 karants share, one of the conditions of the mortgage being that, if the principal and the interest secured by the mortgage were not paid within 5 years from the date of the mortgage, the mortgagee should be entitled to take possession of the mortgaged share. On the 27th June, 1877, the defendant mortgaged their 3 annas, 7 pies and 4 karants share to the plaintiff. The material portion of the mortgage-deed was as follows:—“Whereas we have borrowed Rs. 5,400 from H (plaintiff) and have fixed the interest of the said amount at Rs. 1-2-0 per cent. a month payable from the date of the execution of the deed to the date of payment: it is therefore hereby declared that we shall pay the interest yearly; that we shall pay the entire principal and the remaining interest within 8 years either in instalments or in one lump sum; that, in case of default in payment of interest, it shall be considered to be principal and we shall pay interest thereon at Rs. 1-2-0 per cent. a month; that if the interest for any year is not paid, then, on the expiration of three years, the said mortgagee shall be at liberty to take possession of the mortgaged property, hence these few words have been put into writing by way of a mortgage deed without possession.” On the 20th July, 1880, the plaintiff sued the defendants for possession of the share and, as he sought to establish that the prior mortgage was a fraudulent transaction, made M a defendant to the suit. The Subordinate Judge, on the 24th August, 1880, decreed possession of the share to the plaintiff, but held that the prior mortgage was not a fraudulent transaction. On the 30th May, 1881, the plaintiff obtained possession of the share in execution of the decree and retained possession of the same till the 21st November, 1883, when he gave possession to M of the share which had been mortgaged to the latter and also of additional 7 karants. On the 12th April, 1892, the plaintiff sued the defendants for Rs. 10,000, being the amount of principal and interest due on the mortgage and claimed to recover that sum by the sale of the share mortgaged to him, on the ground that the term of mortgage had expired and the mortgage money had become payable. The defendants defended the suit upon the grounds, amongst others, that the mortgage was a usufructuary one at the time of the suit, and therefore the suit, as one for sale of the mortgaged property, was not maintainable, and that, from the time the plaintiff obtained a decree for possession of the share, the defendant ceased to be liable to pay any interest. Held, that the mortgagee was not debarred from suing for the sale of the share. The mortgage-deed could not be interpreted to mean that the mortgagee should lose that right on taking possession of the share. Therefore, even if the mortgage was converted into a usufructuary one within the meaning of s. 58 (a), Transfer of Property Act, 1882, on the mortgagee taking possession of the share, the mortgagee was not precluded by the provisions of s. 67 (a) of that Act from bringing the share to sale under the mortgage; a usufructuary mortgagee being entitled when there is a contract that he may bring mortgaged property to sale if the mortgagor fails to pay according to his contract to sue for sale of the mortgaged property. Held, further, that the parties to the mortgage did not intend that, on the mortgagee obtaining possession of his share, the obligation on the part of the mortgagors to pay interest at the stipulated rate should cease, but they intended that, if the mortgagors failed to pay interest as agreed, the mortgagee might further receive himself by taking possession of the share, and that, if he did so, he should account for the profits, which should be set off against the interest agreed to be paid. Held, further, that the plaintiff was entitled to interest at the stipulated rate from the 24th August, 1880, to the date of suit, deducting from it the profits which the plaintiff admittedly received and also the profits of 7 karants which the plaintiff should have retained in his possession as part of the mortgaged property, which was not subject to M's prior mortgage, instead of placing the latter person in possession of the same. KALLU AND GAJRAJ v. DAYA RAM AND SAMPAT RAM, 5 O.C. 286.

(39)—No provision in decree about possession and interest—Execution mortgagee in possession after decree—Taking account not necessary—Application for execution—Application for order absolute.—In a suit on a usufructuary mortgage, the Court passed a Razi-namah decree by which the defendant was to pay Rs. 700 to the plaintiff within one year from its date, and in default the plaintiff was to realize the amount by sale of the mortgaged property. The terms of the compromise and hence of the decree were silent as to possession and interest, but by the mortgage instrument, the mortgagee was to be in possession of the land in lieu of interest and he continued in possession ever since the date of the decree. Upon an application for execution of the decree after one year by sale of the mortgaged property, held (a) that the fact that the mortgagee continued in possession since the date of the decree did not render it necessary that an account of the profits of the land should be taken for the purpose of being set off against the amount decreed, as, by doing so, the Court would be going behind the decree, and (b) that the application for execution, in which the decree-holder stated that there had been default in the payment of the decree amount and applied for sale, was an application for an order absolute. APPA ROW v. KRISHNA AYYANGAR, 25 M. 537. [R., 17 M.L.J. 201=2 M.L.T. 167=30 M. 255, 6 M.L.T. 361.]

(40)—Mortgagee—Redemption—Mortgagor.—Under a usufructuary mortgage, the mortgagee takes his chance of the rents and profits being greater or less than the interest which might have been reserved by the bond and the mortgagor is entitled to redeem on payment of the mortgage money. RAJA PERTAB BAHADUR v. Where the mortgagee assigns his interest for a lesser amount than that due to him, without stating that the balance was conveyed as a gift, the assignee cannot recover from the mortgagor more than the consideration he paid for the assignment and reasonable interest thereon. Where, at the date of the assignment, a very small portion of the consideration was due for principal and the balance represented the interest, the assignee was held not entitled to the high rate of interest provided for in the original mortgage-deed, viz., 24 per cent. per annum, but was awarded only 6 per cent. per annum. The rents and profits have first to be applied towards principal and then towards interest. The mortgagor is liable for the enhanced assessment levied by Government after the date of the mortgage. BURLE JAGGANNA v. YELUGULA LATCHANNA, 8 M.L.T. 420=7 Ind. Cas. 871.

—No account at redemption—Subsequent passing of statute authorising collection of cesses—Mortgagee appropriating amount of cesses, if liable to credit to mortgage debt.—The parties in a deed of usufructuary mortgage did not intend that any account should be taken at the time of redemption. They arbitrarily fixed the income of the property and settled the amount to be paid thenceforth on account of Government demands and interest on the security. The remainder which was a fixed sum, was to be annually paid to the mortgagor as surplus profits. The mortgagees collected from the tenants sums which were realisable under a subsequent statute only by the proprietor mortgagor. The mortgagees alleged that, by a subsequent agreement between the parties, the mortgagor was placed in possession of a part of the mortgaged premises, the income whereof was sufficient to wipe out the annual debt. Held, that, as the arrangement was not in supersession or even variation of the mortgage, oral evidence was admissible to prove the transaction. (27 A. 313, D.; 10 C.L.J. 27, R.) Held also, that the mortgagor was entitled to credit for other sums e.g., cesses, realised by the mortgagees out of the mortgaged-property. The rents and profits are incidents de jure to the ownership of the equity of redemption, and the mortgagee in possession is bound to apply whatever profits are actually received towards the satisfaction of the mortgage debt. *RAMAVATAR v. lieu of interest, but, by a practically contemporaneous instrument, the mortgagee granted a lease to the mortgagor on easy terms, reserving a rent of Rs. 4,200 only when the interest worked out to Rs. 6,000, but the mortgagor being unable to pay this rent gave up possession to the mortgagee. Held, in a suit for redemption of the mortgage, that the mortgagee was entitled to appropriate the whole of the profits realised by him towards interest, according to the terms of the mortgage-bond. That the mortgage and the lease were parts of one and the same transaction, but there was no inconsistency between the two instruments. It is not permissible to contradict or vary the express and unambiguous terms of a written instrument by reference to preliminary negotiations or previous conversations. An unregistered agreement purporting to set out in what manner the rents and profits of the mortgaged property were to be dealt with, at variance with the stipulation in that behalf contained in the registered mortgage-deed, was inadmissible in evidence by the provisions of the Registration Act. SAIYID ABDULLA KHAN v. (i), arts. 95, 97, 116 and 120.—On 19th November, 1903, defendant-respondent executed a mortgage deed with possession for a certain specified plot of land in favour of the plaintiff-appellant. The contract was that the mortgagee should have actual physical possession and enjoy the entire gross rental in lieu of interest. The plot in question turned out to be the sir land of the defendant, and plaintiff obtained merely proprietary possession with the right to collect rent at a reduced rate from the mortgagors. It was found as a fact by the lower appellate Court that the contract was obtained from the plaintiff by defendant by means of a concealment of material facts amounting to fraud. Held that, upon the finding of the lower appellate Court, the plaintiff would be entitled to a simple money decree for the sum advanced with such interest as the Court might find due. Held further, that the claim must fall either under art. 95 or 97 of the first schedule to the Limitation Act; arts. 116 and 120 cannot apply to the case. UDIT NARAIN v. SAHIB ALI AND OTHERS, 13 O.C. 148 = 6 Ind. Cas. 1013.

(46)—Limitation applicable to a suit for recovery of rents and profits by a usufructuary mortgage—Limitation Act, art. 109.—The essence of a usufructuary mortgage is that the mortgagee looks to the rents and profits for the satisfaction of his advance, and, inasmuch as no time is fixed for payment, there can be no forfeiture. It is this forfeiture that gives rise to the remedies of foreclosure and sale, and in its absence the mortgagee is not entitled to the remedies that spring out of it. In the absence of an express agreement to pay, a usufructuary mortgagee cannot obtain a personal decree. But where the mortgagee has failed to obtain possession he is entitled either to sue for possession or for recovery of his money. Where a usufructuary mortgagee is kept out of possession by the mortgagor, he is entitled to recover rents and profits received by the mortgagor during that period; but he can only recover profits received within three years of the commencement of his suit which will be governed by art. 109 of sch. II, arts. 113, 135—Specific performance of contract.*—A mortgage-deed contained a recital that the mortgagor had received the mortgage money and put the mortgagee in possession of the property mortgaged. As a matter of fact the possession had not been given and the mortgagee sued for possession. Held, that the suit was not a suit for specific performance of a contract of mortgage. It was a suit for possession and was governed by art. 135 and not by art. 113 of the Limitation Act 1877. (A.W.N. 1884, 123, F.) In a suit for possession by the mortgagee, if the mortgagor admits the execution of the deed but denies the receipt of consideration, the onus lies on him to prove that he had not received the consideration. Mere delay in the institution of the suit does not shift the burden on to the mortgagee to prove that the consideration had passed. THAKUR RAM CHAND v. BEHARI, 7 Ind. Cas. 646. If, on accounts being taken, it is found that the whole of the debt has not been paid, the decree ought to be conditional on payment of whatever might be found due to the mortgagee. Even if such a suit is regarded as one in ejectment, the Courts have a discretion to allow redemption to the plaintiff. The proper course to pursue in such a case is for the Court to direct that accounts be taken of the amount due to the mortgagee and of any amount for which the mortgagee might be accountable to the mortgagor on account of the profits of the mortgaged property received by him, and then pass a final decree for redemption. Where a mortgage-bond stipulates for the appropriation of profits towards interest without mentioning the rate of interest, and a portion of the principal amount is received by the mortgagee, the Court in its decree should direct the appropriation of a portion of the rent proportionate to the balance of principal remaining unpaid towards interest and to hold the mortgagee accountable for the balance. If no portion of the amount paid would be debitable towards the principal, no question of accountability has bought the property at the sale in the capacity of an agent and not as principal, the equities of the mortgagor follow the property. The principal cannot, through the hand of his agent, take the land free from the mortgagor's equities. The case is similar to the one in which notice to the agent of the purchaser is held to be constructive notice to the principal so as to fix him with a trust or a burden relative to the subject of purchase, which without notice he would have escaped. SEEDER NAZEER ALI KHAN v. (3)—Sale of property to wife by husband bona fides of mortgage entered into by wife, a material issue for decision — Finding of first Court against bona fides of transaction—Mere expression of concurrence in, by lower appellate Court not sufficient.—In this case both the lower Courts had found that the alleged sale of the property (in the possession of the defendant mortgagee) to a wife by her husband was not bona fide. The defendant was entitled to a clear finding on the issue whether the mortgage executed in his favour by the wife with the knowledge of her husband was a bona fide one or not. The first Court had found that it was not a bona fide transaction without giving any satisfactory reasons for the finding. The first appellate Judge merely expressed that it concurred in the same and the High Court was of opinion that such mere expression of concurrence in an obscure judgment was not sufficient but that the Judge should have stated the grounds for his agreement with it and, that he was wrong in not having done so. KHEL-LUCK CHANDER GHOSE v. [R., 14 B. 377, 2 S.L.R. 90.] The mortgagee under an English mortgage cannot be restrained by an injunction from exercising his power of sale, merely because a suit for redemption has been filed against him by the mortgagor, and such a sale pendente lite can be stayed only by the mortgagor paying the amount due into Court, or by giving the prima facie evidence that the power of sale is being exercised in a fraudulent or improper manner. JAGJIVAN NANABHAI v. (10)—Usufructuary mortgage — Interest — Waiver.—In a usufructuary mortgage, securing the repayment of a certain sum of money after a given time with interest at 1 % per mensem, there were a number of provisions for securing the payment of interest to the mortgagee, and inter alia, there was a provision that he should have possession of the property, and take the profits on account of interest, the profits being agreed at a certain figure, leaving an agreed balance of interest to be paid yearly in cash. There was also a provision that in the event of possession not being given, the mortgagee might treat the money as immediately due, and recover it at once with interest at Rs. 1-6-0 % per mensem. The mortgagee did not take possession of the security, and took no steps to obtain such possession or to recover the money for nine years, during which period no interest was paid. The mortgagee then sued for the recovery of the amount with interest at Re. 1-6-0 % per mensem from the date of bond to date of suit. Held that the fair inference of fact to draw from this state of things was that the creditor waived the provisions for securing and recovering the interest (as he was at liberty to do), and that the transaction must be looked at as simply one of a loan for the specific period at the agreed rate of 1 % per mensem. GANGA SAHAI v. In a suit for a declaration that the conditional sale has become absolute, the plaintiff must prove that the foreclosure proceedings were perfectly regular. Where the plaint stated that proceedings under Regulation XVII of 1806 had been taken by the plaintiff and prayed that possession of the land mortgaged be decreed in favour of the plaintiff, and, apparently at the suggestion of the Court, prayer for possession was withdrawn and a decree for a declaration that the conditional sale had become absolute was granted to the plaintiff, the Chief Court declined to allow withdrawal of the prayer for the declaration, but permitted the addition of the prayer for possession as mortgagee. CHAUDHRI HAZARA SINGH v. (14)—Mortgage bond — Equitable assignment of prior lien.—A pledged certain lands to B in 1865, and, on the 24th of July 1868, granted a mokurari lease of the same lands to C. On the 5th of June 1868, shortly before the grant of the mokurari lease, A executed a simple mortgage of 8 annas of the same lands to D. It was proved that the consideration money given by C for the lease had been expended in paying off B's mortgage and that the bond had been made over to C, though not formally assigned to him. Held that under these circumstances C was entitled to stand in the place of the first mortgagee and that he was to be considered as having taken a regular assignment of the bond. DULI CHAND v. The permission of the High Court was not obtained by the plaintiff to proceed against the Patna property. Held that, although on account of failure to get permission of the High Court, the decree must, as regards the Patna property, be regarded as a money decree only and could not be executed by sale of the lands in that district, yet, the plaintiff was entitled by a separate suit to enforce his mortgage lien against the property in the Patna District in the hands of a purchaser, whose purchase was subsequent to his mortgage. BOLAKI LAL v. in respect of it, held that, as the plaintiff sued in respect of a single transaction affecting several items of property upon a single contract as between himself and his mortgagor, and as the plaintiff was compelled to sue by reason of the fact that, subsequent to the execution of his mortgage, several other persons had become interested in different portions of the property, which, as a whole, was the subject of his mortgage-bonds, the suit was not bad for multifariousness. BUNGSEE SINGH v. (17)—Mortgage—Test for registration—Unregistered mortgage—Money bond.—The test in determining the value, for purposes of registration, of the interest created by the mortgage, is the amount of the least sum recoverable under it. It is the value of the interest created, not the consideration for the creation of the interest, which must be regarded. An unregistered mortgage is not receivable in evidence for the purpose of affecting immovable property, or in proof of any transaction affecting it, but it may be received as evidence of the personal obligation. JAGAPPA v. (18)—Mortgage—Registration—Possession—Notice—Presumption—Purchase at Court-sale—Decree for possession—Enforcibility.—In the case of an unregistered mortgage without possession, there cannot be any presumption of notice against any subsequent registered mortgagee with possession. Where a certain property was purchased without notice of any prior incumbrance at a Court-sale in execution of a money-decree, a subsequent decree for possession obtained by a mortgagee of that property in a suit to which the purchaser was not a party, was valueless, as neither the title to, nor possession of, the land was then vested in the mortgagors. TUKARAM bin ATMARAM v. (20)—Earlier unregistered mortgage—Subsequent registered mortgage—Suit by second mortgagee—Sale of mortgaged property—Priority—Prior rights of first mortgagee over holder of money-decree against mortgagor—Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), s. 97.—In execution of a decree obtained by the holder of a registered second mortgage, the mortgaged property was brought to sale. The first mortgagee of the same property whose mortgage was not registered, intervened, but the Court rejected his claim, holding that his mortgage, though earlier in date, must be postponed to that of the second mortgagee, by reason of non-registration. The property was sold and part of the sale-proceeds was applied in wiping off the debt due to the second mortgagee, part in paying off the holder of a money-decree against the mortgagor, and the balance returned to the latter. Thereupon the present suit was instituted by the first mortgagee for recovering his debt out of the sale-proceeds and from the mortgagor, the second mortgagee, the holder of the money-decree and the purchaser at the Court-sale. The lower appellate Court held that the plaintiff had a cause of action only as against the mortgagor, and that the holder of the money-decree could not be ordered to refund any portion of the money paid to him. Held, on second appeal, that, although plaintiff's mortgage was postponed to that of the second mortgagee by reason of its not being registered, the plaintiff had still the same rights over the balance of the sale-proceeds as if he had been the second mortgagee in point of date, under s. 97 of the Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882) and, as such, entitled to priority over the holder of the money-decree. Under this section, the proceeds of sale, after satisfying the second mortgagee's debt, must be applied in paying off the plaintiff's incumbrance, and the holder of the money-decree would be entitled to any balance of the sale-proceeds subject to this equitable right of the plaintiff. PADMANABH BOMBSHENVI v. B impugned the bond as a forgery. It was found that the only evidence against the bond was that of B himself; that B had two sons in business at the time and in difficulties; and that the bond was not registered. Held, that the evidence in favour of the bond preponderated; that the subsequent sale was in fraud of creditors; and that the non-registration did not invalidate the bond. BABOO GUNGAPRASAD v. (23)—Suit for possession under terms of registered mortgage-deed, containing also terms tending to operate by way of conditional sale—Application of s. 9 (3) Punjab Alienation of Land Act, 1900, to such cases—Duty of Appellate Court—Practice and Procedure.—In a suit for possession by a mortgagee claiming under a registered deed, which contained besides other conditions two other clauses intended to operate by way of conditional sale, the Court of first instance decreed possession, without making any reference to the Deputy Commissioner, under s. 9 (2) and (3) of the Punjab Alienation of Land Act, 1900. Held, on a reference by the Divisional Judge to the Chief Court, that s. 9 (3), would apply, except where the plaintiff not only did not sue on the clause regarding conditional sale, but voluntarily surrenders that condition altogether and agrees to have it struck out, the mortgage would cease to be, as then no mortgage existed before the Court within the meaning of s. 9 (2), that s. 9 (2), (3), Punjab Alienation of Land Act, was imperative, and, it is clearly the duty of an Appellate Court to rectify any wrong order passed by the Court of first instance in this respect, and that under s. 582, Civil Procedure Code, the Appellate Court's procedure was the same as that of a Court of first instance in deciding the preliminary points noted therein, and then, if a reference to the Deputy Commissioner be still necessary under s. 9, it should be made either direct or through the lower Court; where the exercise of his powers under the Alienation of Land Act by the Deputy Commissioner would not dispose of the case, the Civil Court making the reference should dispose of it after the discharge by the Deputy Commissioner of his duties in regard to it. NARAIN SINGH v. Subsequently, K and R became second mortgagees of properties 2 and 1 respectively by separate deeds, and on the default of the mortgagor to pay Government revenue on property No. 2, K purchased the equity of redemption in it. On the 19th November 1880, D got a mortgage decree against Y, the mortgagor and K as purchaser of the mortgaged properties; and afterwards assigned the decree to R who now sought to execute it. K was the benamidar of R. On R applying to execute the decree against plot No. 1, held that R, before he could be entitled to proceed against property No. 1 in the hands of Y, must credit the mortgagor with such portion of the mortgage debt as properly falls on the property in his possession. Under the above circumstances when R offered to allow property No. 2 to be first sold free of all incumbrances, R should not be relegated to a regular suit and thus put to additional expense and delay before he could settle his account with Y. YAKOOB ALI CHOWDHRY v. (27)—Mortgage—Puisne mortgagee not made party to suit by prior mortgagee—Subsequent suit by prior mortgagee—Property purchased by a third party—Apportionment of redemption money—Security for mortgage debts, nature of.

—Where a prior mortgagee has obtained a decree for sale without making the subsequent mortgagee a party to his suit, the right of redemption of the latter does not become extinct, and he is entitled to exercise it even after a sale has taken place in execution of the decree obtained upon the prior mortgage. He must be placed in the same position which he would have occupied had he been made a party to the suit, and, therefore, he could redeem the prior mortgage only upon payment of the whole amount due upon the mortgage. (25 A. 388, 19 A. 527, F.; A.W.N. 1895, 45, Appr.) [Affirmed, 25 A. 388; R., 11 C.W.N. 403 = 5 C.L.J. 315.] Per Banerji, J. (Aikman, J., dissenting):—In the above case, if the prior mortgagee has realized only a part of the debt by the sale of the property, i.e., by enforcing the security on the property, and the subsequent mortgagee suing to redeem the prior mortgage pays the full amount of the debt, and thereby totally discharges the debt, the prior mortgagee is the person who has the right to appropriate that portion of the money paid by the subsequent mortgagee which represents the balance, the purchaser whose purchase money has satisfied the remainder of the debt being entitled to the remainder of the money paid by the subsequent mortgagee. One K holding a first mortgage on certain property, brought a suit for sale on his mortgage and obtained a decree for Rs. 3,306-14-6. B, a creditor of K, attached the decree, and having put up the mortgaged property for sale, purchased it himself for Rs. 1,050 which satisfied his decree. After this G, a puisne mortgagee of the same property, who had not been made a party to K's suit, brought a suit to redeem K's mortgage and for sale of the property. K, after the institution of the suit transferred his rights as mortgagee to P, who was thereupon made a defendant.

G obtained a decree for redemption and sale. Held, per Banerji, J., that P was entitled to the whole of the amount which G had to pay for redemption of the prior mortgage, with the exception of the amount of the purchase-money paid by B at the auction sale, which amount and which only, would be due to B or his representatives. (19 A. 527, Appr.) Per Aikman, J. (dissenting):—that the auction purchaser B (or his representative) was entitled to the whole amount to be paid by G for redemption of the prior mortgage (19 A. 527, Diss.; 15 A.W.N. 45, D.) [Affirmed, 25 A. 388.] Every mortgage pre-supposes the existence of a debt, and it is for the purpose of securing the re-payment of the debt that a mortgage of property is made. In every simple mortgage, unless there is a specific covenant to the contrary, there is a personal obligation upon the mortgagor to pay the debt, and there is also the liability of the mortgaged property, so that the security for the debt is two-fold, viz., first, the personal security of the mortgagor, and next, the security of the property. The liability of each kind of security is to the extent of the whole amount of the debt. It is for this reason that, when a person entitled to redeem seeks to redeem the mortgage, he must pay the whole amount due for the time being upon the mortgage (Per Banerji, J.) WAHID-UN-NISSA v. GOBARDHAN DAS, 22 A. 453 = A.W.N. 1900, 160. [R., 29 M. 491.]

(28)—Prior registered mortgage—Equity of redemption—Subsequent mortgagee—Parties to be impleaded in suit by prior mortgagee.

—A mortgage for ten years was made in favour of one S. It was registered, but S was not let into possession of the property. The same property was subsequently mortgaged to the defendant R. The mortgage of S having been prior in date to that of R and being registered, S's claim was superior to that of R and S had a right to maintain a suit for sale of the land to satisfy her mortgage. S, however, should have made R a party to her suit inasmuch as the equity of redemption was vested in R. S omitted to implead her so as to offer her the opportunity of redeeming to which she was entitled and plaintiff, notwithstanding the notice of R's claim given to him at the sale, became the purchaser, although R was not a party to S's suit and, therefore, not bound by the decree in it. The plaintiff, however, had a good title to the interest of the mortgagor who, as a party to S's suit, was bound by the decree. The utmost relief which could be afforded to the plaintiff was held to be to permit him to amend his plaint by praying for redemption of the land from R's mortgage and to treat his suit which was in the nature of an ejectment suit as one for redemption. *RADHA-BAI v. (29) — Mortgage, Suit on—Parties—Minor—Guardian.—During the pendency of a suit on a mortgage against the mortgagor, the latter died, and an ex parte decree was obtained against his widow who was substituted in his stead. On the application of the sister of the mortgagor, the decree was set aside after the death of the widow, the ground being want of proper service of process upon the widow. Thereupon, the sister was substituted as defendant, and a decree was passed ultimately for the sale of the mortgaged property. The mortgagee himself having purchased the property in execution sale, a certificate was granted to him and he was also put in possession of the property. About ten years after this sale, the son of the original mortgagor who was a minor at the time of the decree, brought a suit for setting aside the execution sale and for the recovery of possession of the property, alleging that the mortgage-bond sued on was a forged document, and that the decree and all the subsequent proceedings under it did not affect his rights, inasmuch as he had not been made a party to them. Held that on the death of the mortgagor, the plaintiff was his sole heir, that the equity of redemption in the mortgaged property vested in him, and that the inheritance was wholly unrepresented in the previous litigation inasmuch as the sister of the mortgagor was not appointed guardian of the plaintiff's person or administratrix of his estate, either under Madras Regulation V of 1804, ss. 2, 19, 23 or under Act XX of 1864, nor was she appointed his guardian ad litem in the mortgage suit, that, therefore, the plaintiff was entitled to have the genuineness of the mortgage-bond tried as against him, and that, if that was found to be genuine, he should be given an opportunity of redeeming the mortgage, and that if it was found to be not genuine, the property should be restored to him. *JATHA NAIK v. (32) — Mortgage—Purchase of decree by one of several judgment-debtors—Contribution—Relief claimed in second appeal inconsistent with pleadings.—The proprietor of an estate comprising thirteen villages mortgaged the same in 1866, and the mortgagee obtained a decree thereon on 16th December 1874. In the meantime the proprietor had given another mortgage of the same estate in 1867 and the second mortgagee obtained a decree thereon on the 6th July 1872. On the 20th March, 1874, twelve villages of the estate were sold in execution of the second decree, three of the villages being bought by the second mortgagee himself and the remaining nine by the respondent. The appellant, the uterine brother of the second mortgagee, being joint and undivided in interest, estate and business, purchased the unexecuted and unsatisfied decree of the first mortgagee on the 29th July 1875, and thus stood in the shoes of the prior mortgagee and of the second mortgagee and purchaser of three villages of the estate. Taking out execution of the decree under the prior mortgage, the appellant sought to sell over again the estate in the hands of the respondent. The respondent successfully objected in the execution proceedings, whereupon the appellant brought the present suit against the respondent to establish his right to bring the estate to sale. The respondent contended that the suit was bad inasmuch as it was really a suit by a judgment-debtor, who had purchased the decree, to enforce the decree against himself and his co-judgment-debtor. Held that this contention was not sound. But, as the plaintiff, in the relief he sought, had not specified what amount he should himself contribute towards the discharge of the decree on account of his purchase of the three villages, a decree, if granted for the relief as sought, would be enforceable against the respondent alone, and up to the full amount of his purchase; and it was obvious that this was what the appellant meant and sought to do by means of his suit against his co-proprietor the respondent. This relief sought in this way, which was plainly tainted by bad faith if not by fraud, had been rightly refused by the lower appellate Court; and this was not a case in which he should be allowed to obtain a relief which would be inconsistent with the facts and equities and pleadings he chose to set forth in the first Court. *SHEQ SARAN SINGH v. (33) — Mortgage—Contribution.—A number of villages had been mortgaged to B, who subsequently acquired the mortgagor's interest in some of them. be held free from the lien created by the mortgage-deed of B, on the ground that the four villages he had purchased were liable to their proportionate share of the mortgage-debt only and as two of them had already been sold and fetched more than the proportionate share of the four taken together, the other two were absolved from further liability on the principle of contribution. Held that the suit as brought was not maintainable, as it was not competent to the Court to abrogate the conditions of the mortgage by a declaration releasing any one part of the hypothecated property from its proportionate chargeability. AHMAD UD-DIN v. SHEORAJ SINGH, A.W.N. 1882, 38.

(34)—Registered mortgage deed signed by one party only—Breach of undertaking by other party—Limitation Act, sch. II, art. 116—Plaint, disclosure of cause of action in, when deemed sufficient.—During the pendency of a second appeal in the High Court of a second appeal in a suit on a promissory note that the present defendant had brought against the present plaintiff, a compromise was arrived at by which the latter undertook to execute and did execute a mortgage for a certain sum of money to the former who, in turn, was to file petitions and stay the appeal releasing the responsibility of the plaintiff. The defendant, however, in spite of the compromise which he failed to notify to the Court obtained a decree in his suit and executed the same. Plaintiff now sued as for recovery of the amount so taken from him in execution, alleging that the cause of action for such suit arose on the date when the money was collected by the defendant under his decree. Although the only right of action to which the plaintiff was entitled was the right to recover damages as for the breach of the undertaking by the defendant to withdraw the second appeal, yet, it was held that since all the necessary allegations had found place in the plaint, and the defendant had understood what the claim against him was and had not been prejudiced by the plaintiff's omission to ask specifically for damages, the plaint disclosed a sufficient cause of action. Nor was the suit barred by limitation by reason of the breach by the defendant having occurred more than three years before the suit was filed. The defendant's agreement to withdraw the second appeal was embodied in the registered mortgage instrument which he accepted from the plaintiff, and the fact that that instrument was not signed by the defendant did not take the case out of the operation of art. 116 of the Limitation Act. KHOTAPPA v. When the first mortgage was paid off, the title of the plaintiff, which was always a good title against the mortgagor, was a valid title against every one, and when his title became a valid and good title, the heirs of the mortgagors had no right to enter upon the possession of their land. Held also, that the plaintiff cannot claim interest on the mortgage amount for the period during which he was dispossessed, as this was a suit for possession of the mortgage property and not for the mortgage amount. NARAIN SINGH v. interest in the second mortgage to Gaya Prasad. In September 1893, Bansidhar and Kunj Bihari instituted a suit for foreclosure of their mortgage. To that suit Raj Kumar, the son of the original mortgagor, and Gaya Prasad were made defendants. On the same date, Gaya Prasad instituted a suit for foreclosure under the puisne mortgage of October 1889. On the 22nd December, foreclosure decrees were passed in both suits, and six months' time was allowed for redemption. The time allowed for redemption was extended from time to time, and ultimately, on the 3rd of January 1896, Gaya Prasad paid into Court the sum which was due to the mortgagees on the mortgage of July 1889, which sum was drawn out by the mortgagees. Subsequently to this payment into Court, Gaya Prasad applied to the Court in the suit on the prior mortgage, and prayed that the right of the defendant in that suit to redeem the mortgage property might be extinguished, and an order absolute for foreclosure granted in the applicant's favour. This application was refused, on the ground that Gaya Prasad was only entitled to bring a suit for foreclosure and "had not acquired the status of a decree-holder," and that, while he was a defendant, he could not execute the decree as a decree-holder, and could not get a decree for absolute foreclosure. There was no appeal from this order, but Gaya Prasad submitted to it and brought a separate suit for foreclosure. Held, that, under the above circumstances, no such separate suit for foreclosure would lie. BANSIDHAR v. brought a suit for sale of the mortgaged properties. Held that the sub-mortgagees were entitled to bring to sale the interest mortgaged to them subject to the rights of redemption of the original mortgagor. (18 A. 113, Overruled.) Per Stanley, C.J.—The words 'mortgaged property' are used throughout Chapter IV of the Transfer of Property Act, as meaning the interest in specific immoveable property, which the mortgagor professes to transfer, whatever that interest may be. The words "property comprised in the mortgage," as used in s. 85, were probably intended to denote no more than the estate or interest, which is the subject of any particular mortgage, that is, if the mortgage be a mortgage of the absolute estate in the land, then the land itself, if it be a puisne mortgage, then the interest in the land of the mortgagor, that is, the equity of redemption. This would give the words the same meaning as the words 'mortgaged property' as used in s. 25 of the English Conveyancing Act of 1881. In a properly constituted suit, a puisne mortgagee may have a sale of the interest mortgaged to him, subject to the rights of a prior incumbrancer. Query—Whether such incumbrancer is a person having an interest in the equity of redemption, which alone can be the subject of a subsequent mortgage, within the meaning of s. 85, Transfer of Property Act? He holds under a paramount title and cannot be prejudiced by a sale of the equity of redemption. Per Banerji, J.—There is nothing in the Transfer of Property Act which forbids a sub-mortgage. In the case of a sub-mortgage, the property, which is the subject of the mortgage, is the interest of the sub mortgagor as the original mortgagee. And as it is this interest which is the mortgaged property, the sub-mortgagee is entitled, under s. 67 of the Act, to an order for the sale of such interest. Any other view would place the sub-mortgagee in the same position as the holder of a simple money debt, and the pledge made in his favour would be no security at all. Per Aikman, J.—In the Transfer of Property Act, the Legislature has divided the Act into sets of sections with headings prefixed. These headings may be regarded as preambles to those sets of sections, and may, therefore, be legitimately consulted for the purpose of ascertaining the meaning of the statute. There is no privity between the sub-mortgagee and the original mortgagor. There is nothing in the Transfer of Property Act, which would render a sub-mortgage invalid, or prevent its enforcement as a lawful contract. RAM SHANKAR LAL v. It was not the act of cutting down all the timber, but the defendant's subsequent appropriation of the wood which ought to have been left for the share of the mortgagor that operated to the injury of the plaintiff, and limitation began to run only from the date when the defendant appropriated the wood to himself. AIYAPPA REDDI v. If the payment of contribution by the contributors to a portion of the debt obliterated the lien-holder's lien over the villages in the possession of the contributors, the lien-holders' security would melt away under action taken by the contributors to adjust their payments to one another, and the lien-holder would derive no benefit from these arrangements made by the contributors inter se: he could not control them, nor the results arising out of them; and he would be left without remedy in recovering his debt. RAM CHAND v. SHEORAJ SINGH, A.W.N. 1882, 56.

(46)—Mortgage of several shares—Payment of whole amount by one sharer—Suit for contribution.—The respondent and three others, co-sharers, mortgaged their shares and borrowed a certain amount. Two of them redeemed their shares and were released from all further liabilities. The mortgagee having obtained a money decree against K, one of the remaining two co-sharers, purchased that share in execution. The share was sold to the appellants for consideration. The mortgagee sued the respondent and K on the original mortgage-bond and obtained a decree against them both. In execution of this decree, the mortgagee caused the respondent's share alone to be proclaimed for sale, and in order to save it, the respondent was obliged to satisfy the decree. Now, the respondent sued to recover the contribution due from K and joined the appellants as defendants on the ground that the share of K in their lands was still liable to contribute its proportionate share of the amount secured by the bond. Held that, as the respondent offered no objection to the sale of K's share in execution of the money-decree, and as neither in the suit brought by the mortgagor against him, and K, nor in the proceedings taken in execution of that decree, did he raise any question as to the propriety of the mortgagee's conduct, or in his bringing the share of him, the respondent alone, to sale, the respondent could not claim in the present suit to stand in the position of the mortgagee of the original mortgage bond, so as to be entitled to enforce a lien upon the share of his co-mortgagor in the hands of third parties, purchasers for value. KUSHAL SINGH v. DEBI, A.W.N. 1881, 7.

(47)—Joint mortgage—Liability, whether joint or several.—The co sharers of an estate mortgaged it for a certain amount. The deed of mortgage contained also details of the share of each co-sharer of such estate; it did not contain a condition that each co-sharer might redeem his share by the payment of the share of the mortgage-money he had received. Held that the mortgagors were jointly liable for the whole sum advanced, and each mortgagor was not liable only to the extent of the money received by him. SUKHNANDAN PRASAD v. GOPI CHARAN, A.W.N. 1881, 11.

(48)—Mortgage—Subsequent partition—Mortgagee's rights.—The appellant sued for possession of certain land which had fallen to his share on partition of the mahal in which such land was situate. The land was in the possession of a usufructuary mortgagee, to whom it had been mortgaged before partition. Held, that the partition could not affect the rights of the mortgagee or change the character and extent of his security. The only possession the appellant could get of the property must be that of a mortgagor. MADHO RAM v. KISHEN DIAL, A.W.N. 1881, 31.

(49)—Mortgage—Undivided share—Decree—One of two co sharers of a house gave the plaintiff a simple mortgage of the house and subsequently sold it to a third person. In a suit brought against the purchaser and the mortgagor, the Court of first instance gave a decree, but the lower appellate Court reversed the decree on the ground that the mortgage was invalid, having been made without the consent of the other co-sharer. On second appeal, it was held that the decree of the lower appellate Court was wrong, but that the plaintiff ought not to be given a decree for a moiety of the house. CHAIN SUKH v. ABU ALI, A.W.N. 1881, 88.

(50)—Mortgage—Release by mortgagee of the share of one of two joint mortgagors.—It is competent to a mortgagee who holds a joint mortgage from two mortgagors to release the share of one mortgagor and realize the mortgage-debt from the share of the other only. In such a case, the right of the other to obtain contribution from the mortgagor whose share is released is unimpaired. JAI GOBIND v. JASRAM, A.W.N. 1898, 120. [R., 28 A. 174, F.B.=2 A.L.J. 630=A.W.N. 1905, 244; Diss., 33 C. 613=10 C.W.N. 551=3 C.L.J. 576.]

(51)—Mortgage—Joint mortgagees—Rights of joint mortgagees as to realization of mortgage money.—One of two joint mortgagees sued for her moiety of the mortgage debt and obtained a decree for sale of the whole mortgaged property. The other mortgagee would not join as plaintiff in that suit and was accordingly made a defendant. Subsequently the other mortgagee sued the mortgagor for recovery of his moiety of the mortgage debt by sale of the whole mortgaged property. Held that such a suit would not lie. KANHAI LAL v. JWALA DEI, A.W.N. 1896, 153.

(52)—Of share of undivided joint property.—If a sharer has an absolute right to dispose of his or her share, it follows that he or she may dispose of it whilst it is a share, and while the property is undivided. If a person who has only a share in property mortgages or joins in mortgaging such property, his doing so does not affect the shares of his co-sharers, but the mortgage is good and valid as regards his own share. MAUNG THA NU v. MAUNG KYA ZAN, L.B.R. 1903—1904, Vol. II, 167. (L.B.R. 1872—1892, 378, L.B.R. 1893—1900, 65, L.R.I.A. 106, 24 B. 385, F.) [R., L.B.R. 1907—1908, 128, L.B.R. 1905—1906, 66, 14 Bur. (53)—Joint grant—Mortgage of undivided share before division—Share falling to another's lot—Effect.—Where one of several persons, to whom land has been granted jointly, mortgages certain specified portion as representing his undivided share in the whole, and the said portion falls to the share of another person in a subsequent division, the latter acquires a complete title to that portion as against both the mortgagee and mortgagor, provided the division was not affected by fraud. PULLAMMA v. PRADOSHAM, 18 M. 316 = 5 M.L.J. 148.

(54)—Mortgage of share of joint holding—Part of mortgaged land already alienated at date of mortgage—Liability of mortgagor to make good deficit from remainder of holding to which he has subsequently succeeded.—Where in a joint holding consisting of a number of plots, one of the sharers mortgages his share mentioning the numbers of specific plots, all that the mortgagee obtains is a right to a partition; if in the partition, these specific plots fall to the share of the mortgagor, the mortgagee will obtain such plots; if not, he would be entitled to be compensated by the substitution of other land falling to the mortgagor's share. If a person mortgages property which is not his, and to which he has no title, and subsequently acquires a good title to it, he is bound to carry out the mortgage. This is a well known principle of equity. But if he mortgages a portion of his own share of a joint holding, which he has already alienated, he is no more bound, under the law of estoppel, or the equitable principle quoted above, to make the amount good out of the other half share to which he has succeeded subsequently, than he would be if the two plots had been entirely separate before the mortgage. BABU RAI v. NATHU, 32 P.R. 1900. [R., 89 P.R. 1903.]

(55)—Mortgagor—Imposition of easement by mortgagor incompetent to deteriorate mortgaged property—Security rendered insufficient—Onus.—A mortgagor in possession is incompetent without the sanction of the mortgagee, to do an act which may turn out to be destructive or permanently injurious to the mortgaged property. The validity of such an act, must be proved by the mortgagor or his representative in interest who must also establish that the act did not deteriorate the security. BHAGWAN DEVI v. BUNYADI KHANUM, 85 P.R. 1902.

(56)—Mortgage to pay off earlier mortgage—Security turning out invalid—Additional security, equitable title to—Payment of mortgage—Extinction of charge—Presumption.—Where money is lent upon a mortgage of immoveable property to pay off an earlier mortgage, the lender must be presumed to have lent it only upon the security expressed in the bond and stipulated for by him; equity cannot give an additional security, when and because the security relied upon turns out to be bad, as regards a portion of the lands included therein. Where money was borrowed upon mortgage of immoveable property for paying off an earlier mortgage, and the mortgagor claimed to be the owner of the property, and there was no intermediate incumbrance, it must be presumed that the money was intended to be applied in paying

NEPEAN*, 26 C. 1, P.C. = 2 C.W.N. 665.

(58)—Actual payment of mortgage debt necessary for freeing property mortgaged from charge.—A mortgagor, while still maintaining the mortgaged property for himself, cannot by any act of his other than actual payment of the mortgage-debt get that property freed from the charge which he himself has created. (5 C.L.R. 227, R.) A mortgagor, by his purchase from the first mortgagee under a power of sale, cannot defeat the title of the second mortgagee. (Otter v. Lord Vaux, 2 K. and J. 650, 17 C. 32, R.) The mortgaged property still remains liable to a fresh sale, when a mortgagor-judgment-debtor himself is the purchaser at a previous execution-sale under a mortgage-decree, and the decree remains unsatisfied. RAGHUNATH SAHAY SINGH v. LALJI SINGH, 23 C. 397. [F., 25 A. 371 = 23 A.W.N. 75; R., 5 C.L.J. 95 = 11 C.W.N. 284]

(59)—Proprietor of an estate and Hindu widow or shebait, distinguished—Mortgagor and mortgagee—Interest of mortgagee.—A Hindu widow or a shebait must be held to represent the estate completely, as otherwise there could be no one to represent such estate. But the same thing cannot be said of the proprietor of an estate after he has mortgaged it. The mortgagee can always be ascertained; very often his interest in the estate may be much greater than that left in the mortgagor, or, where after a decree it was no part of the mortgagor's interest to protect the incumbrance, the interest of the mortgagor and the mortgagee are not identical. The balance of justice and expediency, therefore, is decidedly in favor of not allowing a mortgagee to be bound by a decree passed against a mortgagor, after the date of the mortgage. The provisions of the rent law do not furnish clear reasons against that view. A decree for rent of a tenure obtained against the registered tenants binds an unregistered transferee of the same, who can show no sufficient cause for not registering his name, and may be enforced by sale of the tenure. (12 B.L.R. 484, R.). But whether any such sale was insufficient conformity with the rent law to be operative in annulling a prior mortgage, or other incumbrance, must have to be determined in the presence of the party claiming the benefit of

(60)—Mortgage of hak, sale of property in execution of decree on—Absence of Collector's certificate to mortgagee under Act XXIII of 1871 s. 6, effect of, on purchaser's title.—This suit was instituted with the permission of the Collector for a declaration of the plaintiff's right to be the holder of a desaigiri hak against the defendant who was the purchaser at an auction sale in execution of a decree passed in a suit instituted by a mortgagee against the plaintiff, as the representative of the original mortgagor to enforce the mortgage-debt by sale of the hak. Plaintiff urged that the proceedings in the suit by the mortgagee took place without the certificate of the Collector as required by s. 6 of Act XXIII of 1871 and therefore conferred no title on the defendant, and it was held that in the previous suit the Court had clearly no jurisdiction, as regards the subject matter, to entertain the suit, and the decree was therefore null and void and could not constitute the basis of any title in the purchaser or preclude the plaintiff from maintaining his right to the hak as a life holder thereof. *VASANJI HARI-BHAI v. It may be noted in this place that stamp-duty and penalty appear to have been levied on a number of documents executed in the time of the Burmese Government. If this is really so, the District Judge will have to take measure for the refund of the amounts improperly exacted on documents executed before the introduction and for the setting aside of any proceedings that may have been incorrectly instituted in the matter. *MAUNG PON GYAW v. If it is their intention, that interest should continue to be paid even after the due date, the amount accruing due may be recovered as interest. If such is not their intention, it may be recovered as damages, so long as the principal remains unpaid. (67)—Mortgage decree—Prior Revenue sale—Subsequent suit by mortgagee for lien over balance of sale proceeds attached by mortgagor's creditors—Act VIII of 1859, s. 7.—A suit by the mortgagee to establish his mortgage debt and his lien on the mortgaged properties alone against the mortgagor would not, under s. 7 of Act VIII of 1859 (old Civ. Pro. Code), bar a subsequent suit by him against certain attaching creditors of the mortgagor for a declaration of his lien over the balance of money realised by sale of the properties for arrears of revenue, though such revenue sale had been effected at the time of the first suit. The decree in the first suit declaring the lien on the mortgaged properties would cover the balance of sale money in the Collector's hands, such money representing the properties as between the mortgagee and mortgagor's attaching creditors. *KRISTO DASS KUNDU v. The mortgage-deed provided that in the event of the sale of the interests of the mortgagor, the mortgagee could take the amount lent by him from the surplus sale proceeds by throwing up his lease. The mortgaged property was sold as contemplated. Held, that the mortgage deed gave an option to the mortgagee to throw up his lease and claim immediate payment out of the sale proceeds. Consequently, before the mortgagor could withdraw the surplus sale proceeds from the Court, it was necessary for him to give notice to the mortgagee of his intention to do so, in order to enable him to determine whether he would take advantage of the particular clause in the mortgage deed or continue to hold on under the mortgage. *BHOOBUN JOY ACHARJEA v. The mere fact that the mortgagee kept the money idle in his hands cannot absolve him from his liability to the claim of the mortgagor for interest. [R., 6 O.C. 135.] A tender of only part of what is admittedly due is bad and ineffectual. The rule laid down in Dixon v. Clark. (71)—Prior mortgage on property—Notice of sale by mortgagee to mortgagor—Subsequent mortgage—Offer to redeem—No notice to subsequent mortgagee by prior mortgagee—Delay in selling—Rescission of notice—Injunction to restrain sale by prior mortgagee—Prior mortgagee's rights.—The plaintiffs in this case were subsequent mortgagees (3-9-1891) and the defendants' prior mortgagees (1885) of the same property. Under the power of sale contained in their mortgage, the defendants gave notice of sale to the mortgagors on 31-8-1891, but they did not proceed any further in the matter. The plaintiffs alleged that, on 18-11-1892, they offered to transfer their mortgage to the defendants or to join with them in selling the property, that in case the defendants did not accept any of these proposals, they requested the defendants to render an account of the sum due to them in order that their mortgage might be redeemed, but that the defendants did not comply with any of these proposals, and that the defendants, in collusion with the mortgagors, for the purpose of defrauding the plaintiffs, had advertised the property for sale on 27-4-1893 without giving notice of sale to them. The plaintiffs, therefore, brought the present suit, offering to redeem the defendants (as prior mortgagees) and for obtaining an injunction restraining the defendants from selling the mortgaged property. Held, (1) that no notice need be given to the plaintiffs, they being assigns who must take things in the estate in which they find them, and they cannot claim to alter rights which accrued before they had any authority to interfere. Proper notice having been given to the mortgagors on 31-8-1891. (i.e.) previously to the time when the plaintiffs had any interest in the equity of redemption, any further notice would not be required to be given to any one, who at that time was not an assign, for enabling the defendants to sell under that notice. (2) and that the evidence in the case showed that the plaintiffs were never willing and ready to redeem the defendant's mortgage, because they had not the money in hand and because they had to make arrangements for obtaining it, and (3) that an injunction could not be granted in this case, because the mortgage-deed in question provided that "the remedies of the mortgagors, their heirs, administrators, and assigns in respect of any breach of the clauses or provisions lastly hereinbefore contained, (i.e., with regard to notices and sales) or of any impropriety and irregularity whatever in any such sale shall be in damages." With reference to the contention advanced on behalf of the plaintiffs that, since there was a long delay between 31-8-1891 (when the notice was given by the defendants to the mortgagors) and the actual sale, that notice was rescinded and a fresh notice was necessary, the Court held that, there having been no actual withdrawal of the notice of 31-8-1891, the defendants were not bound to give a fresh notice before 27-4-1893, when they last brought the property to sale. The mere fact of a long delay taking place between the maturing of the notice of sale and the actual sale does not make a fresh notice necessary. MUNCHERJI EURDOONJI MEHTA v. NOOR MAHOMEDBHOY JAIRAJBHOY PIRBHOY, 17 B. 711.

(72)—Mortgage—Prior and subsequent incumbrancers—Suit by prior mortgagee, to which puisne mortgagee was no party—Auction purchase of first mortgage decree—Subsequent assignment of first mortgagee's right—Redemption by second mortgagee—Apportionment of amount.—In a suit brought by the first mortgagees of certain properties, to which the subsequent incumbrancers were no parties, a decree for sale was passed. This decree was attached in execution of certain money decree which a third person had obtained against the first mortgagees. He himself bought this property at Court auction and transferred the same. The second mortgagee subsequently brought a suit for sale on his mortgage and obtained a decree. But he was not permitted to bring the property to sale by reason of the prior mortgage. He thereupon assigned his decree. The assignee of the second mortgagee brought the present suit for redemption of the first mortgage. After the institution of the suit the first mortgagees conveyed to another all their rights under the mortgage and the decree obtained on their mortgage, and this transferee was also made a party to the suit. Held that the second mortgagee was entitled to redeem the first mortgage on payment of the whole amount found due upon the first mortgage with interest. Held further that the assignee of the entire rights of the first mortgagees was entitled to the whole amount which the second mortgagee had to pay for the redemption of the first mortgage with the exception of the purchase-money which had to be paid by the purchaser in auction sale held in execution of the decree for sale, which the representatives of the auction purchaser would be enti-

(73)—Hindu Law—Mortgage by widow—Mother's right to maintenance—Possession of mother—Notice to mortgagee—Right of mortgagee.—The plaintiff, as assignee of a mortgage executed by a widow of her husband's property, sued the widow and her mother-in-law for possession of the mortgaged property. The mother (second defendant in the suit), claimed a right to hold possession of the land unaffected by the mortgage executed by the widow. The lower Court, on the supposition that there was no other property out of which the second defendant could be maintained, held, that possession should not be given to the plaintiff until a proper arrangement was made by him in respect of her maintenance. Held, on appeal, that the lower Court was in error in making the second defendant's right to remain in possession dependent on there being no other property. It was unnecessary to decide whether, if there was such other property available for the purpose, the second defendant should be removed from possession. The mortgagees having lent the money with knowledge of her possession in virtue of her claim to maintenance, she must not be compelled to accept from the plaintiff maintenance in some other form in lieu of the land. *RACHAWA v. The mere assertion of his claim by a mortgagee, based upon his purchase of the equity of redemption from a person having no title to it, could not in any way affect the right of the real owner of the equity. PANDU v. (81)—Mortgagee's right to—Sub-mortgagee's right on redemption by original mortgagor—Notice—Privity between original mortgagor and sub mortgagee.—A mortgagee may make a sub-mortgage of his interest in the mortgaged property. There is privity between a mortgagor and his sub-mortgagee. If the original mortgagor, at the time he paid the mortgage money to his mortgagee, had no notice of the existence of a sub-mortgage, the sub-mortgage is extinguished and the sub-mortgagee has no claim upon the original mortgagor and cannot hold the property against him; but if the original mortgagor had such notice, the mortgage-debt due to the sub-mortgagee is not discharged by the payment to the original mortgagee, and the sub-mortgagee is entitled to hold the mortgaged property, until his sub-mortgage is redeemed. NGA KYE v. (81-a)—Suit for redemption—Plea, conversion of mortgage into a sale—Burden of Proof—Map showing defendant as owner, production of—No sufficient indicia of ownership.—The plaintiff respondent brought a suit for redemption. The defendant-appellant admitted the mortgage, but contended that it had been converted into a sale one year after the mortgage. There was no evidence for the defence except a map showing the defendant's name as the owner. Held, that the burden of proof lay on the defendant and that she had failed to discharge it. (1 L.B.R. 215, F.; 8 B.L.R. 189, D.) The mere production of a map showing the defendant as the owner was not enough to shift the burden of proof as it was not a sufficient indication of title to the property. MA DAN DA v. (82)—Mortgage—Prior and subsequent mortgagees—Subsequent mortgagees paying off part of prior mortgage—Suit for partition between subsequent and prior mortgagees.—The joint owners of three houses granted a usufructuary mortgage thereof to D.C. and P.C. and put the mortgagees in possession. Subsequently the mortgagors granted a simple mortgage of the same property to other mortgagees. Part of the mortgage money of the second mortgage was left with the mortgagees for the discharge of the first mortgage. The second mortgagees took part of that money and paid off the interest of one of the mortgagees in the former (usufructuary) mortgage. (88)—Revenue arrears—Advertisement of mootah for sale—Principal and surety—Kararnamah—Mortgage—Defeasance, Instrument of.—A mootah being advertised for sale, by order of the Collector, for arrears due to the Government, the proprietor applied to a party to become security for the payment thereof by certain instalments; and thereupon deposited a Sunnud and Arzi in the hands of a third party, and executed a kararnamah or agreement, by which the transfer of the mootah to the guarantee was made absolute, in case of default by the proprietor in payment of the instalments. The party becoming security at the same time executed a counter-kararnamah or deed of defeasance, agreeing to give up the mootah when satisfied out of the rents &c., the principal sum, and interest, which he might advance on account of the security. Default having been made in payment of the first instalment by the proprietor, the guarantee obtained possession of the Sunnud and Arzi; and, upon a further default by the proprietor, made himself registered as owner, and obtained possession of the mootah, insisting, notwithstanding the counter-kararnamah, that his title was absolute. On a suit brought by the original proprietor, for possession of the mootah and payment of the surplus, after satisfying the advances made on account of the arrears, the Privy Council held that the transaction was in the nature of a mortgage, and that the party to whom the kararnamah was executed was only entitled to retain possession of the mootah until he had reimbursed himself, out of the rents and profits, the sums advanced by him on account of his security, the counter-kararnamah, though not registered, being a valid instrument, and operating as a deed of defeasance to the title acquired under the first agreement. SRI RAJAH KAKERLAPOODY JAGGANADHA JAGGAPUTTY RAZ v. (89)—Mortgagor and mortgagee—Failure of mortgagor's widow to pay revenue—Deposit of money by mortgagee to prevent sale—Action by mortgagee under Act I of 1845—Decree against widow, executable only against her interest.—The owner of a talook having mortgaged it, died leaving a childless widow S.K. who continued in possession of the talook. Respondent was the daughter of the mortgagor by a previous marriage. The mortgagee died shortly afterwards leaving S. G. his widow who became entitled to the rights of her husband as the mortgagee of the talook S. K. having failed to pay the revenue due to Government, the talook would have been put up for sale and sold under Act I of 1845 if S.G., in order to save it from sale, had not borrowed and deposited the necessary amount to discharge his debt. On a decree having been obtained by S. G. against S.K., the rights and interests of the former under that decree had been transferred to the appellant. The question raised on this appeal was whether the appellant was entitled to charge on the talook and to have it sold in its entirety to pay the amount of the money paid to the Government as revenue. Their Lordships of the Judicial Committee were of opinion that what they had to decide was not whether such a charge originally existed or whether subsisted at present, but whether appellant could enforce such a charge in the present suit. The question was not whether one who pays the arrear of the rent does not acquire thereby a charge on the talook which he saves from sale, but whether, if he seek to enforce that right, he must not do so in a suit properly framed for that purpose and not merely in a suit confined to a personal remedy against the person in possession of the talook. Their Lordships held, concurring with the opinion of the High Court, that where the person who had paid the arrears sought repayment only under s. 9 of Act I of 1845, as against the person in possession of the talook having but a limited interest therein, and confined his suit to that object, the decree so obtained against the person in possession can only be made effectual against the property of that person, including such interest as she had in the talook. Their Lordships wished it to be understood that the above ruling should not be taken to impair the general rule that in a suit brought by third person, the object of which is to recover or to charge an estate of which a Hindu widow is the proprietress, she could, as defendant, represent and protect the estate, as well in respect of her own as of the reversionary interest. NUGENDER CHUNDER GHOSE v. mortgagee for balance and costs.—Where a decree of the High Court directed that the plaintiffs should recover a certain amount with interest by sale of the "hypothecated property" mentioning the same by name, the balance of money due after the sale could not be recovered by executing the decree either against the mortgagor's person or his other property; but there was nothing, however, in the decree to prevent the decree-holders from recovering their costs in the suit by sale of property of the judgment-debtor other than that hypothecated. HAR NARAIN v. (92)—Conditional mortgage—Liability of mortgagee for collection of rents, etc.—In a conditional sale-deed, provision at the rate of 15 annas per cent. per mensem, was made for interest on the sale consideration, which interest was recoverable by the conditional vendees, if the profits of the land did not meet it, in any way they liked, with interest on such interest. The management of the estate was to be by servants appointed by the vendees and the vendor. Out of the profits realised a certain fixed sum was to be paid to the servants employed for the management of the estate, and the vendees should not be responsible for the rents not collected, and the vendor should pay rent on the sir land held by him. In a suit for recovery of interest together with interest thereon, alleging that the profits of the land were not sufficient to meet the interest, the High Court in remanding the case, observed that in the case of the vendor's agents being associated with the vendee's agent in the management of the estate or in the case of the entire management being in the hands of the vendor, the vendee could not be held liable for losses. If, on the other hand, the vendees had the entire control of the estate they would be responsible for the deficit. In the latter case, the items of the account should be gone into, and it should be determined for what particular sums the vendee was liable. With regard to charging the vendor with the payment of his servant's wages, it was necessary to find, in the first place, that the sums were paid, and, secondly, whether they were paid after the dismissal of the servants or after the vendor had intimated that they should not be paid. On these points depended the question whether the vendor could be charged with such sums. As to the rents on the vendor's sir land, the vendor had to pay these rents into the general account and the appellant could not be charged in the account for their non-relaization. MADAN GOPAL v. MANZUR BEGAM, A.W.N. 1881, 10.

(93)—Purchase by mortgagee—Keeping mortgage alive.—B and S jointly gave the appellant, on different dates, in the same year, two mortgages of the same property with possession. B sold subsequently his moiety of such share to the appellant, his moiety of the mortgage-money being part of the consideration money.

S, thereupon, sued the appellant to enforce his right of pre-emption, in respect of such moiety and obtained a decree. In order to raise the money for the purchase, he gave the respondents a bond on which he hypothecated the whole share. Subsequently, S sold a moiety of the share to the appellant, the remaining moiety of the mortgage-money being part of the consideration. After this, the respondents sued on their bond claiming the enforcement of their lien on the share. To this suit, the appellant was a party, and it was defended by him. The respondents obtained a decree in the suit, in execution of which they caused the share to be brought to sale, and purchasing it themselves. The appellant thereupon sued, claiming from the respondent's possession of a moiety of the share, under the prior mortgages to him, on the ground that the sale of a moiety to him, the consideration for which had been a moiety of the mortgage-money, had been declared invalid in the respondents' suit. Held, that, as in the suit brought by the respondents, the appellant did not set up his mortgages, as a matter of defence, and could not have done so, it being clear that he intended to absorb his interests as mortgagee in those of purchaser, and there being nothing to indicate that he contemplated keeping his incumbrance alive, the suit of the appellant was properly dismissed. FAZAL v. (94)—Cause of action—Mortgage—Direction to discharge mortgagor's debts—Breach—Effect.—The non-payment or the incomplete payment by a mortgagee of the debts of the mortgagor, according to the stipulation in the mortgage-deed will not be a cause of action for the mortgagor to sue and recover the mortgage-money from the mortgagee, especially when no condition was to be found in the deed or elsewhere as to the time or mode in which these liabilities undertaken by the mortgagee were to be discharged. It is no concern of the mortgagor how or when his debts were paid for him so long as they have been cleared off and no liability for them in any way or to any extent remains. HAR NARAIN SINGH v. Where, therefore, a zamindar having made a usufructuary mortgage of his zamindari together with his sir lands, lost his zamindari rights and became an ex-proprietary tenant of the sir, held that the mortgage did not become ineffectual as regards the sir, but took effect as a mortgage of the ex-proprietary rights. (15 A. 219, 16 A. 398, R) [R., 17 C.P.L.R. 33.] In such a case as is mentioned above the ex-proprietary tenant cannot, to the prejudice of the mortgagee, surrender to the zamindar his ex-proprietary interest. SHAM DAS v. (98)—Sir lands, hypothecation of—Purchase in Court auction—Rights of purchaser—Ex-proprietary tenant.—M hypothecated to the plaintiff's assignor his zemindari rights including sir lands; subsequently M gave a possessory mortgage of his sir lands to the defendant. Plaintiff's assignor sued on his mortgage and obtained a decree. He purchased the property in auction sale in execution of his decree and assigned the property to the plaintiff. The plaintiff sued to eject the defendant from the sir lands. Held that the plea of the defendant that the plaintiff was not entitled to possession by virtue of his purchase, which he alleged only gave him the proprietary rights of the mortgagor and not the occupancy right in his sir, which was with the mortgagor after the sale, was not tenable. Whether or not the mortgagor might resist the plaintiff's entry on such a ground, the defendant could not; as against him, the plaintiff had established a good and sufficient title as owner of the land. MOMIN ALI v. (99)—Mortgage of sir land—Partition of village—Mortgaged portion going into other hands—Rights of mortgagee and of person entitled to mortgaged property under partition.—A co-sharer in a village mortgaged a portion of his sir-land to the father of the respondents, and gave him possession. Subsequently the land in question was transferred to the patti of the appellants, in a partition in the village. But the mortgagee continued to be in possession. In course of time, the proprietary right of the mortgagor were put up for sale in execution of a decree and were purchased by the mortgagee, the respondent's father, and two others. The other two auction-purchasers proceeded to dispossess the mortgagee of their share of the sir land of which he was in possession under his mortgage. Upon this, the mortgagee sued the other two for his mortgage-debt minus a portion thereof equal to the proprietary interest he had himself acquired in his mortgagor's estate, and got a decree, in execution of which he purchased the sir land which had been mortgaged to him. In the course of these sale proceedings the appellants, to whose patti the land had been transferred, objected to the attachment and sale of the land under the provisions of s. 246 of Act VIII of 1859, setting up their proprietary right and denying that of the auction-purchasers mentioned above. This objection being disallowed, and a regular suit to save the land from sale having also failed, the appellants took proceedings in the Revenue Court on the basis of the partition, and obtained a decree for rent against the respondents, the sons of the mortgagee, as though they were tenants only of the land, and an order of ejectment from the same as being mere tenants-at-will. Upon this, the respondents sued the appellants in the Civil Court for a declaration of their proprietary right to the land. Held, that the respondents had, by virtue of the auction sale mentioned above, and of the now final decree in the suit arising out of the proceedings held under s. 246 of Act VIII of 1859, become the absolute owners of the sir land, and consequently the proceedings in the Revenue Court must be deemed to be inoperative and invalid. *RAMADHIN SINGH v. Subsequently, the mortgagors sold their shares to the lambardar of the village, who obstructed the mortgagees' enjoyment of the profits. After a period of 5 years in which they enjoyed no profits, the mortgagees sued to recover the mortgage-debt with interest at 24 per cent. alleging dispossession by the mortgagors' representative, the lambardar. Held that a cause of action had accrued to the mortgagees entitling them to maintain the present suit, according to the terms of the mortgage-deed. *KHUSHALI RAM v. in a village and the mortgagee sued on his mortgage and obtained a decree for sale. Subsequent to this, the father alone re-mortgaged a portion of the share to A and R who, in their turn borrowed from the respondents, pledging as security for the loan their rights as mortgagees. The first mortgagee sold the property in execution of his decree, and A purchased it at public auction and sold it to B in private sale. The respondents sued to recover their debt with interest from A, the obligor of the bond and from B the former's vendee at the private sale, praying to charge their debt on the estate in the hands of B. Held that the decree of the first Court dismissing this part of their claim, and giving them a decree against A and against the estate of his co-debtor R only, was a proper decree, the remedy thus given being the only remedy that remained to the respondents after the execution sale under the first mortgage, which sale put an end to the mortgage rights mortgaged to the respondent. *BHOLI SINGH v. All the three obtained decrees on their respective mortgages, and K, the second mortgagee transferred his decree to the respondents. The appellants alleged that they brought to sale the portion mortgaged to them in execution and had, on purchasing it, filed a receipt for the liquidation of the decree. But it was found that such property was not sold in execution of the appellant's decree but in execution of the decree on the mortgage to J and others. The respondents contended that the appellants were bound to satisfy their debt. Held, that the share in dispute having been sold and purchased in execution of the decree of J and others, the claim of the respondents should be decreed. The appellants' decree had been extinguished, but without the enforcement of the lien, and that lien therefore passed out of practical existence and the appellants took the estate subject to the respondents' lien which was next in (106)—Prior and subsequent mortgagees—Purchase by prior mortgagee—Suit for sale by subsequent mortgagee ignoring lien of prior mortgagee.—In a suit for sale upon a mortgage, certain defendants were impleaded as being "incumbrancers and also subsequent purchasers," but the plaint made no mention of any person as holding a prior incumbrance on the property affected by the suit. Two of the defendants above alluded to pleaded that they had a lien on the property prior to that of the plaintiff, and that the suit ought to be dismissed as no offer to redeem them had been made. On the day fixed for the hearing of the suit, the plaintiff filed a petition, denying that the property, the subject-matter of the suit, was mortgaged to the said defendants, but offering to pay off the mortgage if it was found to be valid and prior to that of the plaintiff. Held, that, under the above circumstances, the Court below were wrong in dismissing the suit. BALDEO SAHAI v. NANAK CHAND, A.W.N. 1901, 68. (12 A. 548, D.)

(107)—Covenant by mortgagee to pay off a prior mortgage—Breach of such covenant by second mortgagee—Suit by mortgagor for compensation—Measure of damages.—On a mortgage of immovable property, the mortgagor left with the mortgagee Rs. 200 in order that he might discharge a small prior incumbrance on the property. The second mortgagee did not pay off the prior incumbrance, but kept the money in his pocket. Some years afterwards the first mortgagee brought a suit against the mortgagor to recover his debt, which had by that time reached a sum far in excess of the original two hundred rupees, and obtained a decree. Held that the mortgagor was entitled to recover from the second mortgagee the full amount of the decree obtained against him by the first mortgagee. RAGHUNATH RAI v. BRIJMOHAN SINGH, A.W.N. 1901, 14.

(108)—Purchase by mortgagee of property mortgaged at sale under a decree of a third person, the mortgagee's lien being notified at sale—Suit by mortgagee subsequently to recover whole of mortgage-debt by sale of remaining moiety.—A mortgagee, who had bought in a moiety of the property mortgaged to him at an auction sale in execution of a money decree held by a third person, at which auction-sale the incumbrance created by his mortgage was notified, could not subsequently sue for the satisfaction of the whole of the mortgage money due to him by sale of the remaining moiety of the mortgaged property, without taking into account the moiety already purchased by him. SUMERA KUAR v. BHAGWANT SINGH, A.W.N. 1895, 1. [F., 19 A. 196; D., 18 A. 81; Cons., 22 A. 284, F.B.; R., 20 A. 23, F.B.]

(109)—Mortgage-decree—Execution-purchaser—Second mortgage—Sale—Right of former purchaser to resist.—In 1870, R mortgaged his property to S. The latter got a decree on the mortgage in 1874. In 1879, he executed his decree; and the property was purchased by the defendant in this suit. In the meanwhile in 1876, R and S jointly executed a bond in favour of the plaintiff in this suit mortgaging the rights and interests in the same property which had been the subject of the former bond and decree. Now, the plaintiff sought in this suit to bring the property to sale. Held that the defendant, the purchaser in execution of S's decree, could not resist the sale by reason of his purchase. At the time he purchased the property it was liable to the mortgage created in favour of the plaintiff by both R and S, and, as purchaser, the defendant can only take it subject to this liability, for, it was a liability which neither the judgment-debtor whose interests he bought, nor the decree-holder at whose instance the sale was made, could resist. RAMTAHAL RAM v. KEWAL RAI, A.W.N. 1883, 233.

(110)—Mortgage—Covenant to repay if possession not given—Acceptance of part performance—Right to sue.—A usufructuary mortgage deed dated 1869 contained a stipulation to the effect that, if the mortgagor failed to put the mortgagees in possession, the latter might recover the mortgage-money. The mortgagees obtained possession of all the property except a small part and they were in possession till 1881 when the present suit was brought by them. In this suit they claimed to recover the mortgage money on the ground that there had been a breach of the contract, as they had not obtained possession of the whole property. Held, that the mortgagees were not at liberty to bring the suit. They could not, at one and the same time, avail themselves of the benefit of the contract and of the remedy provided for its breach. LACHMAN DAS v. BALDEO SINGH, A.W.N. 1883, 91. [R., 31 A. 325=6 A.L.J. 247.]

(111)—Extinguishment of prior mortgage—Subsequent mortgage.—The father of the plaintiff gave a lease of certain villages to G, and on the 24th June, 1869, the said G, agreed to pay rent in respect of such villages by certain instalments; and as a security for the faithful discharge of the conditions of the kabuliyat in respect of his payment of rent, he hypothecated his village K. According to the terms of the kabuliyat, so long as G remained the lessee of the father of the plaintiff, and so long as the kabuliyat lasted, so long there would subsist the security that he had given for the faithful performance of the agreement under the kabuliyat to pay the rent. G fell into arrears. The plaintiff, who had succeeded his father, brought a suit in the Revenue Court upon the kabuliyat, and got a money decree, which alone the Revenue Court could have given, for the arrears of rent due to him from G. He put his decree into execution and obtained part satisfaction thereof, and a balance remained due from G. In 1871, G took from the defendant a loan of Rs. 300, and as security for the loan, he hypothecated to the defendant the village K, that was charged under the bond of 1869 to the plaintiff's father. In 1876, G, having been called upon to pay up the balance of the amount due under the decree of the Revenue Court, entered into a fresh arrangement in respect of such balance as was due and the interest due thereon, and he gave the plaintiff a second bond hypothecating the village K. Held, that there was no new contract in 1876 superseding the old contract of 1869, and that the plaintiff had no wish to abrogate and put an end to the contract of 1869 and that therefore the security of 1869 was in existence and was not superseded by the transaction of 1876. RAMZAN ALI v. JAGAT SINGH, A.W.N. 1886, 18.

(112)—Lease of mortgaged property to mortgagor—Subsequent sale of equity of redemption—Removal of portions of mortgaged property by mortgagor—Suit for damages against mortgagee—Maintainability.—The suit house was mortgaged with possession to the defendants who subsequently leased it to the mortgagors. The plaintiff afterwards purchased the equity of redemption at an execution sale. The mortgagors who remained in possession as lessees removed portions of the house. Thereupon the plaintiff sued the mortgagees for redemption and for damages for removal of such portions. The claim for redemption was decreed and the claim for damages was dismissed on the ground that the mortgagees had not by any act or omission caused the destruction of the house and also because they were not in possession but only the mortgagors, who remained in possession as tenants of the mortgagees. BAQAR ALI v. NISAR HUSAIN, A.W.N. 1885, 262.

(113)—First and second mortgages—Subsequent sale of equity of redemption to first mortgagee—Merger—Decree on second mortgage—

Sale by second mortgagee—Rights of first mortgagee.—Where a first mortgagee on certain property subsequently purchases the equity of redemption from the mortgagor, he does not lose the benefit of his prior charge when the money due therein is set-off against the sale consideration. And where a second mortgagee on the same property, in execution of a decree on his mortgage, brings the mortgaged property to sale, the first mortgagee is entitled to resist the sale of the property until his prior charge is satisfied. PARSI v. GIRAND SINGH, A.W.N. 1885, 155. [Cons., 22 C. 33; R., 13 A. 432.]

(114)—First and second mortgage—Decree on first mortgage and purchase of mortgaged property by the mortgagee—Merger—Priority.—The defendants, who held a prior mortgage of the suit property under a registered deed dated 20th September, 1878, sued on the bond obtained a decree and purchased the mortgaged property by private sale on 3rd September 1881. The plaintiffs, in execution of a decree which they had obtained on a mortgage of the same property, dated 17th July 1880, brought the property to sale and bought it themselves on 20th July 1883. They then brought the present suit to recover possession of the property from the defendants, alleging that the defendants' sale of 3rd September 1881 was collusive, and that the defendants had acknowledged in the sale deed their liability to pay the mortgage debt of 17th July 1880. It was found by the lower appellate Court that, when the defendants secured the deed of sale in 1881, they had agreed therein to pay the mortgage-money due to the plaintiffs under their deed of July 1880. Held that the plaintiffs were entitled to recover possession of the suit property from the defendants. Although the defendants' mortgage and their purchase were prior to those of the plaintiffs, yet it was clear from the terms of their sale deed that their mortgage merged in the purchase, and that they bought the property subject to the payment of the plaintiffs' mortgage upon it, the latter debt being taken account of in the sale consideration. They had therefore, bought the property subject to its re-sale to satisfy plaintiffs' mortgage. NATHU v. BINDRABAN, A.W.N. 1885, 130.

(115)—Prior mortgagee—Subsequent purchaser—Notice.—The right of a prior incumbrancer to recover his money by bringing the mortgaged property to sale cannot be defeated or prejudicially affected by the simple fact of a third person taking a conveyance without notice of such prior incumbrance. Per Straight, J.—Where a person hypothecates his property to another and subsequently sells it to a third person, the mortgagee's right to have the whole property brought to sale is not affected by the subsequent sale, whatever might have been the rights and equities of the vendor and vendee inter se. Per Mahmood, J.—The equitable doctrine of the marshalling of securities which has been formulated in s. 81, Transfer of Property Act, is

(116)—First and second mortgages—Suit by first mortgagee—Second mortgagee not made party—Effect.—To render a decree for foreclosure or sale effectual, the mortgagee must make subsequent purchasers or encumbrancers parties to the suit, at least if he have notice of them, or if circumstances exist which should have put him on inquiry as to the claim by them of an interest in the mortgaged property, and, where they are not made parties, they are entitled to redeem the first mortgage. JOHARI MAL v. HAR SARUP, A.W.N. 1887, 97. (14 M.L.A. 101, 5 M. 184, Rel. on.)

(117)—Ancient claims to land—Evidence.—When land has become valuable in the course of time there is a great temptation to put forward ancient claims to it and to support those claims up by unscrupulous means, or to set up claims that are altogether fictitious. Need for clear proof of ancient claims to land after long undisturbed possession. Renewal of old mortgage in favour of claimants under original mortgagor. MAUNG SHWE KYU v. MAUNG AUNG GYI, U.B.R. 1892—1896, Vol. II, 551.

(118)—Mortgage of occupancy holding—Mortgagor denying validity of mortgage of his occupancy holding against mortgagor—Oudh Rent Act, s. 5—Estoppel—Possession, Suit for.—The first defendant, who held certain land as a tenant with a right of occupancy under s. 5 of the Oudh Rent Act, gave an usufructuary mortgage of his holding to the plaintiff and put him in possession. Subsequently he dispossessed the plaintiff and made over possession to the second defendant. The plaintiff brought a suit for possession of the land against both the defendants on the basis of his mortgage. The first defendant's defence was that the mortgage, being a transfer of an occupancy holding, was illegal and conferred no right upon the plaintiff. Held, that the mortgage of his occupancy holding by the first defendant to the plaintiff was opposed to the provisions of s. 5, Oudh Rent Act of 1836, and that he was not estopped from denying its validity. BENI MADHO v. KALI PERSHAD SINGH, 6 O.C. 331. [R., 11 O.C. 345.]

The plaintiffs redeemed a prior mortgage on the property and became

entitled to possession of the property, but instead of taking possession they leased the property to the defendants. The latter executed a kabuliat on January 22nd, 1894, by which, after reciting the deeds of June 1891 and August 1893, they undertook to pay as rent interest at the rate of 12 annas per cent. per mensem upon the deeds along with the amount of the Government revenue. This kabuliat provided that, if the instalments were not paid, the mortgagees might sue for the same and recover them from the mortgaged property, etc., etc. In the present suit, the plaintiffs claimed the principal sums secured by the deeds together with interest thereon and the amount of land-revenue paid by them. The defendants' contention was that the mortgage-deeds of 1891 and 1893 were quite distinct from the kabuliat of 1894 and that the mortgagees could not recover in this suit any sum payable under kabuliat, because a suit on the kabuliat would lie only in a Revenue Court and that in any case mortgagees were not entitled to recover more than 3 years arrears of any sums payable under the kabuliat. Held, that the mortgagees were entitled in the suit to recover from the mortgagors all sums payable to them under the two mortgage-deeds of 1891 and 1893 as modified by the contract for the reduction of interest contained in the kabuliat and were not bound to sue upon the kabuliat in a Court of Revenue. SHEO RATAN SINGH v. (120)—Held by banker against customer—No direction given by customer to banker to charge mortgage amount against current account—Liability of customer to pay interest on mortgage—Concurrent findings of two Indian Courts on a question of fact—Practice of swelling up record before Judicial Committee with irrelevant matter condemned.—The Court of a Subordinate Judge directed accounts to be taken between the plaintiff and defendant, who stood in the relation of customer and banker. There were objections to ten items charged against the plaintiff. Held, the lower Courts had the advantage of seeing and examining, for themselves, the account books and other books produced by the parties. Their Lordships not having had that advantage, it was unnecessary to go through those items one by one. As regards items 2 to 8, there were concurrent findings of the two Indian Courts, the question in each case being a pure question of facts to be determined on the evidence adduced. The last item related to the charge of interest on a certain mortgage held by the defendant against plaintiff, and there was difference of opinion in the Courts below. No direction was given by the plaintiff to the defendant to charge the amount of the mortgage against his current account and no objection could validly be made to the charge of the interest upon it until the plaintiff gave directions that the principal should be paid off. Finally their Lordships condemned the practice of swelling plaintiff. The mortgage-deed specifically recited that Bhola was owner of one-half of a holding held jointly by him with one Ishar his nephew, that out of his own share he mortgaged 54 kanals, giving specific numbers of certain fields and that the mortgagee had a right to effect partition with the mortgagor's co-sharer. At the time of the execution of the mortgage, Bhola had already made other alienations of portions of his share and consequently had less than 54 kanals free of encumbrances. Partition was never effected between him and his nephew. On the death of the latter Bhola succeeded to his share. After Bhola's death the plaintiff claimed possession as mortgagee of 54 kanals. It was contended for the plaintiff that he was entitled to have possession of 54 kanals of unencumbered land and Bhola having succeeded to the share of Ishar was bound to carry out his engagement which he was otherwise unable to do. Held that when a mortgagor alienates certain land to which he has no title and subsequently acquires a good title to it, he is bound to carry out the transfer, but, if he mortgages a portion of his own share of a joint holding, which he has already alienated, he cannot be compelled to make good the amount out of the other half-share to which he had subsequently succeeded. BABU RAI v. Mortgage—continued.—14.—Miscellaneous—continued.

Previous suit for rent against mortgagor, no bar to subsequent suit on mortgage.—A suit for sale, brought to recover the sum due under a mortgage-deed, by which some of the properties were usufructually mortgaged, while the others were merely hypothecated to the plaintiff, was dismissed by the lower Court, on the ground that the mortgage was a usufructuary one and a suit for sale will not lie, in the absence of a covenant for payment. As to the items in the deed merely hypothecated, there was nothing to prevent the plaintiff from suing for the mortgage-debt or for sale of the mortgaged property. He cannot split the mortgage, and so, in order that he may obtain his legal rights over the hypothecated items, he will have to be allowed to bring the entire property to sale inclusive of the items usufructually mortgaged. Decrees in previous suits for rent, instituted by the mortgagee against the mortgagors, for arrears of rent accrued due under distinct pattamchits executed by the latter at the date of the mortgage, cannot be taken to operate as res judicata, so as to preclude the former from suing and obtaining a decree for sale for recovery of the principal and interest due under the mortgage-deed. NANU v. (134)—Mortgage—Annulment of settlement of land mortgaged—Fresh settlement—Liability of succeeding proprietor under mortgage—Act XIX of 1873 (N.W.P. Land Revenue Act), ss. 43, 159, 165, 241 (f).—Under s. 159 of the Land Revenue Act, it is only so long as the farm or Kham management continues, as to land the settlement of which has been annulled, in consequence of the revenue having fallen into arrears, that all contracts made by the persons who, immediately before such annulment, were in possession of the land comprised therein, relating to such lands, are not binding on the Collector of the District, or his agent or lessee; but when the term of the farm and Kham management has ceased, and the land is made over to another person, not as a farmer, but as a proprietor with whom a fresh settlement is made under ss. 165 and 43 of the Act, there is nothing in the law, by which contracts made by such person's predecessor in title are not binding on him, just as they would be binding on his predecessor. And it is not for Civil Courts to enquire whether the subsequent settlement made by the Collector with a certain person has been legally made. S. 241 (f) of the Land Revenue Act bars such enquiry. Therefore, where, under the above circumstances, land under mortgage has been taken under Kham management after annulment of the settlement with the mortgagor, and is subsequently settled with the mortgagor's wife as proprietor, she must be held to represent such rights and interests as her husband, the mortgagor, possessed, and she is therefore liable to the mortgagee under the mortgage. BARI BAHU v. When a second mortgage is created in favour of a person, who is not the holder of the first mortgage, the second mortgagee is entitled to pay off the first mortgage. The defendants, who were near reversioners of Bhagwan Singh pleaded that the mortgage was effected without lawful necessity, and the mortgagor, being a sonless Jat, was not permitted by custom to make it. It was alleged by the plaintiff and denied by the defendants that a lawful marriage by Chadarandazi had taken place between the plaintiff and Bhagwan Singh, and that a son had been born to them, and who, and one Mussammat Sadan, the widow of a nearer reversioner, precluded the defendants from inheriting the lands. The Chief Court finding that the plaintiff had paid a portion of the mortgage-money, and without determining other questions raised by the parties, passed a decree in favour of the plaintiff to hold possession of the mortgaged lands pending re-payment of the amount that may be found justly due from the person or persons entitled to redeem. MUSSAMMAT INDAR KAUR v. HUKAM SINGH, 13 P.L.R. 1902.

(138)—Mortgage—Suit by puisne mortgagee—Material alteration by prior mortgagee—Effect of alteration.—In a suit brought by a mortgagee for the redemption of a prior mortgage and the sale of the hypothecated property, the fact that the prior mortgage-deed when tendered in evidence by the prior mortgagee

(141)—Suit on mortgage—Proof of consideration against mortgagor and subsequent transferee.—Where in a suit on a mortgage the mortgagor denied having received the full consideration but failed to give evidence in support of such plea as against the previous admissions he had made of such receipt, but, at the same time, the mortgagee failed to prove consideration beyond a certain sum as against a subsequent transferee of a portion of the hypotheca who put him to proof of the mortgage and the consideration, held that the mortgagor was entitled to the benefit of the finding of the Court in regard to the amount due as against the transferee and that a decree only for the lesser sum could be passed. JANKI DAS v. AHMAD HUSAIN KHAN, 25 A. 159 = A.W.N. 1902, 218. (3 A. 824, R.)
